

Mikva, Percy Show Edge In Campaign Dollar Battles

by ROBERT LAHEY

Winnetka attorney Samuel H. Young was badly outgunned financially by his Democratic opponent for the U.S. Congress in the early stages of the campaign, according to statements of campaign finances filed with the Illinois Secretary of State John W. Lewis.

Republican Young is seeking to unseat U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, now the congressman from the 2nd Congressional District, in the new 10th District.

Reports by the candidates for the first period, required under the new federal campaign disclosure law showed Young's campaign chest in the red by $5,482, while Mikva showed a balance of $17,134. During that period — from April 7 to May 31 — Mikva spent $12,636, compared to $11,167 by Young.

Financial reports of Sen. Charles H. Percy and U.S. Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, his Democratic challenger, also showed Percy with a financial advantage over Pucinski, although the challenger spent 50 per cent more during the period than Percy.

PERCY SHOWED a May 31 balance of $117,499 after expenditures of $43,152 during the eight-week period. During the same time, Pucinski reported expenditures of $65,256 leaving a balance of $57,248.

The statement filed by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, seeking reelection in the 12th Congressional District, showed expenditures of $3,056 and a May 31 balance of $7,158.

Crane's Democratic opponent, Edwin L. Frank of Hoffman Estates, filed certification of his candidacy with the secretary of state on the day the records were examined and no financial statement was yet available.

The largest single contribution reported by any of the candidates was $7,400, as fair market value for four automobiles supplied to Percy by the United Auto Workers Committee for Good Government.

Candidates are required to itemize only contributions over $100.

Percy reported $8,753 in unitemized

contributions. His largest personal contribution was $2,600 from Robert C. Ziebarth, an executive of Bell and Howell, of which Percy is former board chairman.

FIVE PERSONS contributed $1,000 each to the Percy fund during the eight-week filing period. They were Hope McCormick, Republican national committeewoman, Elizabeth Blair of Lake Bluff, Levering Cartwright of Wilmette, Chicago attorney Albert E. Jenner, and James P. Giles of San Marino, Calif.

Percy also received $2,000 from the National Republican Senatorial Committee, and raised $16,402 from "An Evening with Diahann Carroll," staged in April.

A personal report filed by Percy showed that he received an additional $1,478 from the senatorial committee for travel and newspaper advertising.

Pucinski's largest donations came from three contributors who gave $1,000 each to his campaign. They were Julius Mayer of Chicago; Harold L. Perlman of Chicago, and Ann and Walter Koziol of Antioch. Pucinski also reported receipts of $11,650 from a campaign event at Mill Run Theater.

Mikva reported five contributions of $1,000 or more. R. J. Levy Harris, Inc., of Chicago, contributed $2,364 during the filing period, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benton of Evanston gave Mikva $1,025.

CONTRIBUTORS of $1,000 each were Milton Shadur of Glencoe; the Illinois United Steelworkers of America; and the Chicago law firm of Devos, Shadur, Krupp, Miller, Adelman and Hamilton. David Mirabelli of Northlake contributed $500.

Mikva also reported receipts of $15,900 from a campaign dinner, and $1,270 from a May Cocktail party.

The only itemized contribution to the various Young committees was $900 from attorney David Vogel and his wife, Jodi. Total receipts of $5,635 reported by Young included loans of $3,500 from his personal corporation to the campaign funds.

Parks, Schools Studying Effects Of Big Project

Elk Grove Park District and school district officials are now studying the possible effects a proposed 13,000-person development will have on their districts.

Tracy And Lady Together Again

Six-year-old Tracy Rodger of Elk Grove Village greeted her "best friend" with a box of dog cookies yesterday when she was reunited with her 5-year-old Boxer dog named Lady, who had been missing for two days.

Tracy's mother, Marcia Rodger, said the dog disappeared from the family's backyard Monday while she and her two children were shopping.

"We were heartbroken when we came back from the store and found Lady gone," she said. "Tracy is going into Children's Memorial Hospital in a couple of weeks for open heart surgery, and this would have been a bad time for her to lose the dog she grew up with."

"When Tracy comes home after the operation she'll be limited in her activity, and if the dog wasn't around, I don't know what I'd do," Mrs. Rodger said. She said the delicate heart surgery will be a big shock to Tracy's system, and if the dog hadn't been found, she might have put off the operation until Tracy had gotten over the disappointment.

Mrs. Rodger said the dog was found only two blocks from their home by a man from Aurora who took it home with him. He read about the lost dog in a Chicago newspaper Wednesday and the family picked up the dog later that day, she said.

"We were elated when the man called that he had the dog," Mrs. Rodger said. She said they had offered a reward, but the man refused because he said he liked animals and Lady was such a nice dog.

53 Initial plans project a 10-year development covering 257 acres. A total of 6,402 multiple-family dwellings and 91 single-family dwellings will be constructed. Land will also be allocated for commercial, park and school purposes.

Most of the project lies within the Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 boundaries, though the part west of Rte. 53 is in Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54.

JACK CLAES, park district director, said copies of the proposal have been sent to members of the park board. However, Claes said the park district "just has one layout of the complex and members haven't had a chance to study it."

The park board will be meeting to discuss the development, but Claes did not know if a special meeting will be called. The park board's next meeting is July 13.

CLAES SAID he felt the complex "would set the pattern of community development for the future."

Dr. James Erviti, superintendent of Dist. 59, said it was "hard to say what the effect of the complex will be."

The school board had discussed the proposed complex several months ago, but did not have many facts available to it at the time. Erviti said the board will meet again on the proposal now that more information is available.

The proposal projects a total of 500 children being added to the school district's present population of approximately 11,600.

"We would rather not have more children," said Erviti. "But the increase won't do irreparable harm. It is not that many more children and the complex will increase the assessed land value."

Erviti did see one problem with the complex.

"We don't have a school building on that corner. We do have space in our other schools," said Erviti.

The school district will be placed in the position of either asking the taxpayers to build a new school while present schools have empty rooms or busing the children in the complex to schools throughout the district, said Erviti.

Elmhurst Rd. Traffic Lights Reconsidered

The Illinois Highway Department has agreed to reconsider partial funding for a $529,000 project to add traffic signals and turning bays at two intersections on Elmhurst Road in Elk Grove Village.

Village Mgr. Charles Willis said plans have been formulated to add the lights and turning lanes at Pratt Boulevard and Greenleaf Avenue.

He said the state once turned down the request on the grounds the safety factor did not justify the cost of the turning bays in addition to lights. However, the village still maintains that turning bays are needed, and the state has agreed to reconsider the village's request.

Part of the money for the improvements would come from TOPICS (Traffic Operation Program to Increase Capacity and Safety), a transportation funding program of the federal government. Under the program the federal government would bear 50 per cent of the cost with local and state governments splitting the remaining half.

Willis said state approval is needed before the project request can be submitted to the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads.

Elmhurst is a county road maintained by the state within the jurisdiction of Elk Grove Village.

Laubenstein To Coordinate Reelection Panel

Vernon Laubenstein, Schaumburg Township supervisor, has been named Schaumburg coordinator for the Illinois committee for the Reelection of the President.

Laubenstein, 125 Westover Ln., Schaumburg, is a native of Fredonia, Wis.

He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Schaumburg Township GOP and has been a precinct captain since 1965. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Twinbrook YMCA and ex-officio member of the township Mental Health Board and the Committee on Youth.

This Morning In Brief

The State

A federal appeals court barred Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley from moving in Illinois courts to reinstate 59 delegates ousted by the Democratic Party's credentials committee from the party's national convention. . . . Daley forces temporarily abandoned efforts to obtain a state court injunction forbidding the seating of a rival delegate group, but their attorneys vowed to fight on.

The trial of Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 codefendants in the Black Panther case was postponed for five days so a defense attorney could take a vacation. . . . Hanrahan's lawyers had asked a three-week delay, contending they had not received all information due them from the prosecution. Circuit Court Judge Philip Romiti denied that motion.

The World

A flash fire swept a newly renovated ward in a Sherborne, England, mental hospital, killing 30 of 36 male patients who were too severely retarded to flee through an unlocked door.

American chess challenger Bobby Fischer apologized for delaying the start of the world championship chess match with Russian Boris Spassky, but a demand from the Soviet chess federation threatened to cancel the 24-game series. . . . The Soviets demanded that Fischer forfeit the first game.

Newly elected Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka said his government's foreign policy would be based on maintaining strong relations with the United States.

The Nation

The administration called in two dozen grocery-chain executives for some tough talk on the rising cost of food, the first of three sessions ordered last week by President Nixon. Similar meetings are set for today with farmers, food processors and wholesalers.

A 23-year-old Buffalo, N. Y., college student surrendered nearly three hours after stabbing his estranged wife and her boyfriend, then holding his infant daughter hostage at knifepoint and boarding an empty 707 jetliner demanding to be "flown out of the country."

The government gave the Boeing Co. permission to sell $150 million worth of 707 commercial jets and spare parts to Communist China. Negotiations have been going on since April and may take many more months before a contract is signed.

The War

South Vietnamese paratroopers and tank crews recaptured most of the provincial capital of Quang Tri City from the North Vietnamese. In the air war, the U.S. command said American fighter-bombers made 320 raids over North Vietnam Tuesday, the most strikes in a single day since June 27. The command refused to comment on Communist reports that one U.S. F4 Phantom jet was downed near Hanoi.

Firm Sells Safety

Industry Hazards Are Disappearing

by JOHN MAES

Mine Safety Appliances Co. started out in the World War I era making basic products for safety in mines when canaries in cages were still used to detect dangerous gases.

Today, more than 50 years later, MSA markets more than 4,000 lines of safety equipment for industry besides mine safety products and operates more than 100 branch offices around the world including Europe, Africa, India and the Far East.

"Recent trends toward work safety have greatly increased our market," said Al Lundin, manager of Chicago area office which operates out of Elk Grove Village at 370 Bond St.

"For instance, there isn't much of a mining industry around the Midwest so almost all the products we distribute from here are for industrial safety."

Gary, Ind. steel mills use MSA-built work helmets able to withstand the impact of molten steel along with gas, and carbon monoxide indicators able to detect noxious gases down to one part per billion.

FIRE DEPARTMENTS also have employed use of MSA breathing aids such as oxygen masks and respirators along with firemen's helmets, fireproof suits, and first-aid kits.

"Our company developed adhesive bandages long before Johnson and Johnson (the firm that makes Band-Aids) did," Lundin claims.

Factories also are utilizing the company's products and have purchased huge quantities of protective clothing, headwear and gloves. Also included in MSA's inventories is a barrier cream which protects hands against acids and harmful chemicals, and ear plugs which prevent hearing damage from excessive noise.

"It was always an accepted truth," Lundin said, "that people who worked around punch-presses and other high noise areas would become deaf after a while. Earplugs have put a stop to that."

Recent noise abatement legislation protects workers from being exposed to noise levels exceeding 90 decibels for more than eight hours.

Also, many construction companies use MSA hard hats made of polycarbonate plastic which can withstand the force of a blow from a two-pound hammer. These hats are also used by Texaco Oil Co. and Chicago & North Western Ry.

THE MINING industry, however, has by no means been forsaken by the company's progress in other areas.

During the recent mining disaster in Kellogg, Idaho, MSA representatives went immediately to the area to help coordinate shipping by plane of emergency supplies such as breathing aids and rescue equipment.

MSA also once developed a special harness to rescue a man trapped in a West Virginia mine.

"It won't be long before we develop special escape vehicles to suit this purpose," Lundin said.

In other areas of mine safety, gas detectors have replaced the canary in the cage. Miners are now equipped with gas masks and respirators to protect them from toxic mists and dust. Some breathing aids have alarm systems on them to warn the worker to leave a hazardous area and reach fresh air before his oxygen supply runs out.

They also have developed a foam spreader that can extinguish a fire in a matter of seconds.

Lundin said the Federal Occupational Safety and Health Act passed in 1969, which outlines safety procedures industry must follow for their employees, has had a tremendous effect on MSA's market.

"NOT ONLY DO we manufacture more now," he added, "but all our products must meet certain quality standards."

The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH), a federal agency, must approve all safety equipment before it can be used or sold. MSA submits samples of all their safety products for NIOSH approval, Lundin said.

As federal safety standards become even higher, mines and industry will become safer places to work.

"Workers have been neglected for a long time," he said. "More legislation and better safety products are making it easier for them, though."

Correction

Yesterday's Herald incorrectly stated that Chief White Eagle would appear at Osborn Park in Elk Grove Village last night. Chief White Eagle is appearing this evening. The rest of the schedule was correct as listed.

BOOKS ARE NOT THE only materials available at the Schaumburg Township Public Library. New children's librarian Bonita Balingall selects a suitable record for a youngster. Although the library is in the midst of moving to its new departments, story telling, theater and summer reading clubs for children and other services are still available.

'Perfect Job For A Ham'

The Librarian Is a 'Bunnie'

by JERRY THOMAS

Turning into an old witch or warty frog is easier for Bonita Balingall than living up to the old stereotype image of the small town librarian.

"Bunnie," as she prefers to be called, is the new Schaumburg Township Public Library children's librarian. The blonde, blue-eyed miss confesses she has a bit-of-ham personality and insists she needs it to do her job.

"A librarian's job is more than checking out books. It involves program development, story telling, drama, playwriting and practicing and teaching many forms of self expression. It's a perfect job for someone who's got enough ham in him to enjoy turning into an ogre or witch if it gets the story across," Bunnie said.

"TODAY'S LIBRARIAN is not the retiring, bookish, no-action person many imagine when they are introduced to a librarian," Bunnie said.

She confesses she likes to give herself the title of director of children's services when she meets a man in her International Village apartment.

The new librarian likes apartment life even if she is "squeezed" into a one-bedroom apartment after living in a nine-room house in Anderson, Ind. Bunnie confessed her apartment looks about the same as the library building now being constructed.

"Most of my things are still stuffed in cartons and when I get to my office I find cartons here, too, since the library is in the midst of moving into its new offices," she said.

In the Schaumburg library Bunnie deals mostly with young children, but is also developing programs for junior high students.

EDUCATED AT BALL State University, Bunnie did undergraduate work in speech and drama and received a master's degree in library science. She was a graduate assistant in film services at Ball State, acting children's librarian at the Anderson Public Library and worked as librarian in the Pendleton Middle School before coming to Schaumburg.

Bunnie hopes to start a film-making group and a creative drama club for young people. The new building's theater should be a perfect setting for plays, she added. A radio program is also planned.

The librarian is excited about the vitality of the area and points proudly to the fact that on May 31 the children's library had a record circulation.

A summer reading club Bunnie started doubled in its membership after its first meeting. "The only way you know if a child enjoyed a program is if they come back," said Bunnie.

THE LIBRARIAN, a very positive person, admitted one of her pet peeves was negative people.

"I'm a hypnotist and think that hypnosis is not more than talking to yourself positively," she said.

For fun, Bunnie likes to read and swim and said it's sunning more than swimming she enjoys. She is an arts and crafts enthusiast, and finds projects to use up the bags of papier mache and things she has piled around her apartment.

Her favorite food could be Chinese, but she loves to try a new recipe each time she cooks.

"I don't like to feed a man's ego but if he's an interesting person who is sufficiently self assured and I'm motivated, I'll cook for him, but I'm not the domestic type," said Bunnie.

The librarian makes all her own handbags and calls her craft just a little bit of self expression, something she believes every one should do. She believes her job gives her additional opportunity for self expressions.

"That's why I love it," she said.

Howard Pyle To Address Businessmen

Howard Pyle, president of the National Safety Council, will address a luncheon meeting of the Elk Grove Village Association of Commerce and Industry at noon, July 12, at the Navarone Steak House, 1905 Higgins Rd.

The former White House aide and two-term governor of Arizona will speak about the impact of federal and state occupational safety and health legislation on business.

"These statutes have profound meaning for every business, yet few businessmen really understand the law and its interpretation," said Jim Gibson, executive secretary of the Elk Grove Village association.

"We hope Mr. Pyle can clear up some of the misunderstanding and, most important, motivate our members to implement applicable sections of the statutes in their businesses, if they have not already done so."

Non-members are invited to the luncheon. Tickets are $6, including tax and tip, and may be obtained from the association office at 25 Park and Shop, Elk Grove Village.

Future Of Area Airport Is Questioned

by PAT GERLACH

What is Schaumburg Airport today? What might it become in the future?

Located on a 175-acre tract south of Irving Park Road, the field contains a 2,500 by 50-foot bituminous surfaced runway and serves as home base for about 100 small aircraft — all single or twin-engine planes.

The largest aircraft now using the field is a Beech 18 weighing 9,700 pounds.

If plans for a regional transportation center proposed for the village materialize, it could eventually be expanded to accommodate larger, heavier propeller driven aircraft and small business jets.

Schaumburg Airport could also become a one-stop shopping center for both aircraft and all allied accessories.

... a source of increased employment, greater tax revenue and additional thousands of dollars brought into the community.

OR, AS ITS owners originally envisioned, it could become the southernmost part of Centex-Schaumburg Industrial Park.

Developed in 1959, the site was purchased by its present owners in 1965 who then planned to permit an airport operation until the adjacent industrial park opened.

Since Schaumburg village fathers have displayed an interest in maintaining an air facility and are even considering a municipal operation, the 16 members of a land trust ownership have, at least temporarily, abandoned their original plan.

Thus far, only three principals in the trust agreement — Jack Pritzker, a Chicago attorney and philanthropist, Marshall Bennett, of Bennett and Kahnweiler, managing agents of the industrial park, and William Lambert, who has extensive land holdings in the area — have been identified.

Management of the field was turned over to Schaumburg Airport, Inc. in March, 1970 and since that time talk of expansion has increased.

That corporation consists of Simon Zumamon, a Chicago CPA, who serves as president; Kenneth B. Wolmer, vice president and general manager; and James Dana, a broker with Bennett and Kahnweiler.

WOLMER, HOWEVER, is the only member of the corporation active in management of the airport and is responsible for policy making decisions.

Schaumburg Airport, Inc., which runs the airport, is a Piper dealer, both selling and servicing new and used aircraft.

The corporation leases hangars and tie-downs as well.

The Airport Lounge, a restaurant overlooking the runway, and Lloyd Flying Service, complete present leased operations at the airport.

Wolmer believes that Schaumburg Airport could become a suburban facility similar to Meigs Field on Chicago's lakefront.

"I feel that we could definitely go with a 4,000 foot runway now provided it is expandable to at least 5,000 feet in the future," he says.

The Meigs runway is 3,710 by 150-feet, a single landing strip, which can accommodate small jets and prop-jet airplanes.

Wolmer definitely does not favor consideration of a north-south strip in addition to the east-west runway at Schaumburg "simply because the site is not wide enough."

The field is bounded by Irving Park Road on the north and Milwaukee Road Ry. tracks on the south.

"The airplane is a tool of modern business and industry and industry locates where it can use this tool," the airport manager says.

ACCORDING TO Wolmer, two companies that have decided to build in the adjacent industrial park — Acc'U'Rite of Schiller Park, and Sackett Co., of Chicago — are locating there because of proximity to the airport.

By Federal Aviation Administration standards, 21,000 transient aircraft land at Schaumburg each year bring in about $315,000 of new money into the village.

"This is money we wouldn't have in Schaumburg if we didn't have the airport because in addition to paying real estate tax, we produce tax revenue in the form of sales, excise, income (state and federal), and Social Security tax to just hit the highlights," Wolmer claims.

He is convinced this revenue would be greatly increased by an expanded airport operation.

What could result, Wolmer believes, from the larger field, plus the aircraft supermarket, which is his brainchild, would at least equal revenue coming from Woodfield Mall.

Opposition, so far on a small scale, does exist within Schaumburg and several nearby communities and could increase before the project is launched.

But, in the beginning, some area residents doubted that Woodfield Mall would ever actually be built.

Results of an expansion feasibility study, coupled with public opinion expressed in hearings should determine the fate of the airport within the next 12 months.

Hanrahan Trial After Vote?

by ROGER CAPELLINI
A News Analysis
The trial of Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan possibly could be delayed until after he seeks reelection Nov. 7, as a result of a five-day delay granted yesterday.

The continuance until Monday, granted by Criminal Court Judge Philip J. Romiti to Defense Atty. Thomas Sullivan, opened the door to possible future delays in the trial of Hanrahan and 13 codefendants.

The 51-year-old state's attorney and the 13 others were indicted by a special county grand jury April 21, 1971, on charges of conspiring to obstruct justice by falsifying evidence following a raid on a Black Panther apartment.

During the raid, which occurred during the early morning hours of Dec. 4, 1969, two Panthers, state chairman Fred Hampton and organizer Mark Clark, were killed by the raiders who shot their way into the apartment on Chicago's West Side.

Codefendants with Hanrahan are former Asst. State's Atty. Richard Jalevec and 12 Chicago policemen: John Mulchroone, John P. Meade, Edward Carmody, Daniel Groth, Joseph Gorman, John Ciszewski, James B. Davis, Raymond Broderick, William Corbett, George Jones, Charles Koludrovic and John Sadunas.

THE POSSIBILITY of further delays in the trial arose when Sullivan, representing Jalevec, requested a short continuance, explaining to the judge he had been involved in a lengthy trial in a federal court and needed a rest.

The judge granted the delay, which established a legal point as a major consideration.

Jalevec demanded a speedy trial Feb. 3, which means, under Illinois law, that he must be brought to trial within 160 days — or by July 12. If he was not brought to trial within that "term" Jalevec would have been freed.

In recent weeks Judge Romiti has denied requests for continuances by several other defense attorneys, presumably because if he granted such requests Jalevec would have had to be freed.

By requesting the delay, however, Jalevec broke his "term," which will start again Monday and run for 160 more days — well into December.

Now it will be up to Judge Romiti to decide whether to grant any further continuances — to Sullivan or any one of the seven other defense attorneys — since he is no longer legally bound to bring Jalevec to trial by July 12.

THE TRIAL could extend beyond the Nov. 7 election date, however, only if the attorney representing Sadunas and Koludrovic is granted a continuance before Sept. 3. Those two Chicago policemen demanded a speedy trial March 27, beginning their 160-day terms which end Sept. 3.

While it is not certain if any of the defendants will request further continuances, an indication to that effect was made yesterday. At that time Camillo Volini, one of Hanrahan's three attorneys, unsuccessfully requested a three-week delay, contending he has not yet received all the information due him from the prosecution.

The trial, once it begins, is expected to last at least two months since the prosecution plans to call some 100 witnesses.

'Strikes, Lockouts Not The Answer'

by LEA TONKIN
"Strikes are not the answer to our problems," says a Northwest suburban carpenter involved in the three-county construction shutdown.

He's locked out at an area construction site by a contractor member of the Mid America Regional Bargaining Association (MARBA).

At the same time, his union, the Chicago District Council of Carpenters (Cook, Lake and DuPage counties) is enforcing a strike against contractors who have not signed a new one-year agreement.

"Agreeable men should be able to reach an agreement," continues the Arlington Heights carpenter. He can't understand the reasons for a lack of give-and-take in contractor and carpenter demands in the current dispute.

IF THE STRIKE continues, many construction workers' families will have to seek welfare or food stamp aid, he says. "I've seen these strikes before," adds the carpenter. "The wives will have to go to work if this continues, to support the family." An official at the Food Stamp Certification Office for Cook County notes that there already has been a large increase in food stamp rolls because of the construction strike-lockout.

Even the construction tradesmen who still are on the job suffer in the construction shutdown, reports a Rolling Meadows carpenter. "I feel that I shouldn't be working if the other carpenters in the union are not working," he says. "But I don't want to hurt the small contractor, either."

The Chicago District Council of Carpenters reports that more than 1,600 independent non-MARBA contractors have signed agreements for a new one-year contract. Their construction projects are not affected in the strike-lockout, which has shut down an estimated $1.5 billion in Chicago area construction.

Approximately 100,000 construction workers are idled in the labor dispute between MARBA and the Chicago District Council of Carpenters. The strikelockout also affects members of the Cement Masons Local 502, with over 2,000 members in Cook County. The total number of out-of-work construction tradesmen includes 75,000 persons honoring picket lines or whose work has run out due to the shutdown.

WORK RULES, wages and retroactivity continue as major issues in the dispute according to contractor and union spokesmen. No formal bargaining sessions were slated as of late Wednesday afternoon.

Until this year, the Chicago District Council of Carpenters has bargained with five contractor groups. These groups are now among the 14 organizations included in MARBA. They are Builders Association of Chicago, Residential Construction Employers Council, Illinois Road Builders Association, Underground Contractors Association and the Lake County (Illinois) Contractor Association. The carpenter union refers to MARBA representatives as "strangers" at the bargaining table.

Just Politics

by Bob Lahey

State Auditor Michael J. Howlett has named State Treasurer Alan J. Dixon as his campaign manager for Downstate Illinois in Howlett's bid for secretary of state against Republican Edmund J. Kucharski.

The alliance is a likely one between the two Democrats who have led their party in vote-getting in counties outside Cook in recent years. Dixon was elected treasurer in 1970, after 20 years in the state legislature, carrying more counties than any other Democratic winner.

If Howlett is elected secretary of state, he could provide strong support to Dixon in future campaigns. Dixon is known by his friends to have ambitions for the governor's office and may seek the Democratic nomination in 1976. He was widely regarded last year as a possible choice for the U.S. Senate nomination, but made no overt bid for it.

MANY ILLINOIS legislators are quick to point out there is no proposal for legislative pay raises before the General Assembly, which will return on Nov. 26 — after the election — to clean up vetoes and other matters.

But word persists that a proposal will be made. It is difficult to figure a better reason for the extraordinary action by which the lawmakers approved appropriations for salaries of state officials for only six months of the current fiscal year.

As it stands now, all elected and appointed officials will be paid only until Jan. 1, 1973. So the legislature will have to make an additional appropriation in its post-election session. And nothing forbids it from raising salaries.

Rep. Thomas Hanahan, D-McHenry, caused some consternation in the House in the final hours of the legislative session last Friday night when he asked the speaker to instruct the doorkeeper to lock up the voting switches of absent members.

Hanahan repeatedly had asked Blair to instruct representatives to "keep their hands off other members' switches" — and Blair repeatedly praised the worthiness of that suggestion, without issuing any such order.

Throwing the switches of colleagues is time-honored and universally practiced in the House, and it raises objection only on close votes, which were standard in the hours before adjournment.

So Hanahan's suggestion presented a threatening precedent.

Blair responded, rather weakly, that "I'm not sure we have all the keys," and a number of legislators immediately converged on Hanahan for a whispered conference. He made no further request and Blair quickly moved onto other matters.

THE NORTHWEST suburbs were the beneficiary of $5.85 million in bills passed by the legislature this year, the

10 Join Marines On 'Buddy Plan'

Ten young men from four area suburbs are beginning basic training with the United States Marine Corps this week — together.

The men joined the Marines under the new "Buddy System" that enables them to go through the Corps together. They were all recruited by Staff Sgt. Gerald Herdzik, who has just completed four years of recruiting with the Marines. Sgt. Herdzik said recruiting these 10 men was the highlight of his tour at the Des Plaines office.

The 10 young men are: Michael Villamure, Edward Leister and Philip Woult, of Arlington Heights; Robert Dziszuk and Joseph Wiedemann of Buffalo Grove; Mark Kuhn, Paul Helfers and David Beardsley of Des Plaines and Joseph Kiepora of Northbrook.

760 Lose Lives On Highways

A final count of accidental deaths in the weekend Fourth of July holiday showed 760 fatalities on the nation's highways, well short of the minimum estimate which safety counselors had made in advance.

A preholiday estimate from the National Safety Council had put the traffic deaths at between 800 and 900, and John D. Lawlor, executive vice president of the council, said, "We are very gratified that the figure is so low compared with the estimate we made."

The final count by United Press International in the holiday which began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight Tuesday gave this breakdown of accidental deaths:

Traffic 760
Drownings 211
Planes 14
Other 82
Total 1,067

California reported 77 highway deaths, Texas 69, New York 37, Michigan 36, Missouri 32, and Ohio and Florida 30 each.

largest sum in any single year, according to Schlickman.

The bulk of that figure is the $5 million for a motor vehicle testing center planned for a site north of Palatine, now awaiting approval by Gov. Ogilvie.

Also approved by the legislature was $500,000 for additional classrooms for School District 26 to help it accommodate students from Maryville Academy; $180,000 for flood control work on MacDonal Creek; $100,000 for Salt Creek; and $80,000 for flood-control work in the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area.

Personality Spotlight On Edward V. Hanrahan

By United Press International

Cook County State's Attorney Edward V. Hanrahan has fought his indictment in the Black Panther case the same way he wages all battles — with everything he's got.

Tenacious and frequently abrasive, he stomps out of court when a decision goes against him, but soon returns to make his point from another angle.

Though he employs a firm of attorneys to defend him in the Panther case, he argues all important motions himself, and has left court shouting at opposing counsel. Hanrahan, unlike many lawyers, appears to take every defeat as a personal insult, a characteristic he also displayed in other phases of public life.

He has several pet hates, and it is rare he faces a television camera or makes a public statement without mentioning one of them. He despises street gangs, judges who impose sentences he considers too lenient, and newspapers and reporters who do not agree with him.

HE KEEPS DISPLAYED in his office the names of jurists who have incurred his wrath, and has spent much of his time in the state's attorney's office prosecuting and going after street gang members. He once barred a local newspaper reporter from a news conference.

These characteristics have made Hanrahan a hero to many Chicagoans, especially law and order advocates, but have earned him the enmity of liberals and some moderates. Hanrahan considers himself a liberal, which he defines as a strong advocate of individual rights.

He can, however, display charm and wit when he chooses. A graduate of the University of Notre Dame and Harvard Law School, he often opens conversations with literary references.

He is a favorite among the local Democratic precinct workers who turn out votes en masse during elections. Many of them reportedly worked for him in the March 21 party primary, even though party leaders had dumped him from the slate because of the Panther indictment.

A LONGTIME PROTEGE of Mayor Richard J. Daley, Hanrahan has been in Democratic politics in Chicago since he was graduated from Harvard in 1948. He translated Japanese in the Army Signal Corps during World War II.

In 1955 he was appointed a lawyer for the city, ran unsuccessfully for Congress in 1960 and was appointed an assistant Illinois attorney general in 1961.

In 1964 President Johnson appointed him U.S. attorney for northern Illinois where he served until 1968 when he was elected state's attorney.

Though he once told a reporter he does not consider his present job "the end all and the be all" Hanrahan has gone to considerable trouble to keep it, bucking even the mayor.

In the March 21 primary, lacking the backing of the party organization, he brought his wife, Geraldine, and two of his brothers in to work for him. Even his four children helped.

Some political experts have suggested Hanrahan is interested in Daley's job. If he clears his name in the Panther case, and wins reelection in November, the experts say he might be a contender.

The Doctor Says

By Dr. E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Can smoking cigarettes cause one's heart to skip a beat or feel like it stops and starts real quick and hard. It sometimes feels like a nerve quivering. The same feeling as when a nerve in your arm or leg jumps, only in your chest over your heart. It seems a lot harder and sometimes hot flashes and a sweat occur after this skipping occurs. The feeling is really hard to explain. Also can smoking cause hard breathing.

I have had chest X rays, electrocardiograms and blood work, but they can't find out what is causing this so the specialist I saw said it must be my nerves and smoking. I smoke a pack a day, sometimes more. I have tried to stop smoking but failed. I have been smoking for about seven years. I am 21 years old and the doctors say my heart is perfect. It really scares me when this skipping takes place. It doesn't always happen every day, yet sometimes it can happen a couple of times a day.

Dear Reader — You are describing what many people call skipped beats of the heart and which are usually early contractions of the heart. As long as the heart beats right on time, a person is not apt to notice the heart beat, but if you have one beat early, there is a long pause that allows the heart to fill with more blood than usual. When all of this blood is pumped out with the next beat, it gives you the jarring feeling that you are complaining about. Very often people who complain of this problem do not have any evidence of heart disease. In fact, as I have mentioned before in this column, I saw a lot of apparently healthy pilots and even some astronauts who had these early beats. When they are mild and not frequent they won't be noticed.

I do know that they can cause severe symptoms and make a person feel extremely uncomfortable, even though they may not be life-threatening or indication of a serious problem with the heart.

SOME OF THESE are made worse by anxiety. The hot flashes and the sweating and the changes in the heart beat that you describe all suggest that you may have a problem with anxiety. The reason for this, of course, is not apparent in your letter, but it can cause these kinds of complaints. Anxiety is usually associated with fear of some impending event or fear that something is going to happen.

Smoking cigarettes aggravates anxiety and can cause the heart to be more irritable and cause the symptoms that you have. So can excess coffee and indigestion. You should stop smoking, stop coffee (you can substitute one of the caffeine-free products if you wish), and start a good general exercise program. I have seen a lot of people overcome this problem by gradually increasing their exercise capability.

Ask your doctor to check your thyroid function. If you continue to have these problems, despite stopping tobacco and coffee and starting a moderate exercise program, you should see a psychiatrist and see if he can help you with anxiety-provoking situations in your life that may be aggravating your problem.

Scouts Slate Summer Weekend Camporees

A sneak preview of what Scouting is all about presents itself to those 10-year-old Webelos Scouts who will participate in one of three Webelos Camporees being conducted this summer by the Northwest Suburban Council of the Boy Scouts of America at Camp Napowan, located east of Wild Rose, Wis.

Jerry Anderson of Park Ridge and co-chairman Ed Ziegler of Des Plaines said that Webelos Scouts and their dads attend a weekend Camporee together, experiencing selected Scout-type activities and living in "Scout Camps." The week-ends of July 8-9, July 22-23 and Aug. 5-6 have been selected for "Gateway to Boy Scout Adventures" Camporees at Camp Napowan. Reservations are made through each Webelos Scout's Cub Pack to the Scout Service Center, according to Scout executive Arthur J. Allen. Each Camporee weekend has a capacity of 300 Webelos Scouts and their dads.

Following an opening ceremony, a Scout Skill adventure trail highlights the first afternoon of activity. Swimming, canoeing, fishing, axmanship, archery, nature camp style meals, religious services in camp and an evening campfire are other program features awaiting the participants. Complete information can be secured by contacting one of seven district chairmen:

Signal Hill — Ed Dowling, 830 Warwick, Barrington (381-5561); Pathfinder — Bill Burrow, 7101 Edgebrook, Hanover Park (298-1399); Sauk Woods — Den Evans, 3807 Wren Lane S., Rolling Meadows (259-4846); North Star — Dave Oeming, 7 Chenault, Buffalo Grove (541-3875); Algonquin — Walt Wieser, 47 N. Fifth, Des Plaines (824-7089); Maine

Ridge — Ray Shurson, 6940 Keeney, Niles (966-4459), and Skokie Valley — Dick Holzkopf, 5435 Howard, Skokie (965-3719).

Selected camp staff members will work with Anderson and Ziegler along with the district chairmen as the camporee staff. Staff Advisor for the event is Algonquin district executive Roger B. Kapp.

You Can Stop Rust Before It Starts

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

The great Houdini is remembered for his many tricks of magic but few people know that he also was quite a magician at the bridge table. Here we see him sit East and make an easy three-spade contract vanish into thin air.

It wasn't really hard for the master of illusion.

South won the first trick with the ace of clubs and led a heart to dummy's jack. Houdini dropped the four-spot and South went about the business of taking a losing spade finesse.

West took his king and led a second club. Houdini was on lead. He cashed his ace of hearts and led a third club. West ruffed with his eight of trumps and led a third heart.

It didn't matter that South had discarded dummy's last heart on that third club lead. Houdini's 10 of trumps was higher than dummy's six.

How many tricks had vanished into thin air? Just two!

If South had simply played ace and another trump when he was in with the ace of clubs the defense would never get to ruff anything, anywhere.

Why didn't South play safe at his conservative contract? Don't ask us. Even Houdini couldn't find a reason.

Do-It-Yourself

weathered the winter with no apparent trouble will show signs of rust before cold weather returns. Garden tools suffer the added indignity of being left out overnight or sometimes for days on end and, if rainfall doesn't get them, a heavy dew will.

Rust can be removed but prevention is better, easier and more sensible. Especially susceptible are items made of iron. Remember that rust comes about when metal comes in contact with another element — water, moist air or even another metal of a different type.

PROTECTION of metal items indoors is principally a matter of preventing excess moisture in the air. Provide ventilation. Vent excess moisture to the outside, using exhaust fans in kitchen and bath. Make certain clothes dryers are properly vented.

If you dry clothes indoors ventilation is very important. Consider the use of an electric dehumidifier if air is particularly moist. Most basements will benefit by the presence of one.

Tools, especially those that are stored in the basement, should be coated with a light film of oil. This can be easily wiped off when the tool must be used. An oily rag in a well-sealed metal can is useful for wiping a fresh film of oil on the tool.

A light coating of wax can be used in some areas as on the table of a power saw.

Appliances in the basement should be checked frequently. Rust generally forms close to the bottom or at the seams.

OUTDOORS, CHECK metal lawn furniture and children's toys. Sand rust spots to bare metal. Use a good rust preventative primer.

Metal gutters are another victim of corrosion. The rust will cause a yellow stain, not only on the gutter but down the side of your house.

Joints and edges are the likeliest spots for rust to start. Scrape, sand and prime with a rust preventative paint. Then finish with the right color.

When putting up gutters or making repairs make certain you use nails and accessories of similar metal — aluminum for aluminum gutters, etc.

Collecting Coins

by Mort Reed

The American Revolution Bicentennial Commission has announced that an official Bicentennial Philatelic-Numismatic Combination issued on the Fourth of July, 1972, is through the cooperation of the U.S. Mint, the U.S. Postal Service and the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission.

The PNC First Day Cover includes the first metal of an annual series of congressionally approved National Commemorative Medals, as well as the 1972 set of Bicentennial Commemorative Stamps on a Philatelic-Numismatic Combination envelope.

The medal, described in an earlier Money Clips column, will be enclosed behind a plastic window in the PNC envelope displaying both sides of the medal. The four stamps affixed to the envelope bear the official U.S. Postal Service First Day of issue cancellation. The Treasury seal will appear on the back just opposite the window for the reverse of the medal.

As illustrated in the artist's conception, the eight-cent Bicentennial Stamps, which will be postmarked from Colonial Williamsburg, Va., will honor craftsmen of the Revolutionary era.

WITH A JULY 4 cancellation date, the stamps are of the normal commemorative stamp size and each depicts a specific craftsman — glassmaker, silversmith, wigmaker and hatter. Each of the four eight-cent stamps bear the same inscription, "Colonial American Craftsman" across the top and "United States Postage 8 Cents" across the bottom.

The medal, for issuance initially on July 4 (and to be made available as a single piece later in 1972) will be made of bronze measuring approximately 1 1/2 inches in diameter. The obverse and reverse designs were more thoroughly described in a previous column. The design was developed by Ralph Menconi and Frank Gasparro, chief engraver for the U.S. Mint in Philadelphia.

The mint will issue a limited number of these First Day covers not to exceed two million. Orders will be accepted during July only or until the maximum issue has been reached.

FREE PNC ORDER BLANKS

For the convenience of our readers, we asked for and received an ample supply of official order blanks and descriptive literature from the office of the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission Coins and Medals Panel to be distributed to anyone sending a 9-inch or 10-inch stamped, self-addressed envelope to Money Clips, c/o Mort Reed, P.O. Box 555, Wooster, Ohio, 44691.

A limit of three PNC First Day Covers may be secured with one order blank. No more than two order blanks will be available for each stamped, self-addressed envelope received by this column. You may request more with each additional envelope.

The deadline will be July 20, after which it would be fruitless to attempt to order the PNCs from the Mint since processing will not extend beyond July 31.

Social Security and You

Q — I LIVE OUT in Inverness and it seems all Social Security offices are in Chicago. Isn't there an office closer that I could go to?

A — Yes, a new Social Security office opened July 3 in Arlington Heights to serve your area. It is open 8:45 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. each weekday except national holidays. The other areas served by this office are Buffalo Grove, Palatine, Inverness, Prospect Heights, Rolling Meadows, and Wheeling. The address is 120 W. Eastman, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60004 — turn north off the Northwest Highway just west of Colonel Sanders Kentucky Fried Chicken in Arlington Heights.

Q — I PLAN ON retiring next year and I would like to have some idea of what I'll be entitled to receive each month from social security. Since I can't take a day off from work to come into the office can I get this information some other way?

A — You can call our Social Security Service Office and they will complete a benefit estimate card over the phone and in a few weeks this information will be sent to you. Just call 239-7000.

Q — WHEN I RECENTLY became 62, I was told by the people at the social security office that I needed one more quarter of work to be eligible for monthly payments. I now have an opportunity to work in a friend's store, but the work will only last for 4 weeks. Do I have to work a full 3-month calendar quarter to get the credit I need?

A — No. As long as you are paid at least $50 in wages in any part of a calendar quarter, you get credit for the whole quarter under Social Security.

Q — MY 20-YEAR-OLD son, who has been getting social security payments since his father died, was recently awarded a full scholarship. Since the scholarship pays all his school expenses, will he still receive social security payments?

A — Yes, your son will continue to receive student's benefits. His scholarship does not in any way affect his monthly social security payments.

McGovern's First-Ballot Hope Fades

by BRUCE BOSSAT
WASHINGTON — Hurt by a decision cutting his delegate total in California, Sen. George McGovern has lost strength for the first time since his rise toward the Democratic presidential nomination began. The fifth and final NEA-National Observer delegate count places his newly estimated potential at 1,574½ votes, or four votes fewer than the 1,378½ given him in the fourth count early in June. Since 1,509 votes are needed for nomination, the senator stands 134½ votes below the winning mark.

What checked McGovern's upward spiral and sent him downward was the ruling of the convention credentials committee, meeting in Washington, which took away 151 of the 271 delegates he had captured June 6 in California's winner-take-all primary.

He was left with just 120 from that state, while Sen. Hubert Humphrey and other McGovern rivals were given delegates in proportion to their share of the primary vote.

THE EFFECTS of this blow go well beyond California. The momentum McGovern got from that victory and a later triumph in New York was moving additional strength his way every day. Some of that is solid and stays with him. But some is not.

In the revised estimates that followed the California decision, McGovern is judged in this fifth NEA-Observer survey to have lost another 58½ votes that clearly were flowing his way from the ranks of uncommitted delegates and from a weakening Sen. Edmund Muskie.

Had nothing reversed this tide, the indications are McGovern was headed for a first-ballot nomination at Miami Beach with perhaps 75 votes more than the needed 1,509.

Unless the ruling is reversed by court action or by the convention itself, McGovern hereafter may find himself in severe difficulties. If the impact of the California case is widespread it might translate into still further delegate losses. But there also is a chance of the opposite happening. If he can portray the ruling as unfair and improper, and mount a counterattack on moral grounds, he might win sympathy among the delegates and get back on a winning track again.

THE NET consequences of the changes is to boost the delegate count for second-place Humphrey to 566, the highest level he has ever reached in these surveys. Gov. George Wallace, paralyzed but still planning to attend the convention, moves up a bit to hold a strong third place with an even 400 delegates. Muskie rebounds slightly to 210.

These and others join in the action which hurt McGovern. At the delegate level in the field, they and many party regulars who have challenged or disliked this candidacy failed to muster the votes to stop him. They obviously saw the California challenge in the credentials committee as their big opportunity.

This final survey turned up some very stubborn resistance to the South Dakotan. Some of it is based on wide convictions that he would lose to President Nixon and drag many other Democrats down with him. Some exist because he is judged "too radical" in his proposals for tax and welfare reform and defense cuts.

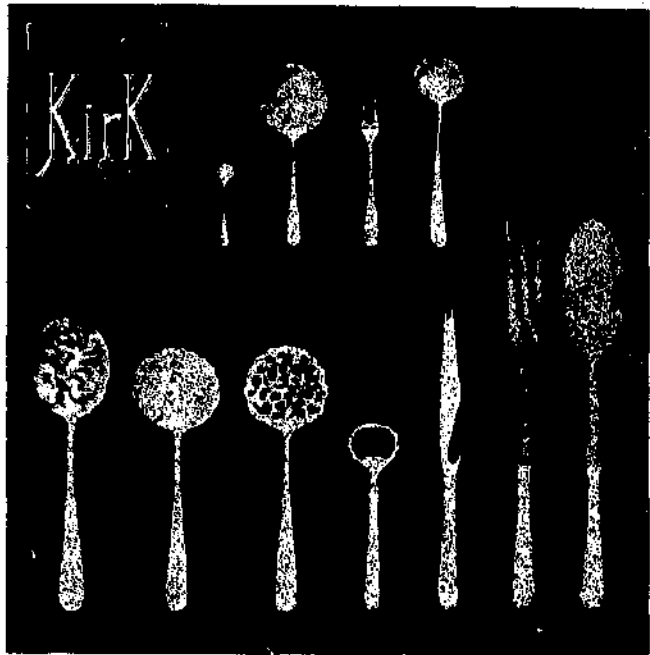

But many regulars simply are bitter at what they consider arrogant strong-arm tactics which they say McGovern's forces often used to get delegates. Such hostility has to be heard to be believed.

Yet few of these resisters seem to think Humphrey or Muskie can make it. They appear to have no ready substitute for McGovern.

Des Plaines May Not Have To Pay A Cent

Funds Available For Bus Purchase

If the City of Des Plaines decides to purchase the United Motor Coach Bus Co., it could receive enough federal and state money to fully pay the purchase cost, according to the city's recently-hired transportation consultant.

Preliminary findings from a six-week study indicate federal and state funds could be used to purchase United Motor Coach buses, land and buildings, and to finance planning for the new bus system, according to the Chicago-based consulting firm, Ernst and Ernst.

The preliminary report, made public after Herald presstime Monday, also states the funds could be used to purchase a totally new bus system, if the city decides it does not want to purchase United Motor Coach.

As an alternative, Des Plaines, through its mass transit district, could purchase new buses and equipment, and lease them to United Motor Coach as a way of keeping that financially-troubled company in operation, the report indicates.

THE BUS company was offered for sale to the city last December. The cost was most recently set at $630,000 for the company's buses, land and buildings at its Des Plaines headquarters, 900 E. Northwest Hwy. Company debts have been estimated at $300,000 by Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel.

At his weekly press conference Monday, Behrel indicated that no city council action on the proposed purchase would occur until after the full Ernst and Ernst study is completed, sometime in late July.

The report is expected to contain recommendations on what would be the most financially feasible and practical city action to keep the bus company in service. The company serves the north and northwest suburbs.

According to statements from Ernst and Ernst the study will examine three alternatives. The city could continue to supply grants to keep the bus company in operation, it could purchase the company and let a management firm operate it, or the city's transit district could buy the company and operate the bus service with district-hired employees.

ACCORDING to the 12-page preliminary report, "if a private transit company is to be acquired, the federal and state capital grant programs could be used to finance the purchase that would be required."

While private ownership of a transit system does not eliminate the possibility of federal and state grants, public ownership by a city or district would be the easiest, fastest way of obtaining available funds, the report states.

The available grants could provide funds to purchase new or used transportation systems, including buses, land and buildings as well as planning and management studies.

The report states that if "a decision is made not to acquire the private carrier, the district or city could apply for a capital grant for the acquisition of new buses and other equipment." These assets could then either be leased to the private bus company or operated by the city or district.

THE CONSULTING firm examined grant fund programs under the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964, as amended in 1972; the Illinois Mass Transportation Grant program of 1971 and programs under the federal Department of Transportation and Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The report indicates the federal government will pay up to two-thirds for purchase of a bus company, and the state will pay up to two-thirds of what remains, with a possibility that the remaining funds could also be supplied by the state if necessary.

The federal government also will pay most of the planning costs. The state also will reimburse a public bus company for reducing its fare for students.

3-Year-Old Girl Is Latest Victim In Assault Series

A 3-year-old Des Plaines girl was sexually assaulted in her home early yesterday by a man who climbed through her bedroom window. It was the third such attack in Des Plaines during the last few months.

According to police reports, the parents of the child said they were awakened by their child's screams at about 1:30 a.m. They told police they ran to the girl's second floor room where they found her on the bedroom floor. The room's window was open.

Police said the intruder removed a screen to enter the room and set it outside. He apparently escaped out the window before the parents entered the room.

On April 27 an 8-year-old Des Plaines boy was assaulted in his home after a man broke into the house, entered the boy's bedroom and brought him into the living room where he was assaulted.

On June 26 a similar incident took place when a man broke into the Des Plaines home of an 8-year-old girl by climbing through a second floor window. Police said the man entered the girl's bedroom and brought her down a ladder and assaulted her in the back yard.

Des Plaines police Capt. Dale Munsch said police are continuing an intensive investigation into the assaults. Police said the same man may be involved in all the offenses.

Help Offered In Proving Age

"A birth or baptismal certificate recorded before age 5 is generally needed to establish age for Social Security benefits," according to Cornelius R. Schafer, district manager of the Northwest Social Security Office.

The time to secure the record is before you need it. "Everyone applying for retirement benefits or Medicare must establish his date of birth with Social Security," Schafer said. "A birth or baptismal record is needed for children, aged widows, and young disabled workers benefits," he added.

If you do not have a birth or baptismal certificate that was recorded before you were 5 years old, you can call 239-7000 for assistance in securing the necessary record, whether you were born in the United States or a foreign country. If there is no record of your birth, a baptismal record may be available. If you were baptized before you were five years old, just write to the church where you were baptized.

"In the event neither record can be secured, contact any Social Security office for assistance in obtaining the necessary evidence to establish your correct date of birth. A representative will be happy to assist you," Schafer said.

Veterans' News

Veterans disabled from military service may find it cheaper to buy a specially equipped new car this year than it was two years ago. John B. Naser, director of the Chicago VA Regional Office advises. Naser explained those who purchased a car with special adaptive devices since January 1, 1971, may find they have money coming from the Veterans Administration.

This reminder was issued by the Veterans Administration to call attention to new VA authority contained in Public Law 91-606.

The 1971 law raised the amount of the VA grant for purchase of a car to $2,800, and for the first time gave VA authority to pay for replacing and maintaining adaptive equipment on automobiles previously acquired by disabled veterans of World War II and the Korean Conflict.

TO BE ELIGIBLE a veteran must have suffered the loss, or loss of use, of one or both hands or feet or both eyes in the military service.

Such items as power brakes, automatic shift, hand dimmer switch and hand controls are among provisions of the law.

Veterans should contact their nearest VA office or a veterans service organization representative to expedite payment of their claims under this provision.

Death Penalty Deserved Ban

It is with relief and hope for the future that we greet the recent Supreme Court declaration that the death penalty as presently administered in this country is unconstitutional.

This newspaper long has argued against the death penalty and has expressed its distaste for the barbarous inhuman act out of place in any civilized society.

We long have felt that however immoral was the very existence of such a penalty, it was made even more heinous in that it served no real purpose and was administered in a discriminatory and capricious manner.

While it has been clear for some time the penalty serves in no way as a deterrent to crime, it has been equally obvious the black the poor and the male are far more likely to be sentenced to death than the white the rich and the female.

But probably the most cruel and inhuman aspect of capital punishment has been society's practice in recent years of allowing condemned men to dangle for years on death row never knowing whether or when they will be led out of their cell and be put to death.

Governors in recent years have been reluctant to enforce it. At the same time juries more often than not have chosen not to impose it, lending credence to Justice Thurgood Marshall's statement that the penalty is "morally unacceptable to the people of the United States at this time in their history."

Yet the penalty has remained on the books.

And despite the recent decision of the high court there is reason to believe state legislatures could take action to retain capital punishment in their respective states.

The indications from legal experts are that the court merely outlawed present capital punishment laws without ruling out the legality of possible future death penalties.

The Supreme Court seems to have said such a penalty would be constitutionally appropriate if it would be mandatory for all persons convicted of prescribed offenses.

Such action by the Illinois legislature we feel would be inappropriate from both a legal and humane viewpoint.

Capital punishment is an expensive, cruel and senseless ritual which dignifies neither the criminal nor the system. For too long has this society engaged itself in the contradiction of justifying homicide for the state while condemning it for the citizenry. It is degrading to a supposed civilized society and provides no means of rehabilitation of prisoners — a cornerstone of our penal system.

We encourage state legislatures to ignore and disregard this vehicle for vengeance and allow the death penalty to die in Illinois.

Such an expiration, without any attempt to use the varied opinions of the Supreme Court justices to breathe new life into this abhorrent practice could represent a turning point in American justice and perhaps in the national attitude toward violence and punishment.

It's Up To Consumer

Could it be the confused consumer needs a batting coach to sharpen his swing at buying the groceries?

After much initial kicking and screaming and cries that "the cost will run us" supermarkets across the country are now displaying unit prices for many or all foods on their shelves.

Unit pricing when its use began to spread in all sizes of food stores slightly more than two years ago, was heralded as another home run for consumerism. Much behind-the-scenes jawboning by consumer advocates and vote-hungry politicians went into the promotion of this aid to better buying.

The basic idea is to provide a sound method of comparing the prices of, say, two items by their volume to select the better buy. However, a recent survey reveals that someone is dropping the ball as far as unit pricing in practice is concerned.

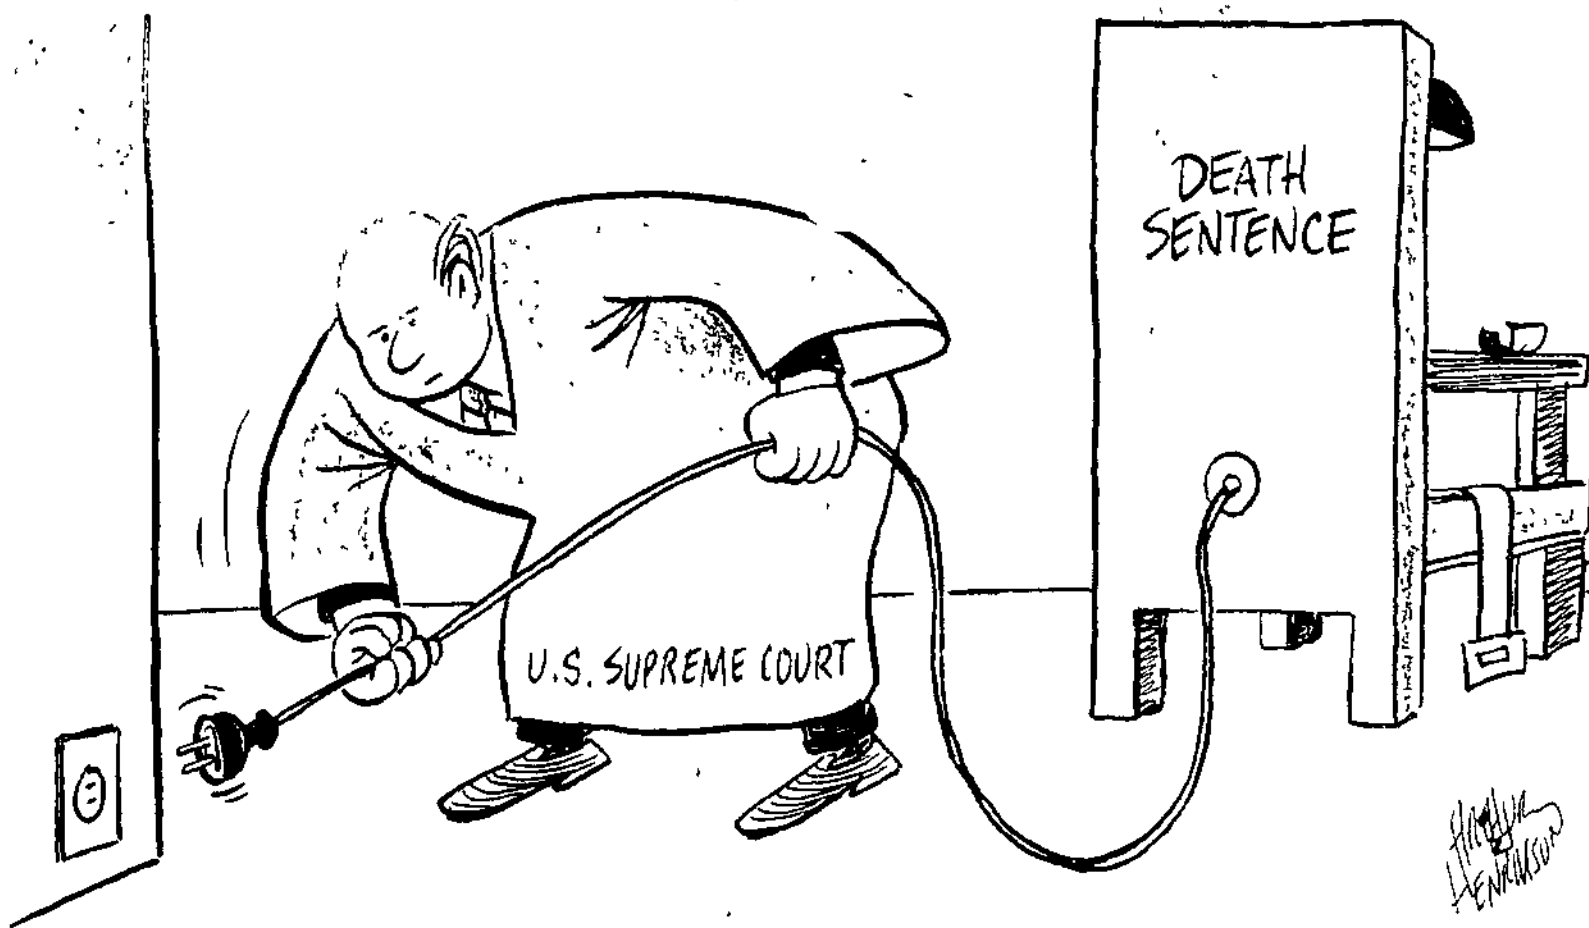

Who is to blame? It is generally agreed that the disinterested consumer contributes more than his share to the current ineffectiveness of unit pricing. What excuse may a consumer offer while complaining about the mounting weekly food bill when he refuses to utilize what can be a money-saving aid available in so many stores? Many women, for example, say they do not have time to read the tags that list the prices. Others cling to normally more expensive products because of brand names and refuse to sample other foodstuffs with unfamiliar labels.

But there is a problem in unit pricing. This is the legitimate complaint of consumer specialists who point out that many stores make the computerized print-out tag a jumble of numerals difficult to decipher. If, as surveys show, stores that heavily promote and explain unit pricing to their customers have the highest usage response by its customers, then more stores should be encouraged by their shoppers to provide such information in a clear, understandable and accessible manner.

It all boils down to the fact that the key to making unit pricing work to aid the family food budget rests with the consumer. The food stores have thrown the ball and it is up to the individual consumer to swing his own bat.

Pulling The Plug

Bob Lahey's Column

'Amateur' In Name Only

It has been called the Year of the Amateur in politics.

The McGovern Commission reorganization of the Democratic National Convention will result in 84 per cent of the delegates to that august body convening next week being people who have never seen the inside of a convention hall.

In Illinois, the mind-boggling gerrymandering of legislative districts and resignations of work-weary legislators left openings for legislative office which have drawn hundreds of first-time candidates into the campaign.

During the holiday campaign, I spent a pleasant evening with the guy who must be the most amateur of the amateurs at the many levels of government in Illinois.

He has already gotten himself elected to office, and is in the midst of the first 100 days of his term.

For example, a 26-year-old insurance agent, holds the lofty office of Board of Education member in a small town, a metropolis of something over 1,200 souls in Bureau County, near LaSalle-Peru.

I had seen him a few months earlier when a candidate for the school board was being sought by both sides in a 3-3 factional split to replace a retiring seventh member and gain the balance of power.

In the grand tradition of Eisenhower, McCarthy and Kennedy, he held him self aloof until the last minute. When the last minute arrived he was approached by representatives of one of the factions, asking that he submit his name to the people.

He accepted his destiny.

The problem of gathering nominating petitions — though the deadline was at hand — caused him no great effort or expense. He confided that nominating petitions had already been in circulation for some time, although they had contained the names of at least two other candidates before they were converted to his benefit.

He also gained the dedicated effort of a certain teacher who was the center of the most heated debate in town at the time. Three members of the school board were engaged in a concerted effort to have her fired. The other faction was equally dedicated to "awarding" her tenure, though she already had it, and destroying the minutes of all the controversial meetings at which she had been alternately attacked and defended.

She campaigned for the commissioner.

The petitions were completed and he enjoyed a leisurely campaign with no opposition.

At his very first meeting, the very first item of business was the question of the status of the teacher. The three members of each faction cast their party line votes, and the roll call came to the Commissioner.

In a stroke worthy of Metetrnich he vaulted himself into a position of power and influence on the School Board. He abstained.

This threw all sides into consternation.

Bob Lahey

Later that night he was subjected to a bitter tirade on the telephone by the teacher's husband who so exhausted himself in calling the commissioner names that his wife was forced to take over for another 40 minutes or so.

The school principal was appalled that the Commissioner had evaded his duty. People who voted for him on the assumption that he was on their side excommunicated him.

None seemed to accept his chiding of the other members of the board that the controversy was one of long standing that he had had no involvement in it that they had evaded a vote on a touchy matter for weeks before the election and they should have settled it themselves a long time ago.

The matter is lying dormant at the time. But on all issues the Commissioner is in the driver's seat.

"It's great!" he exulted. "On every vote three guys vote one way and three guys vote the other way. Then it comes to me. What I want, I get."

This is an amateur who grasped very quickly the way the game is played.

He also has come to a basic conclusion about how people are elected.

From the time he allowed his name to be placed on the petitions until he was sworn into office not one voter — NOT ONE PERSON! — ever approached the Commissioner to ask him how he felt about the controversial teacher or any other issue.

"The voters deserve me," he declared. The Commissioner is clearly destined for the governor's mansion.

Columnist Calls Him 'Buttinski'

Readers Defend Mayor Meyer's Stand

EDITOR'S NOTE: The letters on this page respond to a column written by Ken Kozak, a Rolling Meadows Herald staff writer. Kozak charged that Roland Meyer, the mayor of Rolling Meadows, was a "buttinski" for criticizing the District 15 school board for firing a teacher. Marie Duffy Kozak defined "buttinski" as "anyone who stuck his or her nose into someone else's business."

This is a letter to Mr. Ken Kozak, a writer for the Rolling Meadows Herald on the City Beat article.

Don't you think you are the pot calling the kettle black in calling our fine Mayor Roland Meyer a demagogue and a buttinski?

Ever since Rolling Meadows has been in existence the Herald has stuck its nose in our (Rolling Meadows) affairs.

Every time you (Herald) got a Rolling Meadows editor who said some nice things about our town for a change they've mysteriously disappeared from your staff. It seems you just can't stand the fact that we in Rolling Meadows stick up for our own people including our fine Mayor Meyer.

Being of Polish ancestry I didn't realize where the word buttinski came from. But if this is buttinski, I say let's have more of it.

We in Rolling Meadows reserve the right to make our decisions about our Mayor, we are not of sub-standard intelligence that we need someone to make them for us.

Paddock — we don't need you, we have never needed you, and we never will need you.

Mrs. Donna Breschek
Rolling Meadows

You hit the nail on the head, Ken Kozak, when you called the Mayor of Rolling Meadows a "buttinski." That he is! But my interpretation of a buttinski is a little different from yours.

Our Mayor hears of a boy in the neighborhood who needs a job. This "buttinski" tries to line one up for him. Our Mayor learns of unfair treatment of a teacher and he does what he can to help her. I know of many people who have trouble with their property — they casually mention these things to Mr. Meyer and before you know it there is someone out from the city to look the situation over and rectify it.

Our Mayor doesn't just preside at meetings, make speeches, etc. — He takes a personal interest in the people of Rolling Meadows. I'm glad he's a "buttinski" and I'll bet the majority of the people in Rolling Meadows are too!

Mrs. Herbert Sander

Semantic games can be fun! Roland Meyer has recently been called a "but-

'Socialism Must Govern Us'

The political gunman has again made his appearance upon the American political scene. The shooting of George Wallace has again placed politics in the United States on the level of the so-called "banana republics." We are indeed living within the shadow of the would-be political assassin. The question which presents itself is how can we put an end to this phenomenon?

As long as the attempt is made to preserve an obsolete capitalism, American society will be plagued with more violence, more social chaos, and more attempts to resolve social grievances with a gun. The Socialist Labor Party contends that the path to social peace and domestic tranquility lies in the peaceful abolition of capitalism and the implementation of bona fide Socialism, i.e., Socialist Industrial Unionism.

linski" because he has the ability to lead. He is articulate and can back up his statements with documented facts, statistics and personal research. In short, he cares and he acts. Indeed a "deplorable tactic."

A man who does not get involved in community affairs because he is too busy with family or personal problems or lacks public speaking qualities or is taken back by the overpowering bureaucracy of various boards is called apathetic.

A reporter with obvious aspirations at being a suburban Mike Royko, who admits to the possibility of error and/or judgment on the part of some of our policy boards but can find nothing more controversial to report than the fact that the Rolling Meadows mayor attends meetings as a private citizen and a public official, is, at best, a sophomoric essayist.

I hate to see the day when we silence our "buttinskis," leaving the "apathetic" at the mercy of omnipotent boards supported by a press that is great on adjectives but low on practical solutions. That's the day we all become "sheep."

EDITORIAL: A look at the Illinois income disclosure law.

Business Today

BY BERNARD BRENNER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — In what is now an annual ritual, the House has voted an increase of more than a quarter billion dollars above administration proposals for conservation subsidies, rural electric loans, and grants to help small towns build water and sewage systems.

The action came as the House last week approved and sent to the Senate an appropriation bill covering Agriculture Department spending for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Among the items tucked into the multi-billion-dollar bill was $225.5 million for use next year in the Rural Environmental Assistant Program (REAP), for which the administration had asked only $140 million. Rejecting the White House proposal, which represented a cutback from this year's $195.5 million, the House approved the $225.5 million figure in two installments.

FOR TRADITIONAL conservation and environment-protection practices on farms and ranches, the bill carried $195.5 million for cost-sharing REAP payments covering part of the cost of approved practices. In addition, the measure appropriated $30 million to the Environmental Protection Agency, but directed transfer of these funds to the Agriculture Department for use in the REAP program. The $30 million will be used for payments on animal waste storage and disposal facilities needed to combat pollution.

Under this year's program, cost-sharing payments to farmers for animal waste projects have been taken out of the regular REAP fund; under the proposed 1973 program, they will be a separate, additional part of the REAP spending plan.

On top of the $85.5 million increase over the administration's $140 million proposal for REAP aid to farmers, the new spending bill included increases of $107 million above White House requests for rural electrification loans and $42 million more than President Nixon asked for rural water and sewer system grants.

The combined increase over administration proposals on the three items was $234.5 million. In recent years, Congress had frequently exceeded administration proposals on these items and the administration has frequently refused to spend part of the appropriated money.

Dividend News

National Tea Co.

The board of directors of National Tea Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 20 cents per share payable Sept. 1 to shareholders of record Aug. 11.

Clearing House

Directors of Commerce Clearing House, Inc., declared a second quarter cash dividend of 5 cents a share, payable July 26 to stockholders of record on June 30.

The quarterly cash dividend rate of 5 cents a share on the increased number of shares outstanding following the 100 per cent distribution of additional shares of common stock on April 28, is equivalent to the 10 cents a share rate paid for the first quarter on the shares outstanding prior to the stock distribution.

Cost Of Sales Calls Hits New High

The average cost of an industrial salesman's call hit a new high of $57.71 in 1971, according to a survey sponsored by "Sales Management" magazine and McGraw-Hill Research.

This is 17 per cent higher than the average cost in a comparable McGraw-Hill study in 1969 and an increase of 90 per cent in 10 years.

The average cost of an industrial call rose 14 per cent from 1968 to 1970 but only 2.7 per cent from 1970 to 1971.

The McGraw-Hill survey of industrial marketers included 449 companies. In a companion study among 46 consumer goods manufacturers, "Sales Management," a Bill publication, found the average cost of a salesman's call was $32.84 in 1971. This was also a record high, the magazine said.

Allen Cobb Jr., McGraw-Hill's director of research, said the average cost figure should not be used as a basis for comparison with an individual company's cost.

"THE ACTUAL COST of a sales call varies from industry to industry," he said. "The overall average is useful in gauging the increases, and the average cost has been going up steadily since the 1940s when we began these studies. Many companies use the data in planning new marketing strategy and sales practices."

The average cost of a call also varies according to the size of the sales staff, as might be expected. In the new study, for example, the average sales call for a company with fewer than ten salesmen cost $63.90, while the figure was $45.18 among companies with more than 50 salesmen.

Asked how they were holding sales costs down, companies surveyed mentioned cuts in entertainment most frequently. "Better management control" and reduced travel were next, closely followed by stoppage of first-class air travel. Only half as many companies mentioned changes in salesman compensation as mentioned cuts in entertainment budgets.

Mutual Fund Industry Needs Leadership: Exec

The mutual fund industry is going through some massive changes that demand strong leadership from within, according to Julius Jensen III, chief executive officer of Continental Investment Corp., Boston, Mass.

Continental Investment is a national financial services and real estate-oriented company managing assets of over $4 billion.

"The fund industry can — and will — successfully turn the corner toward a brighter future. The key to making that turn and for bringing investors back into mutual funds is a return to the fundamental approaches of investment management," observed Jensen, who is also chairman of the United Funds, Inc. and United Continental group of mutual funds managed by Waddell & Reed (a CIC subsidiary).

MANY AMERICANS, he emphasizes, have been concerned by the lack of performance by mutual funds over the past two years, a difficult period for the stock market.

"Their concern is not totally warranted because funds historically are a good way for a family or individual to build up assets over a long period of time," he said.

"Mutual funds are equity savings programs, just as savings accounts and life insurance policies," Jensen said. "Some people apparently were expecting too much of the funds. For the short-term, some investors were unrealistic. Historically, a conservative stock portfolio in a mutual fund has always grown — as the nation grows. This, of course, is a long-term comparison with other available types of savings programs," Jensen said.

FIRE KILLS

Did you know that someone's home catches fire every thirty-seven seconds in this country? That over 11,000 people lost their lives as a result of fires in the home in 1970? That 90% of the products of combustion are invisible and contain deadly gases and that is why smoke kills more people than flame? In the light of these facts, what can you do about the safety of your loved ones in case of fire?

One thing you can do is to teach them basic protection before the fire starts. Contact ADT for a free "planning kit" to assist you in: (1) preparing a fire escape plan; (2) how to instruct your family in correct fire escape procedure and (3) how to conduct your fire escape drill.

Another thing you can do is to discover the fire early by installing a product of combustion detector which will alert you to the danger while there is still time to escape. This detector is self-contained with its own battery supply and sounding device and detects the invisible gases and microscopic particles that are given off at the very beginning of a fire.

These detectors are small, attractive in appearance, easy to install and inexpensive. A demonstration can be arranged by calling:

As the gas war continues, some area drivers are cashing in on price fluctuations.

Chicago's Gas War Tops In Midwest?

by LEA TONKIN

Those gasoline price wars in the Chicago metropolitan area and Milwaukee are bumping Detroit from its longtime position as the worst gasoline price market in Mid-America.

From the consumer's stand this may be good news. He can shop for bargain pump prices on a regular basis, knowing prices will come down just as surely as they go up in the successive rounds of the price wars.

Dealers and oil companies are feeling a profit pinch, however. A high turnover rate among service station owners and the poor profit showing of major oil companies are good indicators, says Herbert Hugo, industry expert. He is the Midwest bureau chief for Platts Oilgram, a daily petroleum industry publication.

"Costs are up in the industry over the past year," Hugo says. "Profits were disappointing for the first quarter of this year for the oil companies and will probably be about the same for the second quarter. The competition of course is keeping the prices down."

"CHICAGO AND Milwaukee constitute the worst gasoline markets in the interior of the U.S.," Hugo adds. "Detroit, with an average price level of 33.9 cents a gallon for regular gasoline, is only 2 cents below normal prices of 35.9. Normal price there is lower than in Illinois for example, because the taxes are less. But Detroit, which for a long time had the lowest prices, has improved."

The attempt by a handful of major oil companies to restore pump prices to normal levels in the Chicago metropolitan area "completely fell apart last Friday," Hugo says. "By Saturday morning we had the lowest price levels in 10 years."

Retail price cuts of 5 to 7 cents a gallon below the normal pump price of 40.4 cents a gallon on regular gasoline are common in the Chicago metropolitan area. In some areas, gasoline prices are slashed 9 cents below the normal price.

ONE YEAR AGO, gasoline pump prices in the Chicago metropolitan area averaged only 2 cents below normal levels, or 38.4 cents a gallon. According to Hugo, the continuous price wars are pushing prices down to "ridiculous" levels, since the gasoline supply has dropped 6 per cent from the levels of a year ago.

As the competition between oil companies spurs on the price wars, the majors often subsidize their dealers by offering price supports. Dealers pay 30 per cent of the difference between the current price and the normal price, and the oil companies pay 70 per cent of this amount.

Suburban Living

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

BOUNTIFUL BUCKETS OF YARN line the walls of "The Stitchery," Anna Bedford's new shop at 58 Broadway, Des Plaines. Wearing the knot-stitch stole which she crocheted, Mrs. Frank Cooper of Arlington Heights chooses a pattern for her next handiwork project. The little shop is brimming over with a wide range of distinctive designs and supplies for knitting, crochet, needlepoint, crewel and other types of embroidery.

Anna's New Needlecraft Shop

Adventures In Yarn At 'The Stitchery'

by ELEANOR RIVES

There's bewitchery in stitchery as many a northwest suburban woman will admit, but top-quality supplies, distinctive designs and individual instruction are not always that easy to find.

Anna Bedford's new little shop, "The Stitchery" in Des Plaines, is a welcome addition to the yarn shops already in the northwest area.

Located at 58 Broadway (just off Cumberland Circle near the Fahey Medical Center), "The Stitchery's" walls are lined with 225 plastic pails lying sideways, each amply supplied with yarn of a different color, texture or size. The color spectrum includes soft pastels, glowing sherbet shades, clear true hues, tweedy mixtures, even earthy tones.

ON DISPLAY in the shop are finished samples of crocheted and knitted items, crewel and other embroidery work, needlepoint and, under glass, a 65-year-old handmade white doily which belonged to Mrs. Bedford's grandmother and a framed picture of anemones embroidered in wool, which her aunt made 45 years ago.

Anna and Donald Bedford came to Mount Prospect from Johannesburg, South Africa, 19 years ago with their first three children. Three more were born here, and Anna found herself immersed in youth-oriented activities. In 16 years of adult Girl Scouting, she served as leader, organizer, consultant and neighborhood chairman.

Her PTA activities took her from president of Central School PTA to secretary and vice president of the Randhurst Council to president of the Coordinating Council of Mount Prospect PTAs.

WHEN ANNA was only nine years old, her aunt gave her her first sewing hoop, encircling her young life with a fascinating new interest — embroidery. Anna has been in stitches of one kind or another ever since. For the past 1½ years she has taught crochet classes in District 214's adult evening school and for the Mount Prospect Park District. She also assisted with evening knitting classes. Browsing through yarn shops has been one of her favorite pastimes.

"Every time I stepped into a yarn shop," said Mrs. Bedford in her British accent, "I thought, 'I wish I had my own shop!' But I never dreamed I would do it."

It was after her husband's death last year that Anna decided to go into business. "I didn't know anything about a small business," she said. "But I made up my mind to investigate the whole thing."

FIRST SHE sought legal advice from the Small Business Administration in Chicago. Then she visited wholesalers to help decide how much to invest in the initial inventory. In between, she visited every yarn shop she could track down in this and adjoining areas.

"The Stitchery" opened May 8 of this year. The store sign, a needlepoint labor of love, attests to Mrs. Bedford's craftsmanship and persistence for it took hours and hours of work.

She has stocked her store with unusual, distinctive crochet patterns, some of which she and her daughter, Paula, picked up in England and South Africa when they visited there in April. An assortment of Danish tapestries and Count Thread Embroidery Kits are available. A group of artist-made, 3-dimensional pictures is displayed on one wall. The remaining store space is taken up with tote bags, knit stands, knitting needles, pouches, embroidery thread, hoops, needles, hooks — you name it, she has it.

AND THE ROUND table with six chairs — now a convenient spot to help customers solve any "knotty" problems — will serve very nicely in the fall for small classes in crochet, knitting, authentic crewel and other embroidery. Macrame materials will be available. Rug hooking, too, is in the fall picture, and Anna is hoping to stock Rya rug kits from Norway.

Mrs. Bedford is delighted with the current worldwide crochet craze, a craft that boomed in popularity about two years ago when crochet buffs began switching to yarn instead of thread. Before that, yarn was usually limited to afghans — but now, with proper patterns and hooks, it is transformed into vests, ponchos, dresses, suits, shrinks, tank tops and hats.

ALL THE CROCHET work displayed in the shop was done by Anna, her daughter or her daughter-in-law, Narelle Bedford, whose enthusiasm almost equals that of Anna. Narelle, who studied merchandising at Southern Illinois University, helps with the book work, relieves Anna in the shop and keeps one step ahead of the latest trends in needlework.

You can meet Anna Bedford, or perhaps Narelle, at "The Stitchery" Tuesday through Saturdays from 10 a.m. till 5 p.m. and Thursday evenings till 9. In the fall, on special dates, you will also be able to meet needlework craftsmen who from time to time will be invited to show their original designs.

If you don't see Anna at first glance, look around. You'll probably find her quietly and contentedly stitching away at some new piece of handiwork.

AN AVID STITCHER herself, Mrs. Bedford offers advice and assistance to any customer who requests it. The picture of wildflowers which she is embroidering was designed by her daughter, Heather, and when completed will be displayed in the shop along with other finished pieces.

Fraud Division Is There To Protect The Consumer

by MONICA WILCH

"You mean the Attorney General takes an interest in the consumer?"

The incredulous question came from an elderly gentleman, when confronted by energetic Barbara Mitchell of the Illinois Attorney General's Consumer Fraud Division (CFD).

The CFD's shiny, red mobile unit was parked in the mall at Randhurst, and Barbara, along with Marcella Heintz, was handing out literature and explaining to shoppers what the CFD can do for them.

"Yes, indeed," Barbara replied to the gentleman. "If you buy some merchandise, or make any kind of sales transaction, and the merchandise is defective, or is never delivered — whatever the problem may be — the Consumer Fraud Division of Attorney General Scott's office can help you."

"YOU JUST CALL us and fill out a complaint form, and we'll give it to our attorneys. They will investigate the situation and either get your money back or replace the defective merchandise."

"And it's free." The few people who are aware of the CFD, according to Barbara, think that it will cost them money to pursue a dealer in a case of fraud. So, they simply sustain the loss and become a few degrees more cynical for their experience.

Many more, however, have no idea that there is any recourse available to them.

"No, thank you, I'm not interested," "I gave at the office."

Totally unaware of what the inscription on the mobile unit meant and of what Barbara and Marcella were trying to tell them, these men and women hurried by, assuming the literature held out to them was just more political propaganda or another fund drive.

"HOW CAN THEY not be interested?" Barbara demanded, half despairing, half angry. "We're here to help them. And everyone is a consumer."

This being the case, everyone is at one time or another the victim of fraud.

While automobile complaints comprise over 50 per cent of the problems handled by CFD, home improvement fraud is second, accounting for 25 to 30 per cent, Barbara said.

"Chimney shakers" — you know, the guys who come around to your house and tell you your chimney is wobbling and should be repaired immediately or it will collapse. Then, they offer to do the job — for an extraordinary price.

"The catch is that all chimneys shake a little. That's normal."

THIS PARTICULAR racket is almost limitless in possibilities. The perpetrators of such fraud typically offer homeowners a "free inspection" of their furnaces, boilers, hot water heaters, roofs, etc., at which time they put a slit in the furnace or tear some shingles off the roof and then tell the unsuspecting resident he needs repairs.

In any kind of door-to-door sales, whether it be home improvements or magazines, the Illinois Consumer Fraud Act provides for a 3-day "cooling off" period, during which time the buyer may cancel a contract of $25 or more, without further obligation and with full refund of any down payment.

Another business producing a fair amount of fraud, according to Barbara, is that of appliance repair, including items such as TVs and stereos. As in the case of auto repair, the common trick is to perform repairs unauthorized by the customer, thus increasing what would have been a modest repair bill to astronomical proportions.

IN SUCH CASES, after CFD attorneys have reviewed the complaint, it is turned over to a hearing officer for a decision. He may reduce the bill, or even demand that unnecessary new parts be removed from the appliance.

During the one year that the north side branch of CFD — where Barbara and Marcella are located — has been in operation, it has handled 1400 complaints and made adjustments amounting to more than $420,000 in savings to consumers.

The office, located at 4750 N. Broadway in Chicago, has jurisdiction from Duversey to the Illinois-Wisconsin State line. It employs three attorneys, along with interviewers, researchers and others. Although a proposal to add a Spanish-speaking mobile unit to the program was defeated by the state legislature, the office employs a Spanish-speaking interviewer and has literature written in Spanish. There is also a Greek-speaking interviewer.

SINCE ITS PASSAGE in 1961, the Illinois Consumer Fraud Act has become a model for other states as well as for the federal government. Its coverage of consumer fraud is comprehensive and its powers broad. While the CFD first offers businesses involved in a complaint an opportunity to make amends — because a lot of apparent fraud is really unintentional — the law does provide for legal restitution. The CFD can enjoin a firm from doing business or from continuing fraudulent advertising.

The division has, in the 11 years of its existence, uncovered fraud in unbelievably diverse places — dancing lesson offers, reducing programs, computer dating and mail order sales, to name a few. Too many people, Barbara said, are afraid or ashamed to call the CFD with what they may think is a silly or unanswerable question — but they shouldn't be.

Besides the north side office, CFD has representatives in Elk Grove Village at 901 W. Wellington, and in Schaumburg at 231 S. Civic Dr. The Elk Grove office is open 7-8:30 p.m. Tuesdays and 10-12 Saturdays. In Schaumburg hours are 9-1 Saturdays. The phone numbers, respectively, are 439-3960 and 894-3141.

The newlyweds are making their home in Mankato where Kathleen is employed at the Shari Candy Co. and Gregory with Continental Can Co. Gregory returned home late last year from Vietnam duty.

Kathleen chose a white silk organza gown with tiered skirt trimmed in lace with long sleeves and cathedral train. Her shoulder length veil was held by a lace cascade headpiece, and she carried white roses, Stephanotis and greens.

Newlyweds Teach In Same District

Mark Robert Frase and his bride, the former Pamela Jean Kendall of Kansas City, Kan., will both be teachers in District 214 in fall. Mark has been teaching at Wheeling High for the past year, but his bride will begin her career at Hersey High.

They were college sweethearts at Kansas State Teachers College in Emporia, where Mark was co-captain of the Hornets football team and Pam was head cheerleader. He graduated in '71 and his bride this June.

Mark is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Frase, 1719 Verde Ave., Arlington Heights. He is a graduate of Arlington High and studied at Southern Illinois University before earning a degree in physical education at Kansas State.

His bride will teach physical education and coach at Hersey High.

THE COUPLE'S wedding took place June 17 in Highland Crest Nazarene Church in Kansas City. It was an evening ceremony by candlelight, with a reception following for 250 guests in the church hall.

The bride wore a gown she designed herself and had made by her matron of honor's mother, Mrs. J. Deftrees of Kansas City. It was styled of white crepe with a scoop neckline, short flared sleeves and a long train. It had a scalloped Alencon lace edging on the sleeves, the hem of the train and on panels down the front of the long slim skirt. The bride wore a short mantilla veil which was also edged with scalloped lace and carried a bouquet of yellow and orange roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Cliff Deuelly of Lubbock, Texas, and Steve Conley of Arlington Heights was best man. Also in the procession were bridesmaids Linda Jenkins, Kansas City; Melody Gean Frase, the groom's sister; and Mrs. Susan Kendall, the bride's sister-in-law; and a flower girl, 5-year-old Kris Noel Frase, another sister of the groom.

THE ADULT attendants were dressed alike in floral printed gowns in yellow, orange and gold and wore picture hats with yellow velvet streamers. They carried white carnations and yellow daisies.

The little flower girl wore a yellow or-gandy dress and carried a white basket of yellow rose petals.

Groomsmen were Michael Frase, Mark's brother; James Kendall, Pam's brother; and Al Hewins of Wathena, Kan. Randy Helmenick of Youngstown, Ohio, and Harold Christensen of Arlington Heights ushered. Among the special guests were Mark's grandparents, the John Stortzums of Elftingham, Ill., and his great-aunt, Mrs. Clarence Frase, Laguna Hills, Calif.

Since their honeymoon at Lake of the Ozarks, the newlyweds are living in Rolling Meadows. Mark is working for Wheeling High in the Action program held at Arlington Nike Site.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: I always worry about food spoilage in the summer. While trying to be careful I keep wondering if there are any rules to follow that can help? — Mrs. Miles Wolf.

Yes, there are several guidelines. But start by remembering that bacteria thrive best in foods like meat, fish, poultry, eggs, milk, creamed puddings, stuffings, salads or sandwich fillings made with meat, eggs or fish. One good rule is to try to keep hot foods above 140 degrees and cold foods below 40 degrees.

If you are not going to serve a freshly cooked dish, refrigerate it as soon as possible. If you should make up a large batch of hot food, divide it into small lots so that it will cool fast and thus prevent bacteria from forming in the center. For another, always cook meat and poultry completely at one time — never cook partially to be finished later. And, finally, try to thaw frozen meats in the refrigerator, rather than at room temperature.

Dear Dorothy: Even though I try to clean my oven fairly often, the glass on the oven door gets pretty grimy and I can't see the food as it's cooking. Is there a simple way to do this job? — Marian K.

The simplest way is to rub first with a plastic scrubber, then with a soap-filled steel wool pad. A clean damp cloth followed by a dry polish ought to do it.

Dear Dorothy: Do you know whether there is such a thing as a Gouda cheese which has no added salt? Would like to know because of the restrictions of a low-sodium diet. — Mrs. W. F. Smith

One of the Goudas imported from Holland has no added salt. A well-stocked cheese market should have it — or be able to order it.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to Dorothy Ritz in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

 Robert Herrick: Grace
 Weeds are supposed to be funny. But to regard them as comic relief is to underestimate them, and to regard them bitterly as pests is to malign them.
 If a prize were to be given justly to the best garden stimulator, it would not go to commercial fertilizer or barnyard manure. It would go to weeds. It takes a lot of weeds in a garden to keep a gardener interested. Bertha Damon, the New England gardener, says.
 THE TYRO THINKS he is obliged to scratch around and hoe because there are weeds, and he must get rid of them. If no weeds, no need for such work, but if the truth was known he ought to scratch just as much as he does now — weeds or no weeds. A stirred and loosened soil lets roots penetrate and lets rain and dew sink into it.
 The job of weeding can be as beneficial to the gardener as to the garden. It gives scope to the aggressive instinct. What a satisfaction to pull up an enemy by the roots and throw him into a heap! And yet, weeding is the most peaceful of outdoor tasks. Like knitting, soothingly monotonous but pleasingly varied, it goes on and on, shutting out anxious thinking and furnishing an excuse for not doing some other less pleasant task.
 WEEDING HAS none of the doubts and fears of transplanting. The appearance of a newly-transplanted area is always disturbing with its demoralized camps of strawberry-basket huts and newspaper tents and all the unsheltered population fainting and flopping, but an area that is being weeded looks good at once.

 Weeds get blamed for taking a little richness from the soil, but they give back to the earth greater treasure than every they took — that fertility may not end. They have a place of service — on the compost pile.
 You'll get higher quality garden vegetables if you don't let weeds compete for moisture, nutrients, water and light. Severe competition from weeds may result in low quality vegetables. "Growth stress" causes fiber to develop in such vegetables as lettuce, beans, chard and spinach — all grown for their immature plant parts.
 A FEW GOODIES on vegetable culture: To avoid leaf wilt and mosaic diseases, plant pole beans instead of bush (string) beans. Don't ever cultivate beans when wet. Handpick Mexican bean beetles and crush eggs on under side of leaves.
 An application of wood ashes is very beneficial to beets as well as turnips. Goldfinches love baby beets, so plant a few extra for the birds. Tie cauliflower heads as they begin to form so direct sunlight cannot penetrate to the head. This will insure nice white blossoms. Keep lettuce well watered if you want it to be sweet.
 And keep those weeds picked!

It was a tough one to lose but it was a good one to win.

So said Arlington legion coach Lloyd Meyer to Jerry Fink, a former player under Meyer and now an opposing coach in the Ninth District with Des Plaines.

The game was tough to lose because the winning run scored without being driven in by a hit. Instead, Meyer used one of his old tricks — the double steal — and it worked like a charm in the 21st inning.

Heading into the "stolen" bottom of the sixth Tuesday at Recreation Park it appeared that the game might go into extra innings because of the pitching duel taking place. Young Larry Monroe, 21, was cruising along with a one-hit lead. Mark Leonhard had scattered four hits and was keeping Arlington in the ball game.

After one out catcher Pat Broderick reached Monroe for a hit. He moved to second on a passed ball and over to third on Leonhard's single. This former Heisey High School twosome then worked the steal play. While Des Plaines was concerned with Leonhard Broderick came home.

Leonhard finally enjoying his first lead sent Post 36 down in order in the top of the seventh for Arlington's 15th win in 18 tries.

The game was good to win, as Meyer had said, because his team had finally lost the day before against Palatine. His Post 208 team had taken a 12-game winning streak into the Palatine contest and by his own admission was feeling a little cocky. Bouncing back on the Fourth of July showed Meyer something about his athletes — they're winners.

They took on a fast improving Des Plaines team with first place in the league on the line and won a tough one. Arlington is now 5-1 while Des Plaines is 7-4.

The two teams had met once previously with Arlington blasting Monroe for eight hits and seven runs in the first two innings and winning 8-1. However, those last five innings against this lean righty Heights could only manage a single hit. Monroe picked up where he left off in his latest outing.

The only hit he served up over the first five innings came in the second. After Jim Locascio had walked, Tony Fricano lashed a double with Locascio scoring on the play. Monroe walked just two more after that and stuck out six.

Leonhard was tagged for a triple in the first inning by Scott Pruitt. He scored on a wild pitch. Then the husky righthander didn't allow another runner past second. He didn't walk a batter while striking out six.

Paul Logan

FOURTH OF JULY bring out the kid in most people.

Watching the exploding streaks can make your mind take off and light up other thoughts.

This is always a technicolor thrill for the young but older folks sometimes tend to daydream (or should it be night dream) while the kids are gazing at the glitter. At least that was the case for this daddy.

Involvement in sports led my mind back to what had happened earlier in the day. The column of fellow reporter Larry Everhart on super stars sent me off on a tangent.

I started thinking about what you might call "What if's" while watching this holiday happening.

What if Jack Nicklaus wins the British Open next week? Such a success would bring this possibly all time great one win away from the up to now impossible modern day grand slam. Despite his vast ability could he withstand the intense pressure that would be on him at the PGA?

Another man who must be equal to such pressure that comes to those who are in a class by themselves is Hank Aaron. Each time he homers his career total is placed in the headlines. That means that for approximately two years three digit numbers will appear until the magical 715th is struck.

What if Hank succeeds in his quest for Babe Ruth's mark? Chances are very good that he will not be treated like Roger Maris when he assaulted the Babe's single season record. Maris has been quoted as saying that he never want to do it again if he has a chance to retire the 1961 season.

One thing's for certain his life will never be the same from that special four finger day.

While I'm on the baseball player kick what if Richie Dick Allen hadn't been traded to the Sox by the Dodgers? Granted a good pitcher was given up in the deal when Tommy John went West but most White Sox fans agree that it was the best thing that has happened to their team in years.

Although John has won quite a few games this year, Allen has probably won twice as many with his booming bat. Not to mention the leadership he's added to this young team.

The Dodgers definitely made a mistake in not making Allen feel welcome. Had he been happy out there, Los Angeles might be in first place today instead of skidding right out of the race.

Frank Robinson is a leader just as Allen is but old Frank doesn't have the power, speed and defensive ability of Dick. The Dodgers could be pretty sorry at the end of the season if Dick dominates the league in homers and runs batted in. And could you imagine the L.A. management's embarrassment if Richie leads the Sox the division title while winning the triple crown?

Tuning to tennis what if Chris Evert replaces Billy Jean King as the queen of the courts? If that coup takes place, the net game will have for the first time a very sexy looking star.

With good looks and a powerful game, this young lady is just the charismatic athlete needed to bring the professional women's tour to television. And if you caught the cover story in a recent Newsweek about the Evert family, you know that her cute sister Jeanne will also be a welcomed addition to the tour in a couple of years.

From a sport that is just coming into its own, let's turn to one which is about to die — boxing. What if Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier never meet for the championship again? What if they do and Ali wins? What if Frazier wins?

Ali is the only one who's keeping the fight game alive with his dual appeal — hated by some and loved by others. Both groups watch him, however, which keeps interest in this sport going.

It seems that whatever Ali does will determine where boxing goes. When he retires this old sport appears destined to fade from the television and destined to cut screens. Boxing will probably be moved to a sideshow tent for carnivals and circuses. From some of the fights witnessed on TV recently it already appears to have sunk to such depths.

The cold weather cut short my "What if's" at the fireworks display so I finished up the evening watching the Cubs and the Sox go down together. Richie Dick did salvage some of the evening for Chicago rooters by his shot in the first inning despite a wind blowing in.

What if the Cubs had this slugger in their "bandbox park"? They'd be legitimate contenders, that's what if. And so the game goes on.

It seems like that's the only fun about being a sports fan in Chicago — playing "What if's."

Smith Sharp In Lions' Triumph

Charging Logan Square captured its 20th overall triumph of the season Tuesday with relative ease by combining the essentials of stungy pitching with timely hitting for a decisive 8-1 holiday thumping of Norwood Park.

The Ninth District triumph boosted the Lions to 5-2 status in the league and dropped the first year Norwood entry to 3-7.

Consistent righthander Terry Smith authored a sparkling one-hitter to level his circuit record at 11. Despite passing five, Smith failed to allow a Norwood Park runner past first base through five innings and was in complete charge with a half dozen strikeouts.

The crafty fireballer lost his no-hit and shutout bid in the sixth inning on a fluke run by the defeated hosts. With two out in the frame, Smith issued back-to-back walks and while shortstop Jim Bucaro vacated his position on an attempted pickoff at second, Norwood's Lee Larson drilled a run-scoring single through the unmaned hole.

The run was merely consolation at that stage of the game as Logan Square had already hammered eight runs on the board. Smith went to work with a 2-0 cushion after a half inning as Ken Martin reached on an error in left. Joe Bombicino rocketed a triple to straightaway centerfield and Stan Bobowski lofted his first of two sacrifice flies to right.

The margin grew to 3-0 after three with the top of the Lion batting order producing again. Martin coaxed a leadoff walk, scampered to third on the first of Steve Bobowski's pair of singles and tallied while Norwood Park was turning over the game's only double play.

Eight men paraded to the plate in the fifth as Logan Square hung the decision out of Norwood's reach. Smith helped his own plight by drawing an opening pass and wound up at third after successive singles by Martin and Steve Bobowski.

The winners closed out their scoring in the top of the sixth as walks to Tom Chapman and Smith coupled with Martin's shot over short sealed the victory.

Logan Square took Wednesday off, but will be back on the Ninth District trail tonight against visiting Palatine.

Land Of Lincoln Salute Set For McHenry July 23

McHenry salutes the Land of Lincoln.

Not only McHenry residents but visitors from throughout the Chicago area will converge on the little city of 6,772 Sunday, July 23, to join in the Marine Festival Day salute. If the crowd is up to expectations, more than 30,000 will line the parade route in the afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Appropriately, U.S. Senator Charles Percy will act as parade marshal. The line of march also will be highlighted by the appearance of Diane Holm, Northbrook speed skater and an Olympic gold medal winner.

Riding proudly on the City of McHenry flat will be pretty Nancy Stetter, who reigns as the Marine Festival queen.

Another highlight of the Sunday event will be the water ski show on the Fox River scheduled for immediately after the parade about 4 o'clock. Donald Howard, who heads this committee for the sponsoring Chamber of Commerce, announced that the Chicago Water Ski Association will come to the city with at least one addition to last year's event. After an absence of many years, ski jumpers will be featured.

Kite flyers will be in abundance, as well as the many other ski experts who will provide thrills for those who throng the beach area.

Some of the best drum and bugle corps will be the Vanguards from Skokie, the Imperials from Norwood, the Kulties from Racine, the Black Knights of Kewanee and the Mariners from South Milwaukee.

An added attraction will be the Great Lakes and Air Force bands as well as an appearance by the McHenry Viscounts.

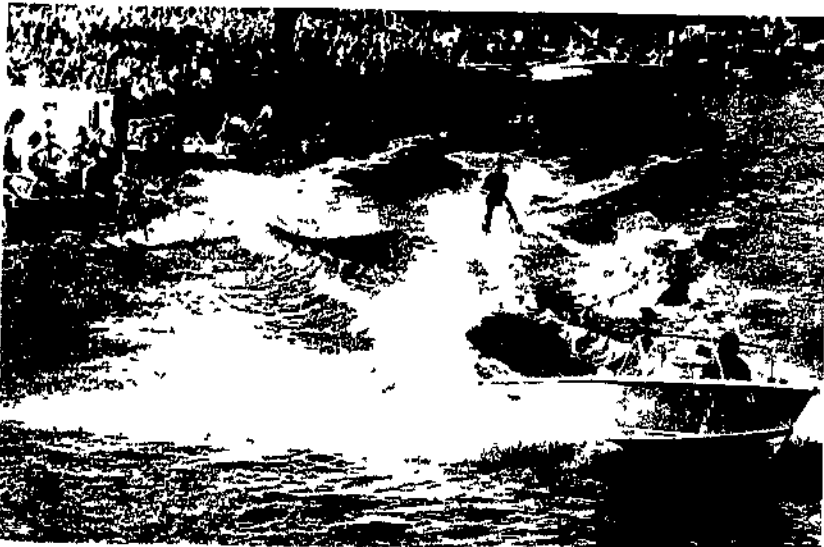

Marine Festival Week will start Sunday, July 16, with water fights at the city beach in the afternoon. Competition will be furnished by the various fire department teams throughout the county.

A dance at the city park will be a feature of Wednesday, July 19, followed by a band concert Thursday evening and a square dance Friday night, all in the same park located just a block from the Fox River.

The Big Sidewalk Sale is set for Saturday, July 22.

day, July 22. Merchants are busy assembling banners and flags and will decorate their windows in keeping with the "Land of Lincoln" theme.

The Greater Area McHenry Chamber of Commerce and Festival Chairman George Thompson invite Illinois to attend this week of spectacular entertainment.

A REPETITION of this scene will occur Sunday afternoon, July 23, when crowds throng the McHenry city beach to witness the Marine Festival.

Water Ski Show. This highlight of the annual event is scheduled for immediately after the parade — about 4 o'clock.

Chemplex Ends First Half

A sudden downpour just before the start of play had an adverse effect on the Chemplex Twilight Golf League as it completed the first half of the season at the Golden Acres Country Club in Schaumburg.

Not only did the rain discourage some of the golfers from playing, but the course played long and slow, assisted by pushed-back tees.

Despite all, Jack Blanchard and Carl Snyder still managed to share low gross with a score of 45, while Larry Dowd and Tom Burke tied for low net with 37.

Carl Snyder recorded the only birdie for the evening, on hole No. 8.

Capturing flight honors for the first half of the season were Flight A — Ray Cameron, Flight B — Mike Melchior, Flight C — Milt Kostner, and Flight D — John Bennett. These golfers will meet the flight winners of the second half in a play-off at the end of the season.

Team No. 5 (Jack Jacobs, Sven Solvik, Milt Kostner, and George Laybourne), a perennial front runner, failed to win any points in the seventh round, enabling teams No. 2 and No. 6 to cut its lead to seven points, 31 versus 24.

Meet The Millionaire Who Pitches Batting Practice

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — I would like you to hear out Marty Stone.

Prologue. Martin Stone, chairman of the board of Monogram Industries, Inc., is a millionaire. He is 43 years old and in good shape. He would like nothing more than to be a big league baseball player. Unlike the rest of us with Miltish fantasies, he has been able to do something about it.

It started with the Braves, see I was supposed to be one of the owners but I was away on a bicycle trip when the deal closed and no one could find me. But they knew I was a baseball nut, so one of them said, "Why don't you come down to spring training at West Palm Beach?"

Well, I got a locker next to Joe Torre Great! Then Paul Richards, he's the general manager, gets us all aside.

"You m— may be the owners of this ball club, but you listen to me. Don't let me club you with your a— on a major league diamond. There's a field over there in the cornstalks. Run around and hit balls to each other there."

I didn't want that and was standing around looking grim. Clint Courtney, the catching coach, was getting ready to catch batting practice. "Marty, what're you doing?" he asks me.

"Not a gaddam thing."

"Whatta ya mean?"

"Richards won't let me work out. I throw the ball pretty good. Why don't you warm me up for kicks?"

So I started warming up and Clint said, "Hey, you throw the ball pretty good."

I stand behind the screen watching the guys hit and all of a sudden they ran out of pitchers. Beginning of spring practice, they got to be careful. Henry Aaron still wants to hit. Couple of other guys. They looked around for coaches to throw. They couldn't find Harry Dorish.

So Courtney yelled back, "Hey, Stoney, you're on."

I said, "No! Richards will skin me alive."

He said, "Get the hell out there. Those guys want to hit."

First ball I ever threw was to Henry Aaron. I looked in and I saw No. 44.

"God, I thought 'what if I hit him?'"

The first ball landed three feet in front of the plate.

"Cut that crap out," Courtney yelled. "Throw the next one right."

I threw the next one in and Aaron hit it over the trees behind the center field wall. I turned around, watching it go out, and yelled, "Foul ball!"

With that, I relaxed and stayed out.

there 45 minutes. Next day I showed up and Joe Torre said, "Hey, Marty, you made the ball club."

"What're you talking about, Joe?"

"Your name's up there on the list, with the pitchers."

I said, "Stop S—me."

"Chrissakes, go up there and look."

Well, right under Tony Cloninger, is me. I had to sign out with all the ball players. I went to Luman Harris, the manager, and asked, "What's the story?"

He said, "Don't you wanna throw?"

I said, "I sure do."

He said, "Well, the guys tell me you throw pretty good. And we need batting practice pitchers." So I pitched all that spring.

The next year, I got to know Walter Alston and he invited me to come down to Vero Beach with the Dodgers. He also said, "You can pitch in Dodger Stadium during the season. That way you can pitch all year long."

The last four years I've been pitching once or twice a week in Dodger Stadium. Up until this season.

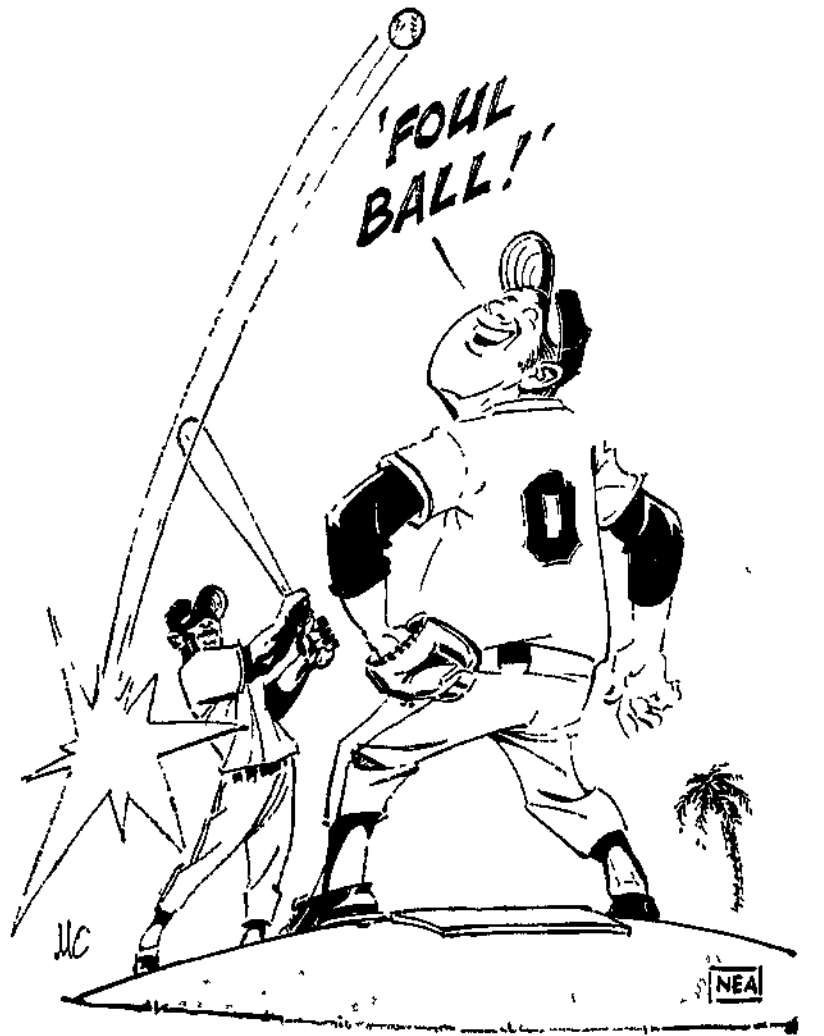

Even during the strike, the Dodgers called me up and said, "We're working out at Mar Vista playground and need somebody to throw. Could you come out?"

So I said sure and went out a couple of days until Frank Robinson hit me in the arm with a line drive. Bullet. Almost got me in the head. Then Peter and Walter O'Malley said, "The Dodgers sell entertainment. They don't want anybody using the Dodgers for political purposes."

I agreed. The stories had gotten around that I was going to run for governor.

Epilogue. Martin Stone asked Gene Mauch, the Montreal manager, if he could pitch with the Expos this past spring. Gene agreed. They had been high school baseball foes in Los Angeles. "Montreal," said Marty Stone, political aspirant and would-be pitcher, "that's out of the country."

O'Hare Inn Tennis Club Takes Limited Memberships

The sounds of a feminine voice calling "30-Love" out at O'Hare Inn these days are part of the new tennis craze that is fast spreading in the suburbs.

"Thirty-Love" is frequently heard all day long at the busy O'Hare Inn Tennis Club, as its members keep lobbing the ball over the nets at its two specially-surfaced new Westco turf courts.

The club organized early this year is rapidly growing in numbers as tennis devotees seek out courts for their net games and find the O'Hare championship calibre surfaces perfect for a fast couple of sets. Many of the club members are area business executives who find tennis even better than jogging to keep in good physical shape. They often take a tennis break in the middle of the day and then top it off with a dip in the O'Hare swimming pool.

Presiding over the courts is Jim Kreutzer, a teaching pro who lives in Park Ridge. Formerly captain of the Elmhurst College tennis team, Kreutzer gives private lessons not only to businessmen members of the O'Hare Inn Tennis Club but also suburban housewives who often step off the courts in mini tennis dresses and head for the supermarket to shop for their families.

Tennis weekends are another feature at the new O'Hare Club, with special package deals available for enthusiasts who want to spend maximum time at the courts and come as hotel guests. Special weekend tennis deals are available which include deluxe guest room, breakfast, dinner, plus all the hotel facilities ranging from night club to sauna and swim pool for less than $20 daily.

For the tennis buff who wants to play all summer long, the club is the answer and limited memberships are still open for this season, according to Kreutzer. Tournaments are being planned and new members can still enter this club competition.

Inquiries about memberships in the tennis club located at Mannheim and Higgins Roads in Des Plaines can be directed to Kreutzer at the club by phoning VA 7-5131, Ext. 780.

Jan Gustafson's Play Highlights Action In Newcomers Golf League

Jan Gustafson had the most outstanding showing of the day in the Arlington Heights Newcomers Golf League at Arlington Country Club last week.

Besides having the low gross (52) and low net (35) totals of the day in the Third Flight, Jan chipped in from about 50 feet for a par to finish the ninth hole in fine style.

Rounding out play in Jan's flight were Pat Abbott as the weekly event winner (low gross on the odd holes) and Marge Melcher with a par on the sixth hole.

Dottie Fisher, Carol Cuppa and Norma Jones tied for low gross honors in First Flight action with 54s. Norma and Carol shared the low net honors with 36. Carol also won the weekly event.

Jeanne Fleming and Dottie parred the eighth hole with Norma, Bernice Dunn and Jane Pintar paring the sixth.

Jean Derrick had low gross honors (57) in the Second Flight and tied with Dotty Bayer for low net scores (37). Jean also shared the weekly event prize with Betty Pickard. Helping her to her fine round was a chip shot that found the cup on the eighth hole.

Gail Borvig dominated the Fourth Flight. She won low gross (67), low net (31) and the weekly event.

AREA QUALIFIERS, from left, Chris Dilger, Steve Sluka and Dave Moody will advance to the State Jaycee Tournament after having conquered the final three berths in the Arlington Jaycee Golf Meet. Sluka edged Moody for second place with a par on the first sudden-death playoff

Gossamer Glory Of Championship Seasons

Hit Play Hits Home With Former Illinois High School Cage Star

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK (NEA) —On stage, in the hit off-Broadway play, "That Championship Season," the old basketball coach has just put a record on his phonograph, still spinning his web around the four members of his championship team. The ex-players at this 20-year reunion in the coach's house would be enticed to relive their gossamer glory, despite their paunchy, gloomy lives now. "You were once rare and beautiful things, boys," the coach says. "Don't ever grow old on me."

Then the record comes on: hoarse, hysterical crowd: frenetic announcer: "Ten seconds to go, one point down, the ball is passed in. The title is riding on this final play... And they score! They score!"

In the dark audience, Dave Golden sat and grew goosebumpy cold. It brought back real-life memories for him.

The play is based on a fictional Pennsylvania high school state championship basketball team of 1952. Golden was the star of the nonfiction Pekin High School team which won the Illinois state basketball championship eight years ago, in 1964.

Golden was curious about the play. He wondered if he might catch a glimpse of himself — past, present or future — somewhere in it. "I don't think I did," said Golden. "But the play scared me anyway. I've got 12 years to go."

Unlike the now middle-aged men in the play, who stayed their dreary lives in their small home town, Golden left Pekin. A high school All-American, Golden received a basketball scholarship to Duke University. He became co-captain of the team his senior year. He is married now and lives and works in New York City.

"My folks would like me to come back home," said Golden. "but I know I can't. Visits are all right. Pekin's a nice town. But I couldn't live there again. I don't think I'd ever be allowed to grow up, to grow past my senior year in high school."

"We won the state championship in my junior year. We lost in the quarterfinals in my senior year. You walk down the street, or you go into any bar in town, and the talk is still — 'Dave, you remember that game when...' and 'We should have won the championship in '65, too...'"

Golden, still trim, is 24 years old but appears older. He is round-shouldered like many fine athletes, and seems a bit stooped and shorter than his full 6-1. His hair is thinning. He also seems articulate beyond his years and his eyes behind glasses are mature and thoughtful.

He has had time to think, these last eight years since the championship. He was a swift, precocious success in small-town American terms, since the local high-school basketball team is often the highest and most important form of serious entertainment there. Golden and his teammates prepared for their future, like concert pianist prodigies, as long ago as the fifth grade when organized drills were instituted.

"Basketball was my whole life in my younger days, starting at age 10," said Golden. "Now I realize that it is just a part of life. And what you do on the court is often separate — despite what some coaches say — from what you do in life."

"In high school I remember that I was kind of the so-called moral fiber of the team. I used to make speeches before church groups telling them how faith in God helped me play the big game despite the bursitis in my knees."

"Now, I think I'd tell them that maybe the pain-killers that were shot into me with needles before the game also had something to do with my being able to play. I think I'd also tell them that it was ludicrous to be playing all shot up like that. It felt like I was running around on a stump. I could have really gotten hurt. But everybody then said it was so important that I play in the game."

Golden said that the title team gave him an inflated and distorted view of himself, and of the world.

"I thought that things would always come easy for me, as easy as success in basketball did," he says.

"I went to college and let my academics slide. And I didn't prepare well for the future. I was always the basketball player."

After Duke, Golden tried out for the Indiana Pacers. He was cut. And he was rocked. He knew his basketball career was over. What now? He went back home that summer of 1969. 1969, got a job on a garbage truck, played some semi-pro ball, then decided to return to Duke to complete work for his degree.

He then came to New York, where he thought opportunities would be greatest. He spent one year as a physical education instructor at the Grand Central YMCA. No future there, he thought. He looked around. Nothing much came to him. Finally, he caught on in the sales training program of the Hartford Insurance Co. And he wonders if he will ever reach the heights he attained as a 17-year-old school boy. "I'd hate to think that that was the crowning point of my life," he said. "I'd like to get really good at insurance, if I stay in insurance."

About the old glory days of high school, Golden says he still has memories. He will visit his old coach whenever he returns home. But he has lost contact with most of his former teammates. And his trophies, and his scrapbook?

"There was one moment in the play," said Golden, "when one of the former players said, 'I don't believe in trophies any more, coach.' Well, I don't either. I still have my trophies. And they're nice. But they're in a trunk. And I never open the trunk anymore."

UOP Benefit Game Features 'Bat Girls'

Two five-year olds have been named official "bat girls" for the UOP Shadows when that top industrial league softball team faces a team of WIND radio personalities July 9 at Thillens' Stadium in Chicago in a benefit game.

The girls are Janet Heynys and Jodi Engenbretson. Janet is the daughter of Martin W. Heynys, shortstop on the UOP team. Jodi is the daughter of William R. Engenbretson, player-manager of the team.

Proceeds from the 16-inch softball game, which will begin at 10 a.m., will go to the American Cancer Society. Thillens' Stadium is located at Devon and Kedzie avenues in Chicago.

Engenbretson said that he got the idea for the game when he heard WIND station personnel were available to play games that benefitted charities. He said that he then called the station to arrange the game.

Tentatively scheduled to play on the WIND team are disc jockeys Chuck Benson and Bob Delgiorno, talk show host Dave Baum, news broadcasters Ralph Howard and Jim Morris and sports director Jack Fleming. Other members of the stations staff will round out the 10-man team.

The UOP Shadows is one of the leading teams in the Northwest Suburban YMCA Industrial League, according to Engenbretson. It reached semifinals last year. Team members are from Universal Oil Products Company's Research Center, Process Division and corporate staffs in Des Plaines.

Tickets for the game are available from UOP team members and will be available at the stadium. Donations are $1.50 for adults and $.75 for children. A limited number of child-size bats will be given away at the game to children accompanied by an adult.

Junk Car Reefs Found In Coastal Areas

by JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI) — A lot of those junked automobiles that mar the landscape and the thousands of tires they wore out on their way to oblivion are being put to a useful purpose on ocean bottoms.

They are being used to build artificial reefs where fish will gather to feed on the mussels and other organisms which attach themselves to the reef material. This in turn, will provide a happy hunting ground for the boating fisherman.

Junk car reefs have been constructed in a number of coastal areas in the past decade on an experimental basis and, according to marine biologists, have been a big asset in helping to restore diminishing coastal fish resources.

One of the first reefs was built in Mounalua Bay, Hawaii, where 443 cars were spread over 13 acres of virtually barren bottom. Biologists reported that within seven months an estimated 10 tons of fish had taken up residence in the area.

At Paradise Cove near Malibu in California, a small car-body reef sunk at 50-foot depth was reported to have attracted fish only a few hours after it was down. Over a 30-month period, 49 different species of fish were counted in the reef area.

In most instances, the biologists reported, car wrecks stayed in place on the bottom and were not scattered by storms or currents. However, the cars rusted away in three to five years and the reefs had to be replenished every few years.

The use of worn-out tires to construct artificial reefs is a more recent development, with about 80 such projects now under construction in East and Gulf Coast waters. They will consume an estimated 300,000 old tires, and experts predict that about 500,000 old tires will be sunk every year as new reefs are created.

One of the newest and largest of these tire-reef projects is now underway at Marco Island off the Florida Gulf Coast under sponsorship of the island's developers, Deltona Corp. and the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Thousands of worn-out tires are being sunk to form the first of a series of reefs near the island. The tires are compacted and bundled in a special machine, then each bundle is weighed with concrete to anchor it to the Gulf bottom.

Initially, the tires are being placed 20 feet deep in units of 100, 250, 500 and 1,000 bundles per acre. Future observations by scientists of the Marco Applied Marine Ecology Station will determine the optimum number of tire bundles per acre.

"The artificial reef has been attracting fish as well as fishermen for years," says George P. Spinner, Deltona's director of environmental management. "Essentially, it starts the food chain almost immediately. It provides shelter for the smaller fish, and for the larger fish it is a reference point, as well as a food source."

Goodyear also is involved in reef building at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Galveston, Tex.

GENERAL INFORMATION:

The village of Wheeling deserves much mention because of its rapid growth rate and its strategic location between the lake shore communities and the northwest suburbs.

Wheeling is fulfilling a trend toward suburbanizing the northwestern Chicago farmlands. New residential areas plus 9 industrial centers are being rapidly expanded on the south and west sides of town as brick and combination buildings more and more replace the vast surrounding farmlands. Small shops and some older stores remain, but Wheeling is growing at an amazing rate. The Des Plaines River and its surrounding Forest Preserve forms the village's eastern boundary. The village was incorporated in 1894 and has become a famous shopping area for gardening, patio, and unique household wares.

SCHOOLS:

Within Wheeling there are 7 public elementary schools, 2 junior high schools, and District 214's Wheeling High School. The pupil-teacher ratio is 22:1 with $619 spent annually per pupil. In addition, one Catholic elementary school serves Wheeling residents.

CHURCHES:

Baptist, Catholic, Episcopal, Lutheran, Methodist, and Presbyterian churches are all located in Wheeling.

HOUSING:

In original Wheeling, 60-year-old frame homes stand next to modern townhouses and new apartment buildings. All styles are available in homes ranging from $32,000 up to $60,000. New homes start at $40,000. Rental prices are from $200 to $275. Also within the village are Cameo Condominiums (388 units) for senior citizens only.

HISTORY:

As preparations were being made to admit Illinois to statehood, settlement in Wheeling was better than a decade away. The territory around Wheeling had been chartered centuries earlier as noted in the journals of Joliet and Father Marquette in 1673.

The earliest settler of record to come to Wheeling Township was a Mr. Sweet in March, 1833. Under present village boundaries Wheeling's first actual resident was Joseph Filkins who staked his claim in 1834. The following decade brought Wheeling its first building boom and in the next 10 years several stores and a school were added.

Incorporation gave rise to new problems, primarily, finding and keeping marshals and obtaining funds to operate the village. All seemed well for Wheeling's 331 residents at the turn of the century. The 1950 census revealed a population increase to 916, and a second building boom in progress. The current population of 16,100 represents an increase of nearly 225% in the last 12 years.

RECREATION:

The village has a separate park district, with offices and a recreation building at Heritage Park, 222 S. Wolf Road. The park district has a full time park director, a superintendent, and an elected board which is not paid. The district has an outdoor pool at Chamber of Commerce Park; the park also features a community meeting room in an old, historic church which was scheduled to be torn down but was saved and moved to the park. The district has an indoor pool - Neptune's Pool - adjacent to the high school. Several portions of the Cook County Forest Preserves which line the Des Plaines River are in Wheeling — the rest of the area is readily available to residents for recreation.

TRANSPORTATION:

Milwaukee Road trains are available in Northbrook (4 miles east) or residents may use the C&NW system in Arlington Heights. United Motor Coach buses transport citizens to the Loop in 80 minutes. Glenview buses are also available in the area. An entrance to the Tri-State Tollway is located northeast of town. PalWaukee airport is near Wheeling. The airport is the busiest private airport in the world, complete with an FAA tower. It takes much of the small plane burden off O'Hare.

TOWN SHOPPING:

Old stores and a new shopping center form downtown Wheeling. On edges of the village are newer centers: Park-and-Shop, Gaslight, K-Mart, and South Point. Randhurst Shopping Center is approximately 6 miles to the southeast, and many additional regional and community shopping complexes are nearby.

ORGANIZATIONS:

45 community and civic groups serve the community.

GOVERNMENT:

Wheeling is run by a Board of Trustees and a Village President, with several appointed commissions, such as Human Relations, Industrial Commission, and others.

The police department has modern equipment and is in contact with neighboring police departments, and the fire department has a contingent of full-time men who are helped by several volunteers. The fire department has a new yellow-green truck which experimentally was proven to be more visible than red. The ambulance, also new, is the same color.

Three sales each in Hanover Park and Roselle and 107 in Schaumburg and the rest of the township were listed in the late spring Schaumburg township real estate transfer report from County Recorder Sidney R. Olsen.

Olsen recorded the following property transfers for the township. The list shows the purchase price of equity and does not include the amount of a mortgage which the purchaser may have assumed. The price is indicated by the amount of state revenue stamps on the document ($1.00 in stamps for each $1,000.00 of market value).

More Homes Coming From Factories

Factory-produced housing components are making their heaviest inroads ever on the "home" front. The primary reason is believed to be steadily rising costs of on-site construction.

Figures released by the Bureau of Building Marketing Research show that while fabricated building components (such as wall and floor panels, roof trusses, utility cores, and modules) were used by 24 per cent of the nation's builders in 1969, the number is swinging steadily upward: 30 per cent in 1970, 34 per cent in 1971, and at least 35 per cent in 1972.

The study reported that while less than 30,000 factory-built modular units were produced in 1970, and 80,000 in 1971, planning for this year calls for more than 125,000. (Modulars are essentially fully finished and ready to live in, compared to components or "house parts.") If building costs continue their expected rise, the report said total factory production could reach 150,000 by the end of the year.

Although cost control is seen as an essential benefit of manufactured buildings, it is not considered a "direct" saving. Rather, it works like this:

IN MANUFACTURED buildings, major components are produced in a plant with assembly-line methods that allow volume production and a high degree of quality control. The components (generally preassembled and prefabricated to cut down on-site labor) are transported to a building site and erected with special equipment on previously-prepared foundations.

In conventional construction, structures are built stick-by-stick on site. Hand labor makes the process lengthy, and adverse weather and shortages of labor or materials can cause expensive delays.

When factory components are used, startling differences in completion time occur. An average conventional home takes many months to build. A factory-built home can be ready to move into in two or three weeks. The time required to complete a home adds to builder costs, which are passed on to the home buyer.

Therefore, savings in time can control construction costs.

The potential for cost stabilization in commercial as well as residential buildings is expected to be a source of prime interest at the third Industrialized Building Exposition and Congress, Oct. 30 to Nov. 2, in Louisville, Ky. Advanced production systems and techniques will be demonstrated, and full-scale factory-built structures will be displayed.

INBEX/72 which has headquarters at 5 South Wabash Ave., Chicago, is sponsored by Cahners Publishing Company in cooperation with the National Association of Building Manufacturers.

East Expects

5 Per Cent

Housing Increase

A survey of housing experts and economists in 100 key metropolitan areas indicates the Eastern states should expect a 5 per cent increase in new housing starts in 1972 over 1971, says Allan W. Cox, marketing research manager of Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp.

Some pacesetter areas, according to Cox, are Somerset County, N.J., up 107 per cent, Syracuse, N.Y., at 52 per cent and Philadelphia and Atlantic City, N.J., both rising to 14 per cent over last year.

Truly fine living in a home designed and built for you.

Light Fights Interior Pollution

Think you're safe from pollution inside your home?

Hardly. That's where you may be subjected to "interior pollution," which includes: poor ventilation, lack of natural light, noise, crowding due to bad traffic patterns, clashing color schemes, and uncomfortable furnishings.

Architects and space planners have long been aware of these problems, and in many instances offices and commercial buildings are designed specifically to avoid them.

Only recently have homeowners realized that air and water pollution aren't the only environmental threats, or that pollution can be psychologically as well as physically harmful.

The lack of light and fresh air has been studied particularly in relation to windowless schools and offices. School studies have shown, for example, that the average attention span of students is lowered and feelings of anxiety increased in the dulling atmosphere of rooms without sunlight, views and fresh air.

The effect of light and visibility — or the absence of them — becomes more apparent considering that the average person spends almost 80 per cent of his time indoors. Windows, which can make up as much as 40 per cent of house walls, are his only outlook during these closed-in periods.

Andersen Corporation of Bayport, Minn., a leading window manufacturer, suggests that style selection is of paramount importance in getting the most from windows. It notes that visibility and ventilation are a window's prime purposes, and that one need not be sacrificed to achieve the other. For example, casement windows — which swing out at a 90-degree angle for maximum ventilation — also have unhampered glass areas for good visibility. Often, they are used in combination with non-operating "picture" windows — the casement to provide ventilation, the fixed-sash for natural light and visibility.

Al Langos Jr., sales representative for the Robert L. Nelson Real Estate Co., has reached the "Million Dollar Sales Club"

Homebuyers 'Build' Vocabulary

Knowledgeable homebuyers are adding two more words to their "building" vocabulary.

Panelization — the system in which all basic parts and structural materials of a building (wall and floor panels, roof trusses, windows, doors, interior partitions, even shingles and insulation) are built and assembled in a factory. Then they are "packaged," loaded on a truck, and taken to the building site where the pieces are put together into a complete building.

Module — this is a three-dimensional box- or cube-shaped structure consisting of walls, ceiling and floor that is factory-built, usually with heating systems, plumbing and wiring installed. Then these room-like modules are shipped to the site and stacked or assembled into a building.

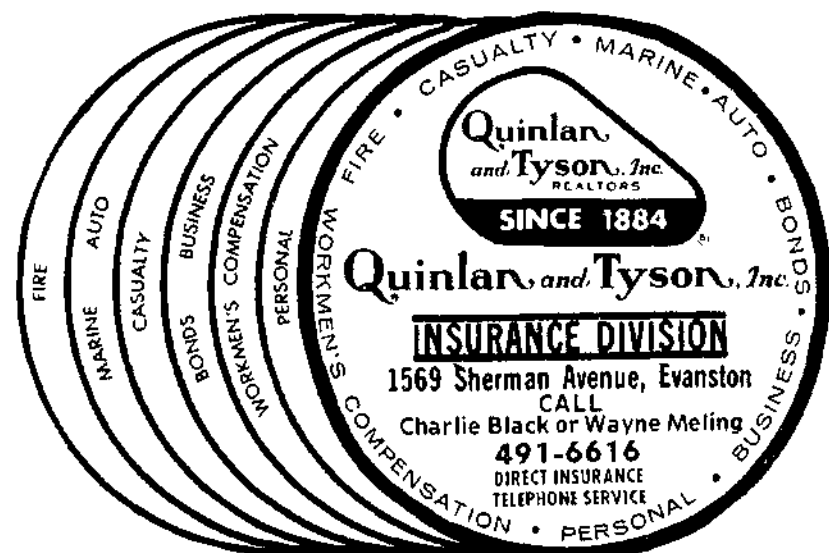

Panelization and modules are major types of industrialized, or manufactured, building about which there is so much talk today. The third annual Industrialized Building Exposition and Congress (INBEX/72) will be held Oct. 30 to Nov. 2, in Louisville, Ky.

THE LOCATION OF YOUR HOME!

Certainly, there are many important factors to be considered when selecting a home. One of the most important is the actual LOCATION of the home in relation to conveniences, shops, schools, parks, transportation and future development and growth of the community.

Two practically identical homes can be priced quite differently and, although there can be no obvious difference in the style, space and condition of the homes, usually the home that has the better family location will obviously be worth more.

Location is just as important to the worth of the home as the actual interior and exterior features of the home. Your local MAP Multiple Listing Real Estate offices know the value of location and they make it a point to always show home buyers the advantage (and disadvantages) of various home locations. MAP Real Estate Salespeople know the Northwest Suburbs well they can point out the many advantages of the area and the many lovely locations that make living more comfortable and convenient.

Zale To Head Exposition On Housing

Edward Zale of Zale Construction has been named chairman of the newly-formed Home and Apartment Exposition Committee, according to Robert Arquilla, president of the Home Builders Association of Chicagoland. The exposition will be held Oct. 13 at the O'Hareport Hotel.

Zale, treasurer of HBAC and former president of the Apartment Council of Metropolitan Chicago, said the Home and Apartment Exposition is one of the many efforts on the part of HBAC to bring to the attention of home and apartment builders the newest, best, cost-cutting supplies available to them.

Zale said, "Pretesting builder and supplier attitudes suggests to us that this program will be a complete success and lead to making this an annual event."

Co-chairman is Arnold Greenberg of The Sampson Company. Greenberg is also chairman of the Apartment Council of Metropolitan Chicago's Associate Members Committee which is specifically organized to help suppliers work with builders to bring good housing to all the American people at the lowest possible cost.

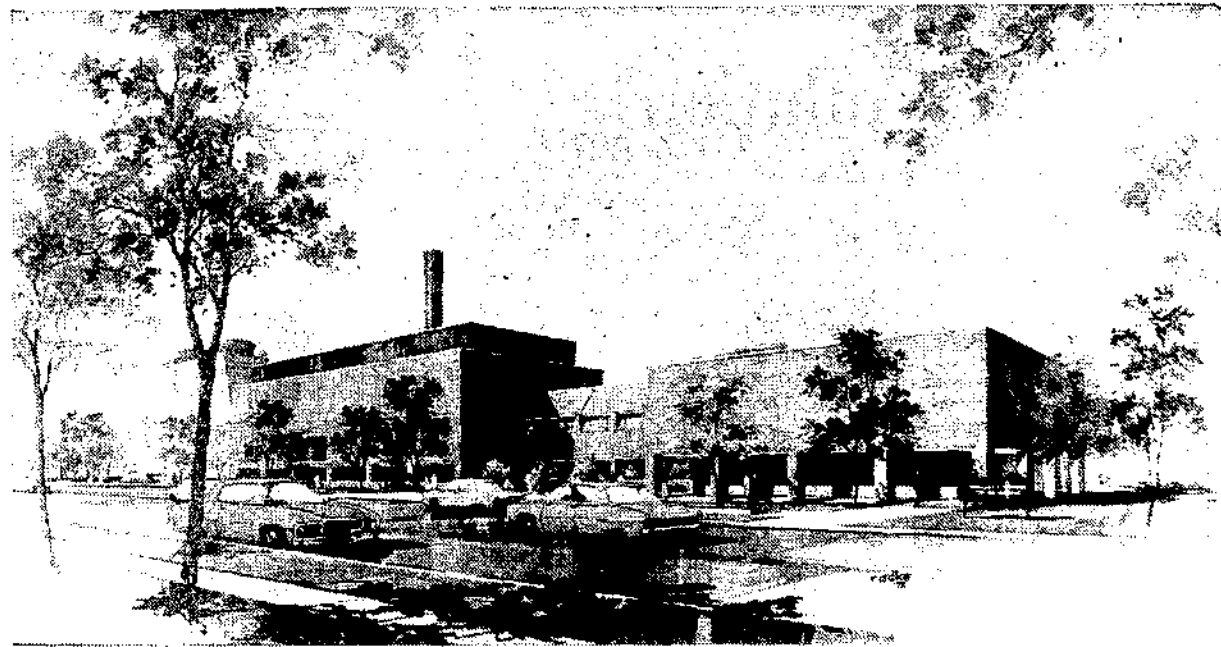

Other members of the Exposition committee are Rudy Gasten, Gasten-Rozansky, apartment builders and managers; Harold Wexler, The Levy Company; Greg Busey, Chicago Title Insurance Company; and Richard Inbinder, Richard Inbinder Associates.

Additional information about HBAC's Home and Apartment Exposition may be obtained by writing or calling Ms. Diane Moore, Home Builders Association of Chicagoland, 228 North LaSalle Street, Suite 2146, Chicago, Illinois 60601, telephone: 782-8657.

THIS IS THE ARCHITECT'S rendering of the new Propulsion Engineering Building to be built at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, by the Corbetta Construction Co. of Des Plaines, at a cost of nearly $5.7 million. It will provide, when completed in December, 1973, training in the operation of the 1,200 pound-per square-inch steam pressure systems that propel the Navy's newer ships.

Break Ground For Training Center

Ground was broken June 23 for a $5,696,000 Propulsion Engineering Training Building at the Service School Command at Great Lakes.

The facility will be used to train sailors in the operation of the 1,200 pound-per square-inch (psi) steam propulsion plant that powers the Navy's newer ships.

Or hand for the ground breaking were: Rear Admiral Draper L. Kauffman, commandant ninth naval district commander Great Lakes Naval Base; Capt. Wallace L. Talbot Jr., commander naval training center and Capt. Max H. Allen, civil engineering corps, resident officer in charge of construction at Great Lakes.

Also present were Mario Egidi, president of the Corbetta Construction Co. of Des Plaines, the plant's contractor; Hans Friedman of A. M. Kinney Associates, Inc., the plant's architects and engineers; Capt. John A. Smith, 1,200 psi steam propulsion plant improvement program manager, naval ship systems command, Washington, D.C.; and Capt. John

C. Loveday, commanding officer, service school command, Great Lakes.

AT PRESENT training for Navy enlisted men in the use of this new high pressure propulsion system is being conducted aboard the actual ships as they join the fleet. This new facility will enable more men to be trained in greater depth before they go to sea.

The new facility will duplicate a shipboard steam plant, but will also have enough space for a large number of trainees. The annual student output is expected to be 5,300 machinist mates, conventional and nuclear, 3,600 boilermen, and 3,600 engineers. After training at Great Lakes these men will go to the fleet to serve on 141 high-pressure propulsion ships.

Among these ships are the aircraft carriers, USS Saratoga, USS Ranger, USS Independence, USS Kitty Hawk, USS Constellation, USS America, and US John F. Kennedy. The high pressure systems are also used aboard newer guided missile destroyers like the US Mitscher, and the USS John S. McCain.

In a message to the participants at the ground breaking ceremony Vice Admiral Malcolm W. Cagle, chief of naval training, said:

"WE HAVE LONG needed this essential training facility to provide the fleet with boiler technicians and machinist's mates highly qualified to operate and maintain high pressure propulsion systems. I am confident that the thousands of personnel to be trained here will be so qualified."

In his remarks at the ground breaking, Rear Adm. Kauffman said that no matter how technologically advanced the Navy becomes "it is still men who put into action that technology."

He said that it was significant that at Great Lakes, thousands of miles from the nearest ocean, construction was beginning on a building "purposely designed to educate men to go to sea as specialists in steam propulsion, the heart of what propels our ships in the world's vast oceans."

MGM Group Specializes In Co-Ops

Converting co-operative apartment buildings to condominiums has become a specialty of a team of sales counselors at MGM Realty, Inc., 4023 Church St., Skokie, according to Robert B. Green, president.

"There are several thousand four apartment cooperatives in Chicago and Skokie which would have far more market value if they were converted to condominiums," Green said.

William S. Kaplan, director of project development for MGM, and Mrs. Millie Chalmers, divisional sales manager for MGM, are especially trained in the values of co-op conversions. They have formed a team to explain the benefits or conversion which includes both real estate and legal expertise.

Co-ops are difficult to sell, Green says, because there is one mortgage on the entire building, and a potential buyer of one apartment must have enough cash to buy the entire equity in the apartment. In most cases these apartments are almost paid for so a buyer must pay almost all cash to purchase one, or the owner must sell on contract. If the owner sells on contract, he is still tied to the building and does not get his money out immediately.

By converting co-ops to condominiums, Kaplan says, each apartment obtains its own fee simple title which enables each owner to get an individual mortgage. This makes his apartment as marketable as a home, Kaplan adds.

Kaplan estimates the cost of conversion at between $1,200 and $1,600 per building, or $300 to $400 per apartment.

"Our experience proves converting increases the apartment's value by 10 to 20 per cent," Kaplan says.

MGM has converted several co-ops to condominiums and has sold each of them almost immediately. They have buyers available for converted condominiums which Kaplan says is creating an entirely new real estate market.

Recreational Community Planned In Carroll County

A $60 million, 5,000-acre recreational second-home community will be built in Carroll County, Ill., it was announced by Henry J. Skorga, executive vice president of Russwood, Inc., Charlotte, N. C. The firm is the parent company of Russwood of Illinois, Inc., the developer of the property. The area is open now.

The recreation and vacation area will include a 600-acre lake with over 13 miles of shoreline, a ski complex, an 18-hole golf course, tennis courts, horseback riding trails, a bird sanctuary, clubhouse and theater barn. The second-home community is near Shannon, Ill., 20 miles southwest of Freeport, Ill.

It will be named Lake Carroll, after Carroll County and the prominent American for whom the county was named, Charles Carroll, signer of the Declaration of Independence, a wealthy Maryland landowner elected to Congress in 1776, announced Wilgus Gibbs, senior vice president, Russwood, Inc.

The resort is planned for year-round activities with recreational facilities in operation during all four seasons. A complete range of activities will be available, from fishing, boating swimming and water skiing in summer, to snow skiing, ice skating and snowmobiling in winter.

A MAIN feature of the winter sports area will be the ski complex which will be in operation by December, 1972. The complex will include several ski slopes, a double-chair lift, T-bar and beginners' lift. Permanent snow-making machinery will be installed, and ski lodge, ski shop and rental shop will be built. This facility is planned as a self-sustaining commercial enterprise.

Dick Carlson, until recently the ski school director at the Blue Knob Ski Area in south central Pennsylvania, will be director of skiing at Lake Carroll. He is a certified professional ski instructor of America (CPSIA), and has been a professional ski instructor at Blue Knob the past three seasons.

Adjacent to the ski lodge in the main recreational center will be a heated indoor/outdoor swimming pool with concrete deck.

In the winter sports area will be an ice skating rink, ski touring trails and snowmobiling trails. The ski area will be the first recreational facility to be completed, and will be in operation the winter of 1972-73.

THE TOPOGRAPHY of the Lake Carroll area is low, rolling hills with wooded areas, crossed by Plum River. A dam across the east fork of Plum River will create the 600-acre Lake Carroll.

All home sites will be arranged in sections, each one oriented to a predominant activity: the swim and tennis club (northern area), the golf course (eastern area), and the winter sports and main recreational complex (southern area).

Russwood, Inc., Charlotte, has created four recreational developments in the east in the past two years: Lake in the Pines, Woodrun and Carolina Forest, all in North Carolina; and Chickasaw Point, South Carolina.

Electric Heat In United States

By the end of 1972, 10 per cent of all homes in the United States will be heated electrically, Frank H. Roby, president of Sola Basic Industries, told electric heating representatives at the National Electric Heating and Comfort Systems Exposition.

Wheeling Sales Listed

Fifty-nine property sales in Arlington Heights indicated increased activity in the housing market, according to the latest monthly Wheeling township real estate transfer report from Cook County Recorder Sidney R. Olsen.

There were 21 sales in Mount Prospect, 19 in Buffalo Grove, six in Prospect Heights, and 21 in Wheeling and the rest of the township.

Olsen recorded the following property transfers for the township. The list shows the purchase price of equity and does not include the amount of a mortgage which the purchaser may have assumed. The price is indicated by the amount of state revenue stamps on the document ($1 in stamps for each $1,000 of market value).

Turnberry

Main Office Phone (312) 372-2040

Turnberry is for people, young and old, who have a real zest for living.

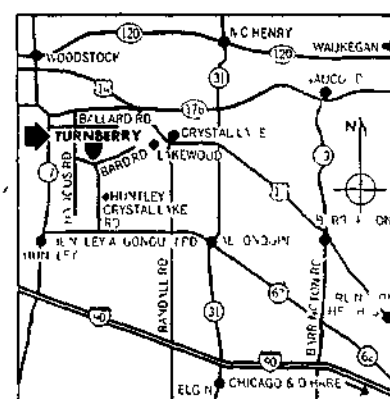

There are 1100 acres of woods, hills and valleys to be hiked, biked, explored and enjoyed. Three beautiful lakes of nearly eighty acres to be fished and sailed. And the private Turnberry Country Club includes a championship golf course, an imposing French Normandy Clubhouse high on a hilltop with breathtaking views of lakes, fairways and surrounding countryside. An Olympic-size pool set dramatically into the hillside, and tournament-quality tennis courts adjoin. That's the good life at Turnberry. Every day is a vacation from busy city life—the first year-round community of its kind in the Chicago suburbs.

Turnberry, in the village of Lakewood, is a 10-minute drive from the Crystal Lake North Western Station. The Loop is within easy reach by air-conditioned trains. O'Hare Airport and all of Chicagoland are readily accessible by expressways.

Patterned after Arthur T. McIntosh & Company's Inverness— unquestionably one of the most distinctive and beautiful villages in the Midwest, Turnberry has similar protective covenants assuring that the basic way of living—the good life at Turnberry—will never change.

There are no ordinary homesites at Turnberry. Here, the crest of a hill, a lush green fairway, a beautiful lake or century-old trees adjoin your living room.

Homesites average ¾ of an acre, and more important, have a minimum of 150 feet of frontage. Prices range from $16,000 to $34,000. All sites are fully improved with winding paved roads, water, sewer and underground utilities.

Take Northwest Tollway (90) to Barrington Rd. North to Algonquin Rd. (62), then northwest on 62 into Town of Algonquin. Cross Rt. 31 and go straight ahead (west) 5 miles on Huntley-Algonquin Rd. Turn north on Huntley-Crystal Lake Rd. to property. Watch for signs.

Barton Stull, president of Barton Stull Realty, Inc., announced that Daniel F. Gudgeon, sales manager of the firm's

Daniel Gudgeon

Hoffman Estates office, passed $1 million in residential real estate sales late in May.

Gudgeon has been associated with the firm for three years, having been promoted to sales manager in July 1971. He, his wife Gail and their four children reside at 786 White Birch Ln., Lake Zurich.

A charter member of the Lake Zurich Jaycees, he has served on its board of directors as president, vice president and membership chairman.

Landlords, Tenants

Hail Zone Control

Zone control, the most modern method of temperature control for apartments, is being hailed by tenants and landlords alike, says the Chicago-based Better Heating-Cooling Council.

By having a thermostat in every apartment, tenants have full control over their individual "climate." Equally happy are the landlords. So long as the tenants can regulate their own heat, there are no more complaints that the apartment is either too cold or too hot.

Significantly, too, the council points out, heating costs are reduced as much as 20 per cent. In the old days when apartments seemed to be overheated, tenants opened windows. Now, tenants keep their apartments at the temperature they want. As a result, little heat is wasted.

Unless the apartment is quite large, one thermostat is sufficient, the council says. Having a control in every room is neither necessary nor practical. Most people forget to lower the setting when they leave a room and the whole purpose is wasted.

The Difference Between A House And A Home: People

by LEA TONKIN

Mom and Dad, are you in a quandary about what to look for in your new home? Here are some inside views on just what it takes to build a happy home in the Northwest suburbs.

Looking in on a world of kids and pets and Mom's cooking and Dad's hard-working ways was the fun part of a recent stint as contest judge for Why I Like My Home contest sponsored by Kolo Real Estate, Ltd. After reading more than 250 entries in the contest I feel right at home in this world and I'd like to share some of the special qualities most appreciated by young people in well-lived homes.

If a home could be built as the best of all possible homes it would take on many shapes and sizes. It could be a new home or one with a lived-in look. Endearing qualities could range from a shiny and clean appearance to a dark and mysterious atmosphere, a leaky roof and a wealth of nooks and crannies.

Some of the young people, ages 14 years and younger, presented a physical description of their homes. A far greater share put the love and understanding of family and friends and pets and neighbors at the top of their list.

"You can build any structure made out of wood, brick, steel or any material, but it's just a house until a family moves in and shares their lives with each other," wrote Dave Boedy of Des Plaines. "Then it becomes a home."

WONDERFUL people living inside, a feeling of warmth, a place to shed fears and sorrows, a place to be happy, a bright and cheerful place, a place where you can come after vacation and flop on the bed, a place where you can find the answer to all your questions, where you are loved and where people you love are inside: a home is all of these things, said the children over and over again in their essays.

"Who needs a housewarming with kids? You'll have all the warming you'll need!" said Susan Sakowicz of Des Plaines.

Accounts of Mom's delicious cooking and the way Dad gets up every morning to work for money to keep a happy home abounded. Even parents' discipline ranked high on the list of many homes' good qualities. Marilaine Anderson of Park Ridge wrote, "I like my home also because although parents are nice they are also strict. That's a very nice way of saying parents love you."

Not surprisingly, the young people often spoke of pets right alongside the human members of the household in their accounts of home life. Launching into a tale of family life, James Philbin of Niles begins "Let's go inside where mom, dad, two sisters, two brothers a poodle dog and my two gerbils live. I'm not lonely."

STEVE GOLBECK of Rolling Meadows notes that the difference between a house and a home is the people. This includes seven children, one a dog and a mother and father, by the way. Topping one girl's list of likable attributes at home are "my parents, my brothers, my cat and everything in my home (except the liver in the freezer)."

Sometimes a superior home takes on a personality of its own. One child said her home talks with her when she is lonely.

The peace and quiet of home were cited by some of the young people as a standard of excellence. To Joanne Swanson of Des Plaines it is a place to come home "after a hard day at school," and a place to go after a vacation. Another Des Plaines girl, noting she likes the peaceful atmosphere of home, said she likes her dog best because "she doesn't make any noise or fuss except when she goes to the bathroom."

Security, privacy, "and a lot of other talents" are important features of home, according to Jeff Steson of Des Plaines. "A home is a place to feel safe while watching a scary movie. A home is love," says Debbie Beck of Des Plaines.

"SPEAKING OF security, one contestant said you'd have to downright throw yourself into the walls of her house to knock it down. Another chimes in that his home isn't falling down "like the average home." Police protection was a benefit cited by a Des Plaines contestant.

The appearance of a home is important to some of the children who entered the contest. A Mount Prospect girl, explaining why she's not embarrassed to bring her friends home, said "I like my house because it's not real luxurious, or wild, or sloppy, but just casual and plain, but nice." When people slow down to look at his house, a Des Plaines boy said it "makes me feel that they like it as much as we do."

A home which just fits a family is important to many of the contestants. "My home has nice big rooms so we're not squished," comments one girl. A house that's so big you can see all the neighborhood was cited by Greg Ratliff of Des Plaines. And the best part of another entrant's home is that "I don't share it with my two brothers or my 4½ year old sister," said another.

Places to go and things to do within a home were often included in the entries. Among these were a slanted driveway for bike-riding, and a livingroom ceiling where you can let a balloon on a string go up 20 feet in the air and clean floors so you can run upstairs in your bare feet.

THE "NOOKS AND crannies to be discovered" distinguish the home of Jill Goldstein of Palatine, in addition to family and friends. Then there are the two sets of stairs to be found in an Arlington Heights home, "so that if one is crowded you can go up the other." Lots of hide-and-seek hiding places are another mark of distinction in a child's home.

Houses which are close to school, shopping and playgrounds and other attractions received high ratings from the local children. In fact an Arlington Heights girl put "skool" at the top of the list of her home's star qualities.

The list of extras especially appealing to the younger set is varied and unexpected. A nine-year-old from Park Ridge included "nice places to visit, nice banking places, good polishment, nice dog." Comfy carpeting like grass was mentioned by several children who like to wiggle their toes in it. Doors so you can go in and out as well as lights so you can see should of course be included in any respectable home, according to one contestant. Being "in the country where I was born" adds appeal to a home, says another.

TREES TO CLIMB and bathrooms with a faucet where you can get any temperature of water are important to some of the young people. Old cement stairs inside that go nowhere and a chimney that makes "neat howly noises" when the wind blows through are some of the things coming to Judy Furton's mind when she talks about her Arlington Heights home.

Dixie Lee Gorham of Elk Grove Village likes "the smells of home — the aroma of fresh baked bread or cookies baking." A built-in kitchen fan is a definite plus when it comes to unwanted aromas, says another entrant from Des Plaines.

Suburban living, "away from the crowded cities with their air pollution, water and garbage pollutions" make home in Des Plaines a good place to be, said another contestant.

The responsibilities of living in a single-family home were duly noted by several of the children. Shoveling snow, cutting grass and mopping up the basement floor are worthwhile tasks at home because it is something to believe in, says Allan Kaplan of Niles.

A home should also keep its occupants comfy. Keeping cool during the summer and warm and snug in the wintertime makes you want to come back home.

Baird & Warner Posts Sale Gain

Baird & Warner, Inc., leading Chicago-area real estate firm, posted strong increases in both unit and dollar volume for the month of May, according to John L. Hall, senior vice president and general sales manager.

Hall said the 117-year-old firm, which now has 28 offices in Chicago and suburbs, participated in 399 sales during May, a production gain of 18.4 per cent over 337 participations in May, 1971.

Even though the sales staff fell an eyelash short of posting the first 400 sale month in the firm's history, they managed to roll up $21,732,210 in volume, Hall said. The figure represents an increase of 34.4 per cent over the year-ago figure of $14,290,171.

The five months through May sales production is slightly ahead of the firm's record-breaking pace of a year ago and dollar volume is better than 25 per cent above last year's January-May figure.

"We credit a high level of employment in Chicago's stable economy for the strong performance of our firm and other real estate companies," said Hall. "Earnings and savings are working together to sustain a strong mortgage market at favorable interest rates. These factors are also maintaining a sense of consumer confidence in the economy that is playing a strong part in keeping real estate transactions perkier."

Kitchen Efficiency Hints

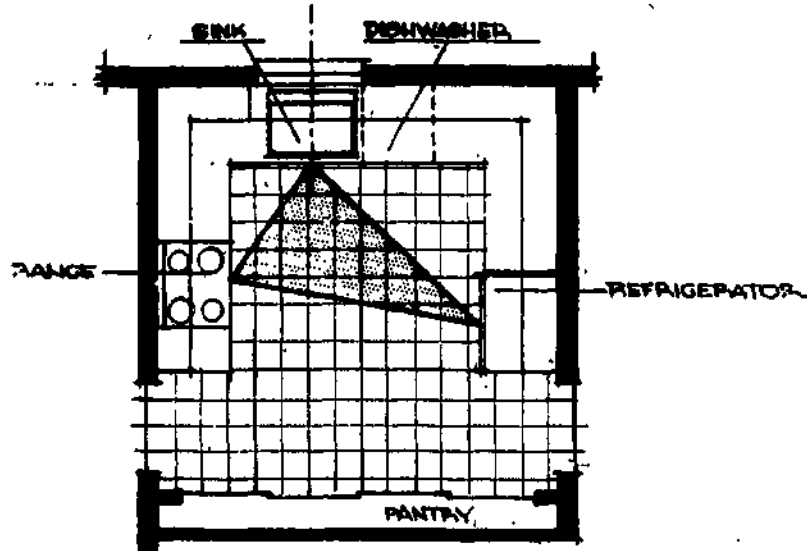

Looking for a new home or apartment can be easier if you have a few guidelines to go by.

Since the kitchen is such an important factor in making everyday living easy and enjoyable, the following pointers from Hotpoint's Kitchen and Laundry Planning Service can help you determine if the kitchen is planned for efficiency.

The layout of the kitchen is one of the most important considerations, so first check the location of major appliances, Hotpoint suggests. Often what appears on the surface to be an attractive kitchen is in reality not planned for the best utilization of space and equipment. Look for faulty design such as appliance doors that can block the kitchen aisle when open, and inconvenient and time wasting appliance location factors, such as the range and refrigerator side by side.

The sequence of work in a kitchen moves from storage to preparation to cook and serve. The logical arrangement then has the refrigerator and its associated storage areas for foodstuffs near the service entrance, followed by the sink

Kitchen Work Triangle

(or mixing) center, then the cook and serve area, located as conveniently to the dining room or breakfast nook as possible.

Studies have shown that more than half of the work done in the kitchen is performed at the sink. Therefore in the ideal situation, the sink center is between the refrigerator center and the cooking center.

The kitchen divided into these three centers forms what is called the "work triangle." (Shown in illustration.)

Without exception, experienced kitchen planners agree that each major appliance center must have some working counter available. Under the most desirable conditions, the refrigerator should have a minimum of 15 inches of counter top at the opening side for loading and unloading, and the range serves best if counter space is available on both sides. In the case of the sink, it is a must to have no less than 24 inches of counter on each side to provide the space needed for a dishwasher.

Placing unrelated appliances side by side, such as the refrigerator and oven, is a common planning error which overlooks the need for functional counter space. If there is a built-in oven, the open door of the highest oven should be lower than the user's elbow. Mounting too high can make it difficult to remove roasting and baking pans.

Also, check the doors of cabinets and appliances to see if they seriously block traffic aisles when open. This is especially important in a corridor-type kitchen arrangement where appliances face each other. The width of the aisle should be a minimum of 42 inches, and preferably 48 inches. A narrow aisle can result in many clumsy, uncomfortable work patterns due to working in a limited space.

If there is a separate dining room and breakfast area, the ideal location for the kitchen is between the two. This eliminates many tiring extra steps from the kitchen through the breakfast area to the dining room during the serving of a formal dinner.

By keeping these hints in mind as you look for a new home or apartment, you can most accurately evaluate which one is best suited for your needs.

Overhaul Season

Adding a bathroom is one of the most popular home modernization projects, reports the Illinois Assn. of Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Contractors. Another is the addition of a family room with an entertainment center that includes a sink, running water, instant hot water dispenser and ice-makers. Backyard patios, kitchen updating and central air conditioning follow right behind in the home remodeling parade.

Many families like to put off major remodeling projects until spring or summer. However, most contractors have more time during winter to give your project special attention. However, summer is the best time to overhaul or replace a heating system, since the system is already shut down and the family isn't inconvenienced in any way.

Sewing Nook Needs Space For Storage

There are more sewing machines than bathtubs in American homes — a statistic that can lead to a number of conclusions.

One is that a high percentage of homes in this affluent nation lack essential facilities. Another that showers are preferred to tubs. According to a report from Michigan State University's Cooperative Extension Service, however, it indicates a home sewing "hobby explosion."

The average sewing hobbyist, says the report, is in the 18 to 30 age bracket, above-average in intelligence and income, and has a strong interest in fashion. Enjoyment of sewing and the opportunity it offers to save money both figure in the hobby's growing popularity.

In advising how to make the most of this hobby, the report suggests the need for proper equipment and sufficient space depending on the kind and extent of sewing done. While some hobbyists could use a separate sewing room, others might do with a sewing closet.

Basic needs are simple. Other than a machine, storage is the biggest requirement. A panel or two of perforated hardboard is practical for storage. Hooks which fit into the perforations are ideal for hanging spools of thread — easily visible and close at hand. Also, the panels can be used as pin-up boards for patterns.

Panel of perforated hardboard are not expensive, come plain or in attractive finishes, and are easy to install. They are fastened to furring strips over the existing wall. A 1/4-inch clearance is needed behind the panel for hook insertion.

We just can't keep a secret. Especially when we have something to tell that's new and exciting.

We have hired a leading, nationally-known architect to design the most dramatic, livable and interesting homes ever built in the Chicago area. Reservations now being accepted.

They are real designer homes with sunken living rooms, cathedral ceilings, lots of glass, balconies and loft/dens. Houses that are not cramped, little rooms lined up under one roof, but rather houses that really lift the spirit, with spaces that soar upward and right through the house to spacious outdoor living areas.

Homes are priced from the low forties.

These new home designs will be featured in The Timbers of Old Mill Grove, the newest section of our successful community in the Northwest Suburbs.

HOUSING CONSULTANT Sanford Goodkin told the annual meeting of the American Plywood Association in Portland, Ore., the nation's home builders and the softwood plywood industry should jointly consider problems of rising plywood prices. He added the "essential thrust behind the rising prices seems to be composed of forces which may be substantially beyond the control of the individual plywood producer." Goodkin advised the industry representatives to counsel the federal government to establish a more coherent, productive timber harvesting policy.

The Volunteer Bureau

The Bureau Is Helping High Schools, Too

by ESTHER RABCHUK

Recently this newspaper ran an article on the volunteers in the grade schools who were helping in the library, learning centers, etc., and what a boon it has been to the elementary schools who are on very tight budgets these years. It also gave the other side of the picture in that the volunteers themselves related they enjoyed the experience and were planning on returning to the assignment when school reopens in the fall. The Volunteer Service Bureau, Northwest Cook County is not surprised this benefit to both sides has developed. The concept of the Bureau was it would be to the benefit of both the giver and the receiver of that gift, and it remains as a concept of the Bureau.

You may ask, however, what is taking place in the secondary schools? In the high schools of Dist. 214 covering Wheeling and Elk Grove Townships there are also volunteers giving of their time and talent. Again, the schools are appreciative and they show this, as do some of the elementary schools, in providing help to the Bureau through space for the bureau office at the administration center at 789 W. Kensington Road, Mount Prospect (phone, 398-1320). Various services as aid in dictating, printing, mimeographing, letterhead are also available. Districts 25, 21, 27, 15, and 214 all contribute monies to the operation of the bureau which is added to the sources of the Arlington Heights United Fund and the Mount Prospect Combined Appeal and the gifts of various individuals and groups in the area to provide a total budget of less than $12,000.

In the high schools the volunteer help again is in two distinct categories — service and enrichment. The service volunteers are such as aid to the school nurse with her office work as she carries the responsibility of an enrollment the size of a small city — around 2,500 students. The counseling offices have office aid as do the libraries, and some volunteers are known as chaperone volunteers who go with students on various field trips.

THE ENRICHMENT volunteers are those who come into the classroom to add to the curriculum of the class beyond or alongside that of the classroom teacher. In Hersey High School of Arlington Heights through the able coordination of Mayme Andrews, Volunteer Coordinator, programs such as speakers on Buddhism, Moslem, Hindu, Bahai, South America, carpeting, kitchen planning, Civil War, American Civil Liberties Union, sales contracts. South Africa were arranged. There were panel presentations on "The Role of Women in 1971" and "Welfare in the Suburbs," and the late Emerson Thomas was a volunteer lecturer on Human Relations.

Another facet of the volunteer movement is the increasing opportunities of high school students to be volunteers with a dual purpose of providing a fulfilling experience for the student as he knows he is appreciated, and providing an educational experience as he learns about his community and the people of the community. The Social Agencies such as Little City, home for the retarded; Headstart, daycare for the culturally deprived children; the Lutheran Home, facilities for aged; Maryville, home for children who are wards of the court; Inner city-suburban day camps, and camps for the handicapped such as conducted by the Girl Scouts and Northwest Cerebral Palsy League are all examples of locations for student volunteers. During the school year many of the high schoolers are able to be volunteers with the elementary schools, also.

This summer high schoolers 17 years and up are able to be volunteers in Dist. 25 schools in Arlington Heights.

A volunteer program which considers the welfare of the volunteer is an enjoyable experience, and it doesn't surprise the Bureau when both the giver of the gift and the receiver of that gift receive benefits, both tangible and intangible. Come on in, the water's fine.

Environmental Link To Behavior Is Studied

(This column is presented by Forest Hospital, in Des Plaines, a fully-accredited 135-bed psychiatric hospital, widely known for its intensive programs in psychiatric treatment, research, education and community service.)

In our day of big cities, large population and all kinds of recognized pollution, psychiatrists are trying to understand what kind of effect our environment is having on our behavior.

Mardi Horowitz, M.D., a San Francisco psychiatrist who is a member of a special task force assigned by the American Psychiatric Association to study this problem, says he is looking for a common language for design engineers, architects, environmental psychologists, clinical psychiatrists and sociologists to use in defining some of the problems of man's present world.

"People are talking a great deal about pollution," he explained, "and there are various kinds of pollution: visual and auditory as well as the commonly discussed air and water pollution.

"We know there is a continuous level of noise — which can be harmful — in urban centers. There is a continuous noise of the street and the impact noise which comes episodically with a plane or sonic boom or the sledge hammers of construction.

"There have been a few findings — strange results — of auditory testing," he continued. "People are developing digestive problems from very high vibratory levels. In other words it is possible that the noise from planes, cars, etc., is responsible for disturbances of the digestive tract. Of course, it has been easy to see that loud rock music causes at least transitory hearing impairment but this idea of intestinal disorder developing from exposure to noise is not expected."

DR. HOROWITZ explained we are also subjected to visual pollution. "There is a daily bombardment of visual stimulation which comes in the form of billboards, signs and a tremendous amount of print: newspapers, magazines, books and advertising circulars to name some. There is also a tremendous velocity of contact with other people."

How much of this environment can people screen out? How much overstimulates them? How much of what is seen is perceived then registered but not processed or finished being thought about because the next stimulus is upon them?

"People can filter out," Dr. Horowitz said, "so they alter their controls or defenses and don't pay attention to certain things. If a person does this — that is if he does control or defend himself from the visual, auditory and human contact bombardment then that person is changing the nature of his being. You are a different person today because you have for the past weeks, months and years used those controls and defenses."

Dr. Horowitz admits very little is known about the effects of this filtering but he does say human behavior is changed because of it and the issue is a very important social one.

"There is a lot of pain and suffering inflicted in people by population density and the bombardment of overstimulation related to overcrowding. There is an unwanted intrusion by other people as well as by the environment created by our society."

BARBEQUE ITALIANO

Grilled Ravioli Packets

- 3 slices bologna
- 3 slices salami
- 1 can (15 oz.) beef or cheese ravioli
- 1 tablespoon chopped scallions
- 4 teaspoons Parmesan cheese

Cut 4 pieces of aluminum foil 10-inch x 12-inch. Fold in half, joining the two 10-inch sides.

Cut bologna and salami in 1/2-inch strips. Place 8 or 9 strips in the center of each piece of foil. Top with ravioli (about 4 per packet) and chopped scallions. Sprinkle each with 1 teaspoon Parmesan cheese. Pull two sides of foil together and fold over tightly. Close both ends so packets are sealed. Place on grill over hot coals and heat. Or if you prefer, place in 400 degree oven for 20 minutes. Serves 4.

Italian Barbecued Chicken

- 1 broiler-fryer chicken, quartered
- Salt & pepper
- 1 jar, 16-oz. meatless spaghetti sauce
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 4 tablespoons brown sugar
- 3 tablespoons vinegar
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- Several dashes hot pepper sauce

Season chicken with salt and pepper. Combine remaining ingredients and heat thoroughly. Grill chicken over slow coals about 45 minutes, brushing often with sauce. Turn chicken two or three times during cooking. Serves 4.

Herbed Garlic Bread

- 1 loaf Italian bread
- 4 tablespoons soft butter
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 teaspoon crumbled parsley flakes
- 1/4 teaspoon crumbled oregano

Cut bread diagonally into thick slices. Combine remaining ingredients; mix thoroughly. Spread butter mixture between slices. Wrap bread in aluminum foil. Place on grill and heat 15-20 minutes, turning occasionally.

Pasta Bean Pot

- 1 can (15 oz.) Beefaroni
- 1 can (15 oz.) pork and beans
- 1 small onion, sliced
- 3 tablespoons brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- 1 teaspoon chili powder

Mr. And Mrs. Bob Karlicek

They Entertain With Hawaiian Accents

by LOIS SEILER

A Japanese garden, complete with a waterfall, pond and a small bridge, provides a picturesque setting for the backyard luau planned by Bob and Jean Karlicek of Arlington Heights.

The Karliceks gave their first luau about twelve years ago. It was such a success that they have given them several times since.

Twinkling lights on the trees, Hawaiian music, leis for the guests and appetizing Polynesian-type food contribute to the festive atmosphere of this summer party.

"I don't restrict luau to summertime entertaining, but have also given them in February," Jean Karlicek explained. To achieve an effect of the Islands, Jean hangs Hawaiian posters on the walls and uses bright place mats and exotic fruit arrangements on the tables.

"A luau can be effective in dispelling the mid-winter doldrums," she added, "and you don't have to worry about the weather co-operating."

She recalls many a summer party that had to be moved indoors. "The garage can also be used for luau, with the walls hung with posters and fishnets," Jean remarked.

Ideally, if the weather cooperates, luau are perfect for the summer months when guests can eat outdoors in true Hawaiian style.

"However, I have found that they like chairs better than low tables on the ground," Jean laughingly remarked. She makes other concessions to American tastes, too, such as having coffee available during and after dinner.

Her guests dress appropriately for the occasion — women in muu muus or bright shifts and men in colorful print shirts and cut-offs. Jean provides leis for all the guests, made from colored tissues.

Bob makes the punch from pineapple juice, apricot nectar, orange juice and gingerale spiked with vodka or gin. Jean has fresh sugar-coated fruit and macadamia nuts available for guests to nibble on prior to dinner.

"My menu is not authentically Hawaiian, as we've never tried to roast a suckling pig," Jean explained.

"The recipes just sort of evolved over the years," she said. "I acquired some from family and friends, and added this and that to suit my taste. All of the entrees have a Polynesian flavor and seem to be well-enjoyed by our guests."

Jean enjoys her luau too, because all of the preparations can be done in advance.

"It's really an easy menu," she said, "as all of the recipes are simple to prepare. The hostess can mingle with her guests and enjoy her own party."

Active in the Arlington Heights Nurses'

Club, Jean's complete luau menu is featured in the club's new "Tender Loving Cookbook." It includes Sweet-Sour Ribs, Sweet-Sour Ham, Chicken Teriyaki, Brown Bread and a Cucumber Salad.

Jean has her butcher cut spareribs into ribs and after browning them in a hot oven, she pours off the grease and bakes them, covered, in a sweet-sour sauce that makes the ribs both tender and flavorful.

The sweet-sour ham simply consists of a sauce made from pineapple juice, vinegar, and brown sugar, to which ham cubes, green pepper and pineapple chunks are added. This is served over rice or Chinese noodles.

The Chicken Teriyaki is made by marinating legs, thighs and breasts of chicken in a mixture of soy sauce, sugar and wine seasoned with garlic and ginger, then baking the chicken in its marinade.

"AT THE FIRST LUAU I ever gave, people seemed to be looking around for some type of bread to eat with this meal," Jean said.

"I wasn't prepared for this, as bread is not compatible with luau," she continued, "but I remembered that I had some Boston Brown Bread from Bob's mother in the freezer. I quickly heated it up and served it. It really complemented the meal, so I have included it ever since."

The brown bread is easily mixed together, and is baked in empty round tin cans. Soup cans may be used, but Jean prefers the larger, 16-ounce Franco-American spaghetti cans.

"Some chemical reaction must take place when the bread is baked in cans," Jean commented, "as it does not turn brown if baked in a regular bread pan."

The cucumber salad, which Jean makes in a fish mold, has a tangy flavor and is served with a nippy sauce which also goes well with the main dishes.

After such a hearty meal, Jean has found that her guests are seldom anxious for dessert. However, she has sherbet and coconut cookies available for those who wish a bit of sweet.

The busy mother of six children, Bob, 19, Bill, 18, Tom, 16, Tim, 13, Kathy, 12, and Karl, 8, Jean still finds time to entertain, to sew for herself and her children, and to make 3-D pictures. She also is lending closet chairman for the Nurses' Club, active in PTA, a Brownie troop leader and a member of the CFM at St. Raymond's Catholic Church.

The following luau menu is enough for six hearty appetites.

PARTY PUNCH

1 can (46-ounce) pineapple juice
1 can (46 ounces) apricot nectar
1 large can frozen orange juice, diluted as per directions on can
1 quart gingerale
Vodka or gin to taste

HAWAIIAN MUSIC, leis, and appetizing Polynesian-type food add to the festive atmosphere of Bob and Jean Karlicek's backyard luau. Bob lends a hand by preparing a fruit juice punch which he sugar-coated fruit and macadamia nuts available for appetizers.

Just before serving, add gingerale and spirits. You may keep punch cold with rainbow sherbet, if desired.

Franfare

Mastering a good yeast starter has become almost as great a challenge to adventurous bread bakers as french pastries.

Even though packaged yeast is available and inexpensive many homemakers are trying their hand with the starter. Several people seem to be having bad luck, the problems being that the starter turns sour. Others have successfully made the starter only to have problems with the bread.

A functional yeast starter brings personal satisfaction for cooks today however the original idea was born of necessity.

Yeast was not easy to obtain and a starter was used to insure an always ready, inexpensive source. Once a good starter was made it could theoretically last forever.

Water in which potatoes were cooked was commonly used and most cooks added a bit of potato to feed the yeast. Very old recipes require a handful of hops. The yeast was allowed to grow on the potato base then kept as a starter for making bread.

The starter could be kept for several weeks in a cool cellar or well house or in cold weather in the pantry.

In warm weather one shared the starter with neighbors to keep it usable. When bread was needed, a cup or so of the starter was made into a sponge with water, sugar and flour. After rising overnight, salt, fat and flour were added, the dough kneaded to smoothness, allowed to rise and baked.

YEAST STARTER

2 cups sliced potatoes
1 quart water
2 teaspoons salt
1 cup sugar
1 package yeast

Cook potatoes in water until very soft. Drain, reserving liquid. Force potatoes through a food mill, sieve, or ricer. Combine with the water in which they were cooked, adding salt and sugar. Cool to lukewarm and stir in yeast. Pour into a clean, scalded-then-cooled, 2-quart container, cover and let rise at room temperature. Stir or shake down several times as foam rises, until fermentation stops. Store in a covered jar in the refrigerator using as needed until there is 1/2 cup left. Then make starter again, using remaining starter in place of required yeast.

WHITE BREAD

1 1/2 cups warm water 3/4 cup starter
1 1/3 cup sugar
2 cups flour

Beat all ingredients thoroughly in a large bowl. Cover and let stand at room temperature overnight or 12 hours. In the morning add the following:
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons shortening
3 to 4 cups flour

Add enough flour to dough to form a thick hard-to-stir mass. Turn on a heavily floured board and knead for 10 minutes. Use no more flour than necessary to keep dough from sticking. Place kneaded dough in greased bowl. Cover and allow to rise until very tight. Place on lightly floured board. Shape into loaves or rolls and allow to rise until finger gently pressed into the dough leaves an imprint. Bake as usual for any bread recipe.

Easy Dairy Sauces

This luscious Lemon Sour Cream Dressing will top your summer salads with tangy flavor. Gently blend 1/2 tablespoon of fresh lemon juice and 2 tablespoons of confectioners sugar into 1/2 cup of dairy sour cream. Chill and serve on fruit salads. Yield: 1/2 cup.

Bring out all of the flavor of that freshly picked asparagus with Asparagus A La Lemon Butter sauce. In a small saucepan melt 1/4 cup (1/2 stick) of butter and add 1 1/2 tablespoons of lemon juice. Pour over asparagus. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Serves six vegetable lovers.

The Development Of New Products

(Ninth In A Series)
Almost every time you shop for food, you'll discover new products on the shelves, ready and waiting for your consideration and evaluation. New products can take the form of a totally new food, a new or improved package or a major variation of an existing item.

Figures are often stated which indicate that 80 per cent or more of new food products do not last on the market. That figure may be overstated for experienced food marketers do considerable research before introducing a new product. Such companies are certain that the new product will fill a consumer need, that the price is right, and that the consumer will find the product useful and rewarding. This information is gained through well-planned consumer testing.

The first step in bringing a new product to market is concept testing, wherein consumer reaction is carefully studied. In concept testing, the consumer pretends the product already exists and rates it according to his need and the product advantages and convenience he thinks it will offer.

When the proposed concept passes this test, the next step is to evaluate the company's resources and production abilities. What technical know-how is required? Are raw materials available?

Next, the product enters the test market for further consumer testing in actual market situations where all factors of new product introduction—advertising, distribution, merchandising—can be assessed. This testing is usually conducted in a limited area, and the new product takes its place on the shelves of local supermarkets amid myriad competing products. Consumer acceptance under these conditions is carefully evaluated. It is only when success is reasonably assured that a food marketer will invest in the expensive purchase of mass production equipment, advertising investment, introductory offers to encourage first purchase, and inventory.

In the competition for space on the grocer's shelves, the introduction of new foods often leads to discontinuation of older established products. This attrition of products generally provides a constantly improved food supply. Since the consumer's right of free choice is the dominant factor in acceptance of new products, the consumer can be sure of being best served. No successful retailer or food producer fails to realize that new products succeed only when they provide a demonstrable reward for the consumer, and they will not give time, investment, or effort to the offering of a new product unless consumer need, desire, satisfaction, and acceptance is reasonably established.

The brand name on a product guarantees quality and is your insurance of product satisfaction.

Because a family of products is sold under one brand "umbrella," your first assurance is that all products bearing that name live up to the manufacturer's standards for goodness. The product would not be included in the family if it did not measure up. Food manufacturers keep careful records of product sales and performance, measuring the success of each of their products and eliminating those that do not meet consumer needs.

Strict quality control procedures are followed—from people in the field helping farmers produce higher quality raw materials to an alert sales force in the retail stores constantly inspecting the product to be sure it is properly handled and stored.

A brand name offers insurance in another way, too. If you are not satisfied with the product for any reason, you can write the manufacturer. Reputable companies make every effort to provide consumer satisfaction. They want your reactions and your reasons for dissatisfaction. They help to make improvements in existing items and develop better products for the future.

Plain Talk about Beef Quality...

To make the most of your food dollar, it's essential to recognize value and quality in the meat you purchase for your family. Buying quality beef need not be a difficult job if you know a few factors that help in determining beef quality. First, look for a cut of meat that contains the least amount of fat, bone and gristle. A tender cut of beef should have fat distributed uniformly through the cut. A glance at the meat surface should reveal a fine grain and a smooth velvety texture. In selecting quality beef, meat color is also a good guide. Fresh beef has a uniform bright, light to deep red color. Cost per serving coincides with beef quality, for example...beef with a medium amount of fat and bone will yield about two or three servings per pound. Beef with little or no fat will yield three or four servings per pound. To figure cost per serving divide the price per pound into the servings per pound. An extremely lean cut of beef may cost more initially, but the cost per serving could prove to be more economical. Buying beef wisely can be a two part problem, but one you can solve easily. Half the problem is solved when you know the factors, we just gave you, that contribute greatly to the quality and value of the meat you purchase. The other part of the problem is solved when you find a supermarket that offers value and quality consistently. Bonded meats from your Eagle Discount Supermarket are consistently wholesome, fine quality meats selected to meet our high standards. The meat selected must be uniform in quality, tender, flavorful and juicy. Eagle Bonded Beef is always quality...always trimmed properly and discount priced...and always unconditionally Bonded.

Mostly For Men

Tomato dishes add measurably to any menu whether it's an outdoor cookout or regular dinner. With good home grown ripe tomatoes plentiful at this time, here's a favorite way of serving.

Wash tomatoes and cut a small cavity in the top, removing bud stem. Fill this with chopped red onion and cover onion with a generous topping of grated cheddar or parmesan cheese.

Broil until cheese browns and tomato softens. Serve piping hot. This can be done with canned tomatoes. I place tomatoes and liquid in a baking pan, then cover each tomato with a small slice of red onion and top with the grated cheese.

Put under the broiler for 10 to 15 minutes.

Here's a corn and tomato dish which is strictly a man's recipe but I note that the girls like it too. Dice and fry 2 to 3 slices thick bacon until crisp and reserve.

Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a saucepan and add 2 cups canned tomatoes and 1/4 cup chopped onion. Cook until onions are soft then add 1 cup drained whole kernel corn and simmer for 30 minutes. Just before serving add the crisp bacon. Enough for 8.

A FRIEND OF mine has a wonderful recipe for baked tomatoes. Wash 3 large ripe tomatoes and cut off the tops, scooping out a little from centers to make a well.

Melt 1/4 cup butter and blend with 1 teaspoon dried oregano, 1/4 cup bread crumbs and salt and pepper to your taste. Place the tomatoes in a lightly greased baking pan and fill the well in each tomato with the butter-crumbs mixture. Bake in a 350-degree oven 12 to 15 minutes. Serves 8.

Old-fashioned breaded tomatoes are favorites, too.

This Virginia recipe is a bit different. In a saucepan place 1 quart canned tomatoes and add 1 1/3 cups sugar, half a stick of butter or oleo (2 ounces), and season with salt and pepper.

Simmer slowly for several hours until mixture is thick. Now transfer to a lightly buttered baking dish and cover with narrow strips of day-old bread. Bake in a moderate oven until bread browns and is toasted. Serves 4 to 6.

Mikva, Percy Show Edge In Campaign Dollar Battles

by ROBERT LAHEY

Winnetka attorney Samuel H. Young was badly outgunned financially by his Democratic opponent for the U.S. Congress in the early stages of the campaign, according to statements of campaign finances filed with the Illinois Secretary of State John W. Lewis.

Republican Young is seeking to unseat U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, now the congressman from the 2nd Congressional District, in the new 10th District.

Reports by the candidates for the first period, required under the new federal campaign disclosure law, showed Young's campaign chest in the red by $5,482, while Mikva showed a balance of $17,134. During that period — from April 7 to May 31 — Mikva spent $12,636, compared to $11,167 by Young.

Financial reports of Sen. Charles H. Percy and U.S. Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, his Democratic challenger, also showed Percy with a financial advantage over Pucinski, although the challenger spent 50 per cent more during the period than Percy.

PERCY SHOWED a May 31 balance of $117,499 after expenditures of $43,152 during the eight-week period. During the same time, Pucinski reported expenditures of $65,256 leaving a balance of $57,248.

The statement filed by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, seeking reelection in the 12th Congressional District, showed expenditures of $3,056 and a May 31 balance of $7,158.

Crane's Democratic opponent, Edwin L. Frank of Hoffman Estates, filed certification of his candidacy with the secretary of state on the day the records were examined and no financial statement was yet available.

The largest single contribution reported by any of the candidates was $7,400, as fair market value for four automobiles supplied to Percy by the United Auto Workers Committee for Good Government.

Candidates are required to itemize only contributions over $100.

Percy reported $8,753 in unitemized

contributions. His largest personal contribution was $2,600 from Robert C. Ziebarth, an executive of Bell and Howell, of which Percy is former board chairman.

FIVE PERSONS contributed $1,000 each to the Percy fund during the eight-week filing period. They were Hope McCormick, Republican national committeewoman; Elizabeth Blair of Lake Bluff; Levering Cartwright of Wilmette; Chicago attorney Albert E. Jenner, and James P. Giles of San Marino, Calif.

Percy also received $2,000 from the National Republican Senatorial Committee, and raised $16,402 from "An Evening with Diahann Carroll," staged in April.

A personal report filed by Percy showed that he received an additional $1,478 from the senatorial committee for travel and newspaper advertising.

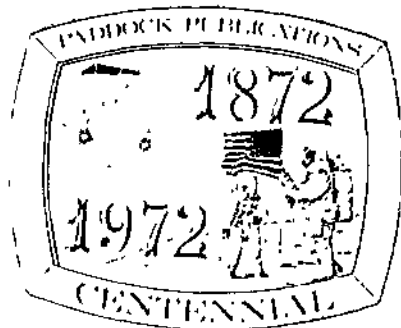

Pucinski's largest donations came from three contributors who gave $1,000 each to his campaign. They were Julius Mayer of Chicago; Harold L. Perlman of Chicago; and Ann and Walter Koziol of Antioch. Pucinski also reported receipts of $11,650 from a campaign event at Mill Run Theater.

Mikva reported five contributions of $1,000 or more. R. J. Levy Harris, Inc., of Chicago, contributed $2,364 during the filing period, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benton of Evanston gave Mikva $1,025.

CONTRIBUTORS of $1,000 each were Milton Shadur of Glencoe; the Illinois United Steelworkers of America; and the Chicago law firm of Devoe, Shadur, Krupp, Miller, Adelman and Hamilton. David Mirabelli of Northlake contributed $500.

Mikva also reported receipts of $15,900 from a campaign dinner, and $1,270 from a May Cocktail party.

The only itemized contribution to the various Young committees was $900 from attorney David Vogel and his wife, Jodi. Total receipts of $5,635 reported by Young included loans of $3,500 from his personal corporation to the campaign funds.

Hint Meyer May Be Candidate In Third District

BY KEN KOZAK

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer is not admitting that he will be an independent candidate for a 3rd District seat in the Illinois House of Representatives come November.

But he is not denying the possibility either.

Meyer recently revealed that backers have started circulating nominating petitions on his behalf, but, he said, not at his request.

There is, he admits, the chance that he will file those petitions with the proper authorities before Aug. 7 deadline.

Meyer suggested that his decision might not come until the last moment.

MEYER NEVER ruled out the possibility of running as an independent in the November election, and discussed that prospect immediately after his loss in the 3rd District Republican primary in March.

At that time he said some of his backers were interested in seeing him launch an independent candidacy, although he was beat handily by the two Republican Party-endorsed candidates in that race.

Meyer, who ran without party support, polled 25 per cent of the vote compared to the combined 75 per cent scored by the winners, Virginia Macdonald of Arlington Heights and Donald L. Totten of Hoffman Estates.

If he runs in November, Meyer will face not only Mrs. Macdonald and Totten, but also Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights and fellow Democrat John P. Kelley of Schaumburg. Only three seats are available.

Two weeks ago Meyer said some allies asked him if they could circulate nominating petitions for him. He said he did not commit himself to a candidacy then, but told them to circulate the petitions if they wanted to.

To get on the ballot in November, Meyer will need at least 3,000 signatures of registered voters in the 3rd district, according to a supervisor of the Cook County Elections Board.

Scuba Diving Course Slated

A course designed to teach area residents the basics of scuba diving begins this week in Schaumburg. The program is being sponsored by the Schaumburg Park District and will be conducted by teachers from the Illinois Institute of Diving.

A $50 registration fee will be charged for the 10-week program, which will include three open water dives. All equipment needed for the course will be supplied. The class will be held weekly from 7:30 until 10:30 p.m. at the Atcher Pool.

More information about the program can be obtained by calling the park district at 894-4660.

Woman Hit By Debris From Firecrackers

Some unofficial fireworks at Tuesday's Hoffman Estates fireworks display resulted in eye injuries for a Schaumburg woman.

Police said Marilyn Garrou, 39, 110 N. Roselle Rd., was struck in the eye with debris from some firecrackers reportedly set off by several youths.

An unidentified bystander tried to warn the woman before the accident, but when the person yelled, Mrs. Garrou turned and was hit by the debris in her eyes.

She was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village for a puncture wound in the right upper eyelid.

Police said that another woman was injured in the incident but did not require medical attention.

AN AVID HORSEMAN, Bill Cunningham is one of the men who train and groom the thoroughbreds that run daily at Arlington Park Race Track. The New Orleans resident stays at Hermitage Trace apartments in Hoffman Estates during the racing season here. He likes the spot because "it is quiet and the people are nice."

'Life's Short,' So He'll Stay With Horses

by BOB ANDERSEN

It is Bill Cunningham's opinion that "life is too short" and one should spend it doing something he enjoys.

Because of the philosophy, Bill quit selling equipment for IBM some years ago and returned to his first and only love... training horses.

"I enjoyed working for IBM," he explained Thursday at Arlington Park race track. "But my real passion is working with and training horses."

The racing season resident of Hermitage Trace apartments in Hoffman Estates trains 15 horses presently running at Arlington. His permanent home is New Orleans. He also gracefully performed Thursday as a tour director for 13 women residents of Hermitage Trace who made their first visit to the race track.

MARTY CARROLL, manager of Hermitage Trace, said the women, having discovered Bill was a horse trainer, expressed a desire to visit the track and, perhaps, get a privileged insight into what makes the horse racing business tick.

None of the gals emerged as a big winner, Carroll said. But then, none lost much either.

Bill is commissioned by owners to train their horses. He gets a percentage of whatever the horses win. Though he now works out of a "public stable" in New Orleans, the horseman said he will be opening his own stable there in November.

BILL'S DAY starts at 5 a.m., when he exercises his horses. He returns to Hermitage Trace at about 11 a.m. and takes a breather before returning to the track at about 1 p.m. to saddle his horses and watch how they fare in the races.

Bill never bets. He prefers to do as good a job as possible training his horses and then "gamble" on a percentage of the purse when his horses finish in the money.

He estimates it takes $7,000 annually to train a horse and keep the animal racing.

Horse racing is "like drilling for oil," he said. "If you hit one good colt, it can win you $100,000."

And that, the trainer declared, can make up for an awful lot of losing colts.

This Morning In Brief

The State

A federal appeals court barred Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley from moving in Illinois courts to reinstate 59 delegates ousted by the Democratic Party's credentials committee from the party's national convention... Daley forces temporarily abandoned efforts to obtain a state court injunction forbidding the seating of a rival delegate group, but their attorneys vowed to fight on.

The trial of Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 codefendants in the Black Panther case was postponed for five days so a defense attorney could take a vacation... Hanrahan's lawyers had asked a three-week delay, contending they had not received all information due them from the prosecution. Circuit Court Judge Philip Romiti denied that motion.

The World

A flash fire swept a newly renovated ward in a Sherborne, England, mental hospital, killing 30 of 36 male patients who were too severely retarded to flee through an unlocked door.

American chess challenger Bobby Fischer apologized for delaying the start of the world championship chess match with Russian Boris Spassky, but a demand from the Soviet chess federation threatened to cancel the 24-game series... The Soviets demanded that Fischer forfeit the first game.

Newly elected Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka said his government's foreign policy would be based on maintaining strong relations with the United States.

The Nation

The administration called in two dozen grocery-chain executives for some tough talk on the rising cost of food, the first of three sessions ordered last week by President Nixon. Similar meetings are set for today with farmers, food processors and wholesalers.

A 23-year-old Buffalo, N. Y., college student surrendered nearly three hours after stabbing his estranged wife and her boyfriend, then holding his infant daughter hostage at knifepoint and boarding an empty 707 jetliner, demanding to be "flown out of the country."

The government gave the Boeing Co. permission to sell $150 million worth of 707 commercial jets and spare parts to Communist China. Negotiations have been going on since April and may take many more months before a contract is signed.

The War

South Vietnamese paratroopers and tank crews recaptured most of the provincial capital of Quang Tri City from the North Vietnamese... In the air war, the U.S. command said American fighter-bombers made 320 raids over North Vietnam Tuesday, the most strikes in a single day since June 27. The command refused to comment on Communist reports that one U.S. F4 Phantom jet was downed near Hanoi.

A SUPERMARKET FOR airplanes is envisioned by the managers of Schaumburg Airport, located along Irving Park Road. The facility is also seen as an attraction for industry which would offer increases to the village's tax base in addition to those the airport itself can provide.

Schaumburg Airport: Today And Tomorrow In Spotlight

by PAT GERLACH

What is Schaumburg Airport today? What might it become in the future?

Located on a 175-acre tract south of Irving Park Road, the field contains a 2,500 by 50-foot bituminous surfaced runway and serves as home base for about 100 small aircraft — all single or twin-engine planes.

The largest aircraft now using the field is a Cessna 441, weighing 9,700 pounds.

Plans for a regional transportation center proposed for the village materialize, it could eventually be expanded to accommodate larger, heavier propeller-driven aircraft and small business jets.

Schaumburg Airport could also become a major shopping center for both aircraft and allied accessories — a source of increased employment, greater tax revenue and additional thousands of dollars brought into the community.

DR. AS ITS owners originally envisioned, it could become the southernmost part of Centex-Schaumburg Industrial Park.

Developed in 1959, the site was purchased by its present owners in 1965 who then planned to permit an airport operation until the adjacent industrial park opened.

Since Schaumburg village fathers have displayed an interest in maintaining an air facility and are even considering a municipal operation, the 16 members of a land trust ownership have, at least temporarily, abandoned their original plan.

Thus far, only three principals in the trust agreement — Jack Pritzker, a Chicago attorney and philanthropist, Marshall Bennett, of Bennett and Kahnweiler, managing agents of the industrial park, and William Lambert, who has extensive land holdings in the area — have been identified.

Management of the field was turned over to Schaumburg Airport, Inc. in March, 1970 and since that time talk of expansion has increased.

That corporation consists of Simon Zunamon, a Chicago CPA, who serves as president; Kenneth B. Wolmer, vice president and general manager; and James Dana, a broker with Bennett and Kahnweiler.

WOLMER, HOWEVER, is the only member of the corporation active in management of the airport and is responsible for policy making decisions.

Schaumburg Airport, Inc., which runs the airport, is a Piper dealer, both selling and servicing new and used aircraft.

The corporation leases hangars and tie-downs as well.

The Airport Lounge, a restaurant overlooking the runway, and Lloyd Flying Service, complete present leased operations at the airport.

Wolmer believes that Schaumburg Airport could become a suburban facility similar to Meigs Field on Chicago's lake-front.

"I feel that we could definitely go with a 4,000 foot runway now provided it is expandable to at least 5,000 feet in the future," he says.

The Meigs runway is 3,710 by 150-feet, a single landing strip, which can accommodate small jets and prop-jet airplanes.

Wolmer definitely does not favor consideration of a north-south strip in addition to the east-west runway at Schaumburg "simply because the site is not wide enough."

The field is bounded by Irving Park Road on the north and Milwaukee Road Ry. tracks on the south.

"The airplane is a tool of modern business and industry and industry locates where it can use this tool," the airport manager says.

ACCORDING TO Wolmer, two companies that have decided to build in the adjacent industrial park — Acc'U Rite of Schiller Park, and Sackett Co., of Chicago — are locating there because of proximity to the airport.

By Federal Aviation Administration standards, 21,000 transient aircraft land at Schaumburg each year bring in about $315,000 of new money into the village.

"This is money we wouldn't have in Schaumburg if we didn't have the airport because in addition to paying real estate tax, we produce tax revenue in the form of sales, excise, income (state and federal), and Social Security tax to just hit the highlights," Wolmer claims.

He is convinced this revenue would be greatly increased by an expanded airport operation.

Construction Due Late This Year

Construction on the extension of Rte. 53 north to Rte. 22 will probably begin late this year, according to an official of the Illinois Division of Highways.

Fred Seeley, project engineer, told the Herald Wednesday the six-lane divided highway will be extended from just north of Dundee Road, where the road presently ends, to just north of Rte. 22. There will be a diamond-type interchange at Rte. 22.

Seeley said the highway division hopes to begin construction on the new section of Rte. 53 in 1972 or early 1973. Once under way, the work will take about two years to complete.

Construction will probably begin on the interchange at Rte. 22 and the overpasses at Cuba Road, Long Grove Road and old Rte. 53, Seeley said. Work on the main highway will probably start about six months later.

No detours are planned while the extension is under construction, Seeley said. Rte. 53 and Rte. 22 will both be constructed under traffic. Long Grove Road and Cuba Road will be closed except to local traffic, he said. No cost figures are available yet, and no dates have been announced for letting of bids.

The stretch of Rte. 53 from Rte. 12 to Rte. 68 was opened in December, 1970. Long range plans call for the highway to serve as a route from the Wisconsin state line to Interstate 80 east of Joliet.

Rte. 53 will also connect to Interstate 90 (the Eisenhower Expressway) to the south near Addison and Wood Dale. This part of the construction is scheduled to be completed in September of this year.

When the section of Rte. 53 linking that road to Interstate 90 is finished, it will be possible to get on Rte. 53 at Rte. 68 and travel into Chicago as an alternative to taking the Northwest Tollway.

Schools Here To Get More State Aid

by JERRY THOMAS
Revisions in the State School Aid bill will directly benefit Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, a dual district, and bring it at least $400,000 in increased state school aid.

Marvin Lopicola, business manager, said he expects about $6 million in state aid this year in contrast to the $5.6 million the district received last year.

The district received 60 per cent of its income from state aid last year and will receive about 58 per cent this year. However, the total will be higher because of a formula change, said Lopicola.

He said he did not include the anticipated $400,000 in the first drafts of the district budget.

"Now we can expect at least that much more to pay our expenses with. It's not much, but it is better than nothing," said Lopicola.

THE FIRST draft of the district budget does not include teacher salary increases now being negotiated, he added.

"The $400,000 could be gobbled up on salary increases alone. If the teachers were to receive a five per cent increase it would cost the district about $425,000 more for salaries next year," said Lopicola.

He lauded legislators efforts to increase funds for dual districts (separation of elementary and high school grades) and called the state's system of paying dual districts less than unit districts "discrimination," not disparity as they describe it.

The state, in an effort to encourage formation of unit districts, rewards unit districts which have kindergarten through 12th grades with more state aid through a formula and bonus factor.

Revisions in the state school aid bill just approved in the General Assembly slightly increase the amount of state aid to dual districts by altering the formula.

THE FORMULA guarantees all districts a certain amount of state aid, minus local tax effort. The aid to each district varies in proportion to the district's assessed valuation and average daily attendance.

The formula, when first proposed by the state, was supposed to equalize aid to schools, but according to Lopicola, it just increases the disparity.

Lopicola said if Dist. 54 were to become a unit district it would mean at least $1 million more in state school aid to the district.

"But, I don't want to see us become a unit district unless it's going to mean a superior education process. We don't use a dollar sign as judgment when we decide between dual and unit," said Lopicola.

"Money should not be of primary concern when a district is deciding between dual or unit formation," he said.

"That doesn't mean we aren't glad to get the $400,000," said Lopicola, adding, "It's a step in the right direction."

Applications must be filed before September 1, 1972. Persons must have been 65 by Jan. 1 of this year.

Persons must occupy as their principal residence the property for which exemption is sought.

A copy of Medicare Card, birth certificate or other document establishing date of birth will be necessary to prove eligibility.

Copies of Deed, Owner's Title Policy or other document proving ownership, together with a copy of the last paid real estate tax bill should be mailed along with the application to the Assessor's Homestead Office, 118 N. Clark St., Chicago.

Mikva, Percy Show Edge In Campaign Dollar Battles

by ROBERT LAHEY

Winnetka attorney Samuel H. Young was badly outgunned financially by his Democratic opponent for the U.S. Congress in the early stages of the campaign, according to statements of campaign finances filed with the Illinois Secretary of State John W. Lewis.

Republican Young is seeking to unseat U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, now the congressman from the 2nd Congressional District, in the new 10th District.

Reports by the candidates for the first period, required under the new federal campaign disclosure law, showed Young's campaign chest in the red by $3,482, while Mikva showed a balance of $17,134. During that period — from April 7 to May 31 — Mikva spent $12,636, compared to $11,167 by Young.

Financial reports of Sen. Charles H. Percy and U.S. Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, his Democratic challenger, also showed Percy with a financial advantage over Pucinski, although the challenger spent 50 per cent more during the period than Percy.

PERCY SHOWED a May 31 balance of $117,499 after expenditures of $43,152 during the eight-week period. During the same time, Pucinski reported expenditures of $65,256 leaving a balance of $57,248.

The statement filed by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, seeking reelection in the 12th Congressional District, showed expenditures of $3,066 and a May 31 balance of $7,158.

Crane's Democratic opponent, Edwin L. Frank of Hoffman Estates, filed certification of his candidacy with the secretary of state on the day the records were examined and no financial statement was yet available.

The largest single contribution reported by any of the candidates was $7,400, as fair market value for four automobiles supplied to Percy by the United Auto Workers Committee for Good Government.

Candidates are required to itemize only contributions over $100.

Percy reported $8,753 in unitemized

contributions. His largest personal contribution was $2,600 from Robert C. Ziebarth, an executive of Bell and Howell, of which Percy is former board chairman.

FIVE PERSONS contributed $1,000 each to the Percy fund during the eight-week filing period. They were Hope McCormick, Republican national committeewoman; Elizabeth Blair of Lake Bluff; Levering Cartwright of Wilmette, Chicago attorney Albert E. Jenner, and James P. Giles of San Marino, Calif.

Percy also received $2,000 from the National Republican Senatorial Committee, and raised $16,402 from "An Evening with Diahann Carroll," staged in April.

A personal report filed by Percy showed that he received an additional $1,478 from the senatorial committee for travel and newspaper advertising.

Pucinski's largest donations came from three contributors who gave $1,000 each to his campaign. They were Julius Mayer of Chicago; Harold L. Perlman of Chicago; and Ann and Walter Koziol of Antioch. Pucinski also reported receipts of $11,650 from a campaign event at Mill Run Theater.

Mikva reported five contributions of $1,000 or more. R. J. Levy Harris, Inc., of Chicago, contributed $2,364 during the filing period, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benton of Evanston gave Mikva $1,025.

CONTRIBUTORS of $1,000 each were Milton Shadur of Glencoe; the Illinois United Steelworkers of America; and the Chicago law firm of Devoe, Shadur, Krupp, Miller, Adelman and Hamilton. David Mirabelli of Northlake contributed $500.

Mikva also reported receipts of $15,900 from a campaign dinner, and $1,270 from a May Cocktail party.

The only itemized contribution to the various Young committees was $900 from attorney David Vogel and his wife, Jodi. Total receipts of $5,635 reported by Young included loans of $3,500 from his personal corporation to the campaign funds.

Claims Dust Would Be Hazard

Village Board Protests Rezoning For Cement Plant

by LYNN ASINOF

The Wheeling Village Board has once again lodged a formal letter of protest with the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals on the rezoning of land for a ready-mix cement plant on Plant Road, south of the village.

The board claims construction of the proposed Evanston Fuel and Material Co. plant is not in the public interest because it would cause dust and traffic problems and increase flooding in the area.

The property in question lies outside the village limits but within the village's 1.5-mile limit of jurisdiction. The land is located on the east side by Pal-Waukee Airport and Plant Road, on the west by the Wheeling drainage ditch, and on the north and south by farmland.

THE PROTEST IS a replay of action taken in 1969 when the county zoning board first approved the rezoning. After a series of protests and court suits, the original zoning decision was overturned by a citizen's suit claiming there was improper public notice for the zoning hearings.

The second rezoning hearing was held June 2, after which the county zoning board again approved zoning for the plant. Wheeling's current protest mirrors the original protest lodged in September 1969.

The village maintains the plant's proximity to the airport "creates a hazard inconsistent with the general welfare and safety of both the pilots and passengers of the aircraft as well as the well-being of the residents."

OTHER REASONS for the protest were that heavy concrete-carrying trucks would create traffic hazards and damage the roads in the area. Further, the board claimed flooding in the area adjacent to the Wheeling drainage ditch might be increased and the amount of water used in the operation would interfere with supply of nearby wells.

The board also noted the plant would "alter the general character of the area," and there was no evidence that the plant would meet the county standards of operation on noise and smoke. They claim dust, noise and odors from the manufacture of concrete would be "detrimental to the area," and that the storage of raw materials would create additional dust and grit.

Finally, the village pointed out they did not receive proper notice of the deliberations following the June 2 hearings. They also say proper procedure was not followed because the land owners did not seek the approval of the Wheeling Plan Commission for the subdivision of the property.

The protest letter states, "The highest and best use, due to existing uses and trends of development, is for a light industrial use and not heavy industrial, which benefits only the private property owner."

COPIES OF THE letter were sent to the clerk of Cook County, the secretary of the county zoning board, the president of the county board of commissioners and members of the zoning board.

Wesley Wigginton, an owner of Evanston Fuel and Materials Co., and Marvin Salzenstein, a consulting engineer, testified at the June 2 hearing that the plant will not present a pollution problem to the area.

They said dust from such plants is usually cleaned up, and Wigginton said the dust would be swept away by sweepers. Salzenstein said rezoning was needed only because the entire plant will not be enclosed.

"We will enclose as much of the material on the property as possible to prevent sand and gravel from blowing over the area," Wigginton said.

He said daily truck traffic in the area will amount to only about 20 trips by cement trucks and 12 or 15 by supply trucks.

Suburbanite Unit To Save Hillcrest Slough From Ruin

by JOHN MAES

Concerned citizens and civic organizations in Prospect Heights have been rallying together recently behind a common cause: to save the Hillcrest Slough from early ruin.

Sewage deposits, soil erosion and dumping have been contributed to pollution of the north half and have put it in danger of extinction.

The group has been working to preserve the slough, one of the few remaining wetlands in Illinois, as a recreation area and wildlife preserve.

The south half of the slough is owned by H. C. Hauvner and the north half is owned by the Hillcrest Homeowners Association.

The Prospect Heights Park District, however, recently filed a letter of intent to acquire the land for use as a park with the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

DOLORES HAUGH, head of the "Save the Slough" committee, said the fact that the groups are organized and working together will make their efforts much more effective.

Other groups involved in the push include the Prospect Heights Improvement Association, the Prospect Heights Park District, the Old Town Sanitary District and the Hillcrest Homeowners' Association.

"We want to keep man-made conditions away from the area," Mrs. Haugh added. "That's what polluted the north half in the first place and we're working to return it to its natural state."

The most recent controversy over the 27-acre area arose from a dispute over the barricading of the section of Willow

This Morning In Brief

The State

A federal appeals court barred Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley from moving in Illinois courts to reinstate 59 delegates ousted by the Democratic Party's credentials committee from the party's national convention. . . . Daley forces temporarily abandoned efforts to obtain a state court injunction forbidding the seating of a rival delegate group, but their attorneys vowed to fight on.

The trial of Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 codefendants in the Black Panther case was postponed for five days so a defense attorney could take a vacation. . . . Hanrahan's lawyers had asked a three-week delay, contending they had not received all information due them from the prosecution. Circuit Court Judge Philip Romiti denied that motion.

The World

A flash fire swept a newly renovated ward in a Sherborne, England, mental hospital, killing 30 of 36 male patients who were too severely retarded to flee through an unlocked door.

American chess challenger Bobby Fischer apologized for delaying the start of the world championship chess match with Russian Boris Spassky, but a demand from the Soviet chess federation threatened to cancel the 24-game series. . . . The Soviets demanded that Fischer forfeit the first game.

Newly elected Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka said his government's foreign policy would be based on maintaining strong relations with the United States.

The Nation

The administration called in two dozen grocery-chain executives for some tough talk on the rising cost of food, the first of three sessions ordered last week by President Nixon. Similar meetings are set for today with farmers, food processors and wholesalers.

A 23-year-old Buffalo, N. Y., college student surrendered nearly three hours after stabbing his estranged wife and her boyfriend, then holding his infant daughter hostage at knifepoint and boarding an empty 707 jetliner, demanding to be "flown out of the country."

The government gave the Boeing Co. permission to sell $150 million worth of 707 commercial jets and spare parts to Communist China. Negotiations have been going on since April and may take many more months before a contract is signed.

The War

South Vietnamese paratroopers and tank crews recaptured most of the provincial capital of Quang Tri City from the North Vietnamese. . . . In the air war, the U.S. command said American fighter-bombers made 320 raids over North Vietnam Tuesday, the most strikes in a single day since June 27. The command refused to comment on Communist reports that one U.S. F4 Phantom jet was downed near Hanoi.

Tall Shadow Left By Trustee Vogt

by STEVE FORSYTH

There was an empty seat at the Buffalo Grove Village Board meeting last Monday night. Chuck is gone.

Although the chair may be empty, there is a big pair of shoes left to fill, and a tall shadow to measure up to. They were left by trustee Vogt.

Although he was criticized during the last village election for being too idealistic, some of those ideals paid off during his abbreviated term of office.

It was Vogt and his public relations committee who saw to it that the president's roundtable actually got organized. It was the public relations committee that started the village newsletter.

Vogt and his committee were behind

"What can we do FOR Buffalo Grove?"

To Vogt, Buffalo Grove wasn't just the name of a village — it was his way of life for as long as he was here.

Right now Village Pres. Gary Armstrong has the unenviable duty of trying to fill the abyss left by Vogt's departure. He won't find another man like Vogt — there aren't any. But there are several others who can accomplish just as much in their own ways, and one good person is needed.

The job requires a lot of time, doesn't pay much and provides very little thanks. If you have a lot of patience, it helps.

It's hard to recommend the job to anyone — it's like trying to sell a headache — but it has to be done.

THE FIVE trustees who are left can carry on, but the sooner a new trustee is appointed, the sooner things can resume a regular beat. The village is currently involved in several important matters, and it is a good time for a new person to get his or her feet wet.

The appointment would be for less than a year, since Vogt's two-year term will expire in April, 1973.

The all-male village board might do well to consider a woman to fill the vacancy, if a qualified woman wants the job. That is not to say a woman should be added just as a token. The best person, male or female, should be found.

Are you interested? If so, contact the village clerk or talk with one of the trustees. Let the officials know you are interested and want to be considered.

Meanwhile, someone should be writing a letter to the Kansas City suburb where Vogt will live — he will undoubtedly adopt his new community with as much verve as he did Buffalo Grove, and they should be prepared for his brand of enthusiasm for local government.

So long, Chuck.

Steve Forsyth

the formation of the village appearance commission.

And the new green and white village maps, which are available to residents, were prepared by — who else?

THE SECRET to Chuck's success was his positive attitude. Critics might have decried idealism, but for Vogt it was a dynamic formula. He tried to attain his lofty goals.

In several conversations the soft-spoken but assured man repeatedly said,

Firm Sells Safety

Industry Hazards Are Disappearing

by JOHN MAES

Mine Safety Appliances Co. started out in the World War I era making basic products for safety in mines when canaries in cages were still used to detect dangerous gases.

Today, more than 50 years later, MSA markets more than 4,000 lines of safety equipment for industry besides mine safety products and operates more than 100 branch offices around the world including Europe, Africa, India and the Far East.

"Recent trends toward work safety have greatly increased our market," said Al Lundin, manager of Chicago area office which operates out of Elk Grove Village at 370 Bond St.

"For instance, there isn't much of a mining industry around the Midwest so almost all the products we distribute from here are for industrial safety."

Gary, Ind. steel mills use MSA-built work helmets able to withstand the impact of molten steel along with gas, and carbon monoxide indicators able to detect noxious gases down to one part per billion.

FIRE DEPARTMENTS also have employed use of MSA breathing aids such as oxygen masks and respirators along with firemen's helmets, fireproof suits, and first-aid kits.

"Our company developed adhesive bandages long before Johnson and Johnson (the firm that makes Band-Aids) did," Lundin claims.

Factories also are utilizing the company's products and have purchased huge quantities of protective clothing, headwear and gloves. Also included in MSA's inventories is a barrier cream which protects hands against acids and harmful chemicals, and ear plugs which prevent hearing damage from excessive noise.

"It was always an accepted truth," Lundin said, "that people who worked around punch-presses and other high noise areas would become deaf after a while. Earplugs have put a stop to that."

Recent noise abatement legislation protects workers from being exposed to noise levels exceeding 90 decibels for more than eight hours.

Also, many construction companies use MSA hard hats made of polycarbonate plastic which can withstand the force of a blow from a two-pound hammer. These hats are also used by Texaco Oil Co. and Chicago & North Western Ry.

THE MINING industry, however, has by no means been forsaken by the company's progress in other areas.

During the recent mining disaster in Kellogg, Idaho, MSA representatives went immediately to the area to help coordinate shipping by plane of emergency supplies such as breathing aids and rescue equipment.

MSA also once developed a special harness to rescue a man trapped in a West Virginia mine.

"It won't be long before we develop special escape vehicles to suit this purpose," Lundin said.

In other areas of mine safety, gas detectors have replaced the canary in the cage. Miners are now equipped with gas masks and respirators to protect them from toxic mists and dust. Some breathing aids have alarm systems on them to warn the worker to leave a hazardous area and reach fresh air before his oxygen supply runs out.

They also have developed a foam spreader that can extinguish a fire in a matter of seconds.

Lundin said the Federal Occupational Safety and Health Act passed in 1969, which outlines safety procedures industry must follow for their employees, has had a tremendous effect on MSA's market.

"NOT ONLY DO we manufacture more now," he added, "but all our products must meet certain quality standards."

The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH), a federal agency, must approve all safety equipment before it can be used or sold. MSA submits samples of all their safety products for NIOSH approval, Lundin said.

As federal safety standards become even higher, mines and industry will become safer places to work.

"Workers have been neglected for a long time," he said. "More legislation and better safety products are making it easier for them, though."

Police Still Probing Abduction Story

Buffalo Grove police are still trying to piece together the story of an alleged abduction and battery of a 16-year-old youth over the weekend.

Police received a call from the father of Roy Pietz early Sunday morning reporting the abduction. The elder Pietz said his son was abducted and threatened with a knife after accepting a ride home from a carnival in Wheeling.

Pietz, of 450 Forest Way Dr., told police the person giving him the ride pulled a knife and bound his hands with tape.

According to Pietz, the abductor made Pietz lie down on the front seat of the car, put him in a headlock and held the knife at his throat while driving around the village.

Police said the abductor became confused when he was unable to get through Arlington Heights Road because of the construction.

Pietz said that as he began to free his hands of the tape the abductor got a piece of clothing from the back seat and retied his hands. When the assailant reportedly went to his trunk to get something else Pietz jumped from the car and began running.

The youth said he stopped at several houses and halted a passing motorist, asking for help. He reportedly received assistance at a home on Whitehall Place.

Following the incident the police found adhesive tape and clothesline with which the youth could have been bound. Police also drew up a composite picture of the alleged abductor from Pietz's description.

Road that cuts across the slough.

The barricades were installed by the county after angry citizens and Prospect Heights park officials contended that soil erosion from the 10-year-old road was further polluting the slough. The barricades were removed two days later at the request of residents who frequently use the road, and the Prospect Heights Fire Department.

Ironically, this issue, Mrs. Haugh said, did more to unite people to try and save the slough than anything else.

A three-year study on the condition of the area done by Gabriele Ronnett of Mount Prospect, in which she cited the types and degrees of pollutants and sewage being dumped into the slough, gave added impetus to the group's efforts.

"Since then," said Mrs. Haugh, "we've been having meetings, rap sessions and listening to speakers trying to reach a solution to save the area."

AMONG THE solutions aimed at restoring the natural balance between the north and south halves of the slough have been removal of the section of Willow Road, construction of culverts under the road and even installing a bridge.

"What we really need," she continued, "is to get a more professional study of the area done. We're trying to get a marine biologist to come in and study the area and tell us what the best course of action would be."

"We'd still like to see the road taken out because the county has said they might pave it in August and once they do, it would probably never be taken out."

However, Carl Blomgren of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency told concerned citizens last Wednesday that removal of the road is not the answer. He said the north end, even in its present state, could still be part of the proposed wildlife preserve.

WITH ADEQUATE oxygen in the water, he told them, fresh-water type game fish such as bass and pike could survive in the north half. Maintaining an adequate oxygen level could be accomplished by pumping oxygen directly into the water, he said.

"Wildlife produces waste, too," he said when asked about the problems of sewage deposits in the north end. "The north half is beyond the point of restoration to its natural state, but it is not dead. People can still boat and fish in it," he said.

Despite her efforts, Mrs. Haugh and her co-workers realize the Hillcrest Slough will not live forever. Through natural processes, the wetland will perish some day.

"We intend to see, however, that its death is not hastened by careless pollution."

Trustee Dunked

Buffalo Grove Trustee Ed Osmon found himself in a lot of hot water Tuesday.

For the second year in a row, Osmon volunteered to sit in the dunk tank at the Buffalo Grove Jaycees' Fourth of July carnival.

Stan Margulies, one of three Jaycees who organized "The Big Happening," reported yesterday that Osmon was dunked several times in the two to three hours he spent on the hot seat.

Margulies said even Osmon's wife and kids took shots at dunking the affable trustee — and when they missed, Margulies helped them out by pushing the button.

Considering the cool temperatures Tuesday, Osmon was lucky the tank was heated.

'Life's Short,' He'll Stay With First Love—Horses

by BOB ANDERSEN

It is Bill Cunningham's opinion that "life is too short" and one should spend it doing something he enjoys.

Because of the philosophy, Bill quit selling equipment for IBM some years ago and returned to his first and only love... training horses.

"I enjoyed working for IBM," he explained Thursday at Arlington Park race track. "But my real passion is working with and training horses."

The racing season, resident of Hermitage Trace apartments in Hoffman Estates trains 15 horses presently running at Arlington. His permanent home is New Orleans. He also gracefully performed Thursday as a tour director for 13 women residents of Hermitage Trace who made their first visit to the race track.

MARTY CARROLL, manager of Hermitage Trace, said the women, having discovered Bill was a horse trainer, expressed a desire to visit the track and, perhaps, get a privileged insight into what makes the horse racing business tick.

So Bill accommodated the women and the tour was made Thursday. The women were shown the stables where Bill's horses are kept as the trainer explained some of the finer points of training a horse and keeping the animal fit. The girls then watched the afternoon's slate of racing and placed some small bets.

None of the girls emerged as a big winner, Carroll said. But then, none lost much either.

Bill is commissioned by owners to train their horses. He gets a percentage of whatever the horses win. Though he now works out of a "public stable" in New Orleans, the horseman said he will be opening his own stable there in November.

BILL'S DAY starts at 5 a.m., when he exercises his horses. He returns to Hermitage Trace at about 11 a.m. and takes a breather before returning to the track at about 1 p.m. to saddle his horses and watch how they fare in the races.

Bill never bets. He prefers to do, as good a job as possible training his horses and then "gamble" on a percentage of the purse when his horses finish in the money.

He estimates it takes $7,000 annually to train a horse and keep the animal racing.

Horse racing is "like drilling for oil," he said. "If you hit one good colt, it can win you $100,000."

And that, the trainer declared, can make up for an awful lot of losing colts.

Young Financially Outgunned

Mikva, Percy Show An Edge In Campaign Dollar Battle

by ROBERT LAHEY

Winnetka attorney Samuel H. Young was badly outgunned financially by his Democratic opponent for the U.S. Congress in the early stages of the campaign, according to statements of campaign finances filed with the Illinois Secretary of State John W. Lewis.

Republican Young is seeking to unseat U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, now the congressman from the 2nd Congressional District, in the new 10th District.

Reports by the candidates for the first period, required under the new federal campaign disclosure law, showed Young's campaign chest in the red by $5,482, while Mikva showed a balance of $17,134. During that period — from April 7 to May 31 — Mikva spent $12,636, compared to $11,167 by Young.

Financial reports of Sen. Charles H. Percy and U.S. Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, his Democratic challenger, also showed Percy with a financial advantage over Pucinski, although the challenger spent 50 per cent more during the period than Percy.

PERCY SHOWED a May 31 balance of $117,499 after expenditures of $43,152 during the eight-week period. During the same time, Pucinski reported expenditures of $65,258 leaving a balance of $57,248.

The statement filed by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, seeking reelection in the 12th Congressional District, showed expenditures of $3,056 and a May 31 balance of $7,158.

Crane's Democratic opponent, Edwin L. Frank of Hoffman Estates, filed certification of his candidacy with the secretary of state on the day the records were examined and no financial statement was yet available.

The largest single contribution reported by any of the candidates was $7,400, as fair market value for four automobiles supplied to Percy by the United Auto Workers Committee for Good Government.

Candidates are required to itemize only contributions over $100.

Percy reported $8,753 in unitemized contributions. His largest personal contribution was $2,600 from Robert C. Ziebarth, an executive of Bell and Howell, of which Percy is former board chairman.

FIVE PERSONS contributed $1,000 each to the Percy fund during the eight-week filing period. They were Hope McCormick, Republican national committeewoman; Elizabeth Blair of Lake Bluff; Levering Cartwright of Wilmette; Chicago attorney Albert E. Jenner, and James P. Giles of San Marino, Calif.

Percy also received $2,000 from the National Republican Senatorial Committee, and raised $16,402 from "An Evening with Diahann Carroll," staged in April.

A personal report filed by Percy showed that he received an additional $1,478 from the senatorial committee for travel and newspaper advertising.

Pucinski's largest donations came from three contributors who gave $1,000 each to his campaign. They were Julius Mayer of Chicago; Harold L. Perlman of Chicago; and Ann and Walter Koziol of Antioch. Pucinski also reported receipts of $11,650 from a campaign event at Mill Run Theater.

Mikva reported five contributions of $1,000 or more. R. J. Levy Harris, Inc., of Chicago, contributed $2,364 during the filing period, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benton of Evanston gave Mikva $1,025.

CONTRIBUTORS of $1,000 each were Milton Shadur of Glenview; the Illinois

United Steelworkers of America; and the Chicago law firm of Devoe, Shadur, Krupp, Miller, Adelman and Hamilton. David Mirabelli of Northlake contributed $500.

Mikva also reported receipts of $15,900 from a campaign dinner, and $1,270 from a May Cocktail party.

The only itemized contribution to the various Young committees was $900 from attorney David Vogel and his wife, Jodi. Total receipts of $5,635 reported by Young included loans of $3,500 from his personal corporation to the campaign funds.

For 3rd District House Seat

Meyer May Be Candidate

BY KEN KOZAK

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer is not admitting that he will be an independent candidate for a 3rd District seat in the Illinois House of Representatives come November.

But he is not denying the possibility either.

Meyer recently revealed that backers have started circulating nominating petitions on his behalf, but, he said, not at his request.

There is, he admits, the chance that he will file those petitions with the proper authorities before Aug. 7 deadline.

Meyer suggested that his decision might not come until the last moment.

MEYER NEVER ruled out the possibility of running as an independent in the November election, and discussed that prospect immediately after his loss in the 3rd District Republican primary in March.

At that time he said some of his backers were interested in seeing him launch an independent candidacy, although he was beat handily by the two Republican Party-endorsed candidates in that race.

Meyer, who ran without party support, polled 25 per cent of the vote compared to the combined 75 per cent scored by the winners, Virginia Macdonald of Arlington Heights and Donald L. Totten of Hoffman Estates.

If he runs in November, Meyer will face not only Mrs. Macdonald and Totten, but also Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights and fellow Democrat

John P. Kelley of Schaumburg. Only three seats are available.

Two weeks ago Meyer said some allies asked him if they could circulate nominating petitions for him. He said he did not commit himself to a candidacy then, but told them to circulate the petitions if they wanted to.

To get on the ballot in November, Meyer will need at least 3,000 signatures of registered voters in the 3rd district, according to a supervisor of the Cook County Elections Board.

Jack Walsh: Still 'Suburban Man'

by KURT BAER

Jack Walsh has a rule of thumb for working with local governments

"You start with a problem in a specific way, and then see where it leads you," said Walsh, who has been assistant director of the state's department of local government affairs since April, when he resigned as Arlington Heights village president.

"The job, by its very nature, is general. The most important aspect of my particular role is to help local governments that have a problem, whether it be a previous unsuccessful dealing with the state or just being unsure of where to go for help," he said.

Through an agreement with Gov. Richard Ogilvie, who appointed him to the state post, Walsh said he has limited his activity to the six-county metropolitan Chicago area.

The area has characteristics unique from other parts of the state. Issues associated with the Chicago area are thought of differently in Springfield and somehow they are different. I don't know exactly how but they are," he said.

Walsh, reflecting on his more than two months in this new post, said he is especially interested in representing the interest of the 3.7 million people who live in Chicago's suburbs.

"In segmentation they create their weakness," he said of Chicago's suburbs. "Traditionally no one has been able to speak for them because no one knows what their position is."

Walsh was a strong advocate of intergovernmental cooperation while serving as Arlington Heights village president and says he continues to see the merging of community interests as a means of attacking large scale problems.

"As I view the problem, it is absolutely essential that local governments find ways to work together," he said, adding that often county government can be encouraged to take a more active problem-solving role.

"Counties are a last line of defense against metro-government or other supergovernments," he said, emphasizing that cooperation does not have to mean loss of local control.

As a practical matter, local governments increasingly are being forced to cooperate in order to qualify for coveted federal and state project grants.

Grant guidelines often require that a project benefit more than just one community such as the Wilke-Kirchoff detention basin which will serve southwest Arlington Heights and eastern Rolling Meadows as well as neighboring unincorporated land.

Another area of personal interest to Walsh is mass transportation.

A special state policy committee is studying the various mass transit bills which are currently pending in the legislature with a view to coming up with a recommendation and presumably a legislative program," he said.

To date the Ogilvie administration has not made a formal mass transit policy recommendation, Walsh said. But a recommendation based on the policy committee's work should be forthcoming by the end of the year, he said.

Working with problems of local government in six counties has given Walsh a unique opportunity to make a comparative evaluation of Arlington Heights village government which formerly he saw only from the inside.

Frankly, I am more pleased and proud of the community now than when I left. My experience has confirmed what I previously hoped was the case," he said.

He cited Arlington Heights' creation of a municipal planning department as really quite advanced among Chicago suburbs.

Planning is one of four specific areas of concentration for the Department of Local Government Affairs.

Walsh says he is committed to state government and part of that commitment is based on a belief in what he calls the integrity of incumbent Gov. Ogilvie.

As a result, he said he would be doing a limited amount of political campaigning for the governor this fall.

JACK WALSH, who resigned as Arlington Heights village president to become assistant director of the state's department of local government affairs, said his experience with local governments throughout the six-county metropolitan area has underscored his belief in the importance of intergovernmental cooperation. Walsh works out of a 20th-floor office in the State of Illinois Building in Chicago.

Park District Playground Program Starts Monday

The Salt Creek Rural Park District will offer a free playground program for residents beginning Monday.

The program will also be offered free to residents at Arlington Park Race Track, according to Jim DeVos, park director.

The district will offer a supervised activity playground featuring sports, crafts and games from July 10 to Aug. 23 at Winston Rose and South parks.

The program schedule will include:

arts and crafts 10:30 a.m. to noon, archery, 1 to 1:45 p.m. for fourth and fifth grades; archery, 2 to 2:45 p.m. for sixth through eighth grades; special events for third through eighth grades, 3 to 5 p.m.

The above schedule for district residents will be held at Rose Park on Mondays, South Park on Wednesdays and Winston Park on Fridays.

A soccer program for boys in fifth through eighth grades will begin at Rose Park on July 17, from 10:30 a.m. to noon. The programs for residents at Arlington Park Race Track will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays, beginning July 11.

Tuesdays from 3 to 3:45 p.m. will feature an arts and crafts program and baseball for fourth through eighth grade boys from 3:45 to 5 p.m.

Girls' baseball is scheduled for Thursdays, from 3 to 3:45 p.m. A special event, hour will also be held on Thursdays, from 3:45 to 5 p.m.

DeVos said the expansion of the program to include children of race track residents is an attempt to involve the transient residents at the track in park district activities. He said the district plans to "go quite extensively into programs for these people."

More information on the programs can be obtained by calling the park district at 259-6890.

Fender Lawyers Ask Board Hearing

Attorneys for John D. Fender filed last Thursday by the School District 23 board of education have requested a full board of education hearing in the case.

Fender, a language arts teacher at Mine Junior High School, was fired for alleged continuing inability to exercise mature judgment and restraint in dealing with classroom problems, according to the board.

The board also alleged that "he has on four occasions in the current school year struck students notwithstanding administrative admonitions that he refrain from doing so."

According to school district officials, a date for the hearing will probably be set at the July 11 school board meeting. The hearing must be held before Nov. 2, in accordance with the School Code of Illinois.

FENDER, WHO has been a teacher in the district for 10 years, has served as president of the Arlington Teachers Association this year. He was also chief negotiator at recently completed teachers' contract talks.

On July 14, Fender will be tried on battery charges in the Arlington Heights branch of the circuit court in the Municipal Building. The charges stem from the alleged beating of one of his students.

AN AVID HORSEMAN, Bill Cunningham is one of the men who train and groom the thoroughbreds that run daily at Arlington Park Race Track. The New Orleans resident stays at Hermitage Trace apartments in Hoffman Estates during the racing season here. He likes the spot because "it is quiet and the people are nice."

'Life's Short,' So He'll Stay With Horses

by BOB ANDERSEN

It is Bill Cunningham's opinion that "life is too short" and one should spend it doing something he enjoys.

Because of the philosophy Bill quit selling equipment for IBM some years ago and returned to his first and only love: training horses.

"I enjoyed working for IBM," he explained Thursday at Arlington Park race track. "But my real passion is working with and training horses."

The racing season resident of Hermitage Trace apartments in Hoffman Estates trains 15 horses presently running at Arlington. His permanent home is New Orleans. He also gracefully performed Thursday as a tour director for 13 women residents of Hermitage Trace who made their first visit to the race track.

MARTY CARROLL, manager of Hermitage Trace, said the women, having discovered Bill was a horse trainer, expressed a desire to visit the track and perhaps, get a privileged insight into what makes the horse racing business tick.

So Bill accommodated the women and the tour was made Thursday. The women were shown the stables where Bill's horses are kept as the trainer explained some of the finer points of training a horse and keeping the animal fit. The girls then watched the afternoon's slate of racing and placed some small bets.

None of the girls emerged as a big winner, Carroll said. But then, none lost much either.

Bill is commissioned by owners to train their horses. He gets a percentage of whatever the horses win. Though he now works out of a "public stable" in New Orleans, the horseman said he will be opening his own stable there in November.

BILL'S DAY starts at 5 a.m. when he exercises his horses. He returns to Hermitage Trace at about 11 a.m. and takes a breather before returning to the track at about 1 p.m. to saddle his horses and watch how they fare in the races.

Bill never bets. He prefers to do as good a job as possible training his horses and then gamble on a percentage of the purse when his horses finish in the money.

He estimates it takes $7,000 annually to train a horse and keep the animal racing.

Horse racing is like drilling for oil," he said. "If you hit one good well, it can win you $100,000."

And that the trainer declared can make up for an awful lot of losing colts.

Jim Kuhn Third In Soapbox Derby

Jim Kuhn of Rolling Meadows raced to a third place finish Sunday in the Highland Park Soapbox Derby.

As third place winner in a field of 38, Jim received a trophy and a $50 gift certificate to a Highland Park sporting goods store. The winner of Sunday's contest will go on to compete in the National Soapbox Derby Contest in Akron, Ohio.

Sunday was Jim's first experience at derby racing. He spent approximately 21 months building his racer. He was the only entry from the Northwest suburbs.

Mikva, Percy Show Edge In Campaign Dollar Battles

by ROBERT LAHEY

Winnetka attorney Samuel H. Young was badly outgunned financially by his Democratic opponent for the U.S. Congress in the early stages of the campaign, according to statements of campaign finances filed with the Illinois Secretary of State John W. Lewis.

Republican Young is seeking to unseat U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, now the congressman from the 2nd Congressional District, in the new 10th District.

Reports by the candidates for the first period, required under the new federal campaign disclosure law, showed Young's campaign chest in the red by $5,482, while Mikva showed a balance of $17,134. During that period — from April 7 to May 31 — Mikva spent $12,636, compared to $11,187 by Young.

Financial reports of Sen. Charles H. Percy and U.S. Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, his Democratic challenger, also showed Percy with a financial advantage over Pucinski, although the challenger spent 50 per cent more during the period than Percy.

PERCY SHOWED a May 31 balance of $117,499 after expenditures of $43,152 during the eight-week period. During the same time, Pucinski reported expenditures of $65,256 leaving a balance of $57,248.

The statement filed by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, seeking reelection in the 12th Congressional District, showed expenditures of $3,056 and a May 31 balance of $7,158.

Crane's Democratic opponent, Edwin L. Frank of Hoffman Estates, filed certification of his candidacy with the secretary of state on the day the records were examined and no financial statement was yet available.

The largest single contribution reported by any of the candidates was $7,400, as fair market value for four automobiles supplied to Percy by the United Auto Workers Committee for Good Government.

Candidates are required to itemize only contributions over $100.

Percy reported $8,753 in unitemized

contributions. His largest personal contribution was $2,600 from Robert C. Ziebarth, an executive of Bell and Howell, of which Percy is former board chairman.

FIVE PERSONS contributed $1,000 each to the Percy fund during the eight-week filing period. They were Hope McCormick, Republican national committeewoman; Elizabeth Blair of Lake Bluff; Levering Cartwright of Wilmette; Chicago attorney Albert E. Jenner, and James P. Giles of San Marino, Calif.

Percy also received $2,000 from the National Republican Senatorial Committee, and raised $16,402 from "An Evening with Diahann Carroll," staged in April.

A personal report filed by Percy showed that he received an additional $1,478 from the senatorial committee for travel and newspaper advertising.

Pucinski's largest donations came from three contributors who gave $1,000 each to his campaign. They were Julius Mayer of Chicago, Harold L. Perlman of Chicago, and Ann and Walter Kozlowski of Antioch. Pucinski also reported receipts of $11,650 from a campaign event at Mill Run Theater.

Mikva reported five contributions of $1,000 or more. R. J. Levy Harris, Inc., of Chicago, contributed $2,364 during the filing period, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benton of Evanston gave Mikva $1,025.

CONTRIBUTORS of $1,000 each were Milton Shadur of Glenview; the Illinois United Steelworkers of America; and the Chicago law firm of Devos, Shadur, Krupp, Miller, Adelman and Hamilton. David Mirabelli of Northlake contributed $500.

Mikva also reported receipts of $15,900 from a campaign dinner, and $1,270 from a May Cocktail party.

The only itemized contribution to the various Young committees was $900 from attorney David Vogel and his wife, Jodi. Total receipts of $5,635 reported by Young included loans of $3,500 from his personal corporation to the campaign funds.

Park District Will Spend $2,000 For Ice Rink Study

The Rolling Meadows Park District board of commissioners has approved spending $2,000 to get a feasibility study on the potential of building an instructional ice rink at the sports complex.

RMHS Drama Students To Offer 3 Plays

Drama students at Rolling Meadows High School will present two plays and one act of a third in nightly rotation beginning July 28 and running through Aug. 5.

The students will present "Bad Seed," a mystery by Maxwell Anderson about an 8-year-old murderer. The play will star Nancy Weston and Fran Cantwell, who will alternate playing the girl; Mary DeMarc and Anne Steiber as her mother; and Jim Sprague, Tom Richards and Bill Arnold.

In addition, performances of Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit" are planned. The play is a farce about a séance. The cast includes Kerry Donovan, Michelle Lesley, Bill Arnold, Jim Sprague, Terri Ingworth, Mary DeMarc and Rodda White.

On the same evenings "Bad Seed" is presented, another cast will present the third act of Neil Simon's play "Plaza Suite" about a bride who locks herself in the washroom.

Curtain time will be 7 p.m. weeknights and 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the school. Tickets may be purchased in advance or at the door.

Paper Drive Planned

Cub Scout Pack 180 will hold a paper drive Saturday, July 15 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Papers may be brought to a container in the National Tea parking lot on Meadow Drive. Persons who cannot bring their papers in can arrange a pickup by calling 258-2820.

The board voted to hire the firm of McFadden and Everly, the Winnetka architects who designed the sports complex, to conduct a study to determine if such a rink could be financed by the sale of revenue bonds.

Steve Person, district superintendent of parks and recreation, said the board has been interested in an instructional rink for some time. If the study is favorable the district will probably build the rink, he said.

The study will determine if the instructional rink could generate enough revenue to pay for the bonds that will finance construction. Person said the idea would be dropped if the study is unfavorable.

Financing by revenue bonds, he said, would not cost the taxpayers anything additional.

PERSON ESTIMATED the cost of the rink, which would be used exclusively for instructional classes in ice skating, could range from $200,000 to $500,000, depending on what the district wants.

The rink would be east of the present sports complex building.

Person said the feasibility study could be completed in six weeks.

Dun & Bradstreet, which would handle the bond sale, requires the feasibility study to determine if the anticipated revenue would make construction of the rink profitable.

Youths Planning Backyard Carnival

A backyard carnival against dystrophy is being planned by four Rolling Meadows youths.

The carnival will be held Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at 2308 Eastman St. Serving as ringmasters will be Mary and Laura Coppolekta and Sandra and Anna Reed. The carnival will feature a milk bottle drop, bozo buckets, pie toss, bake sale, penny sale, ring toss, guess the marbles, raffles and many other games.

Proceeds from the carnival will go for the research and patient service programs of the Muscular Dystrophy Association of America.

"If the study says 'yes, we can have a rink,' we will probably go ahead with it," Person said.

"They could come back and tell us, 'There's no way you can pay for it,' and we'd drop the idea," he added.

"We think we need it," Person said. "We've reached a point where we need the facility to stay competitive with other rinks around us."

The district presently offers a learn-to-skate program. Classes are conducted on the sports complex hockey rink.

WITH AN instructional rink, Person said, the district could run classes on a separate schedule, and the classes would not have to compete with hockey programs for ice time.

More than 500 people are enrolled in the district's skating classes now. Without the rink, Person said, expanding enrollment would soon become impossible.

Although the park district feels its current skating and hockey programs are successful, the sports complex has built up a $30,000 deficit since it opened in 1971.

Rte. 53 Extension Work Set Late In Year

Construction on the extension of Rte. 53 north to Rte. 22 will probably begin late this year, according to an official of the Illinois Division of Highways.

Fred Seeley, project engineer, told the Herald Wednesday the six-lane divided highway will be extended from just north of Dundee Road, where the road presently ends, to just north of Rte. 22. There will be a diamond-type interchange at Rte. 22.

Seeley said the highway division hopes to begin construction on the new section of Rte. 53 in 1972 or early 1973. Once under way, the work will take about two years to complete.

Construction will probably begin on the interchange at Rte. 22 and the overpasses at Cuba Road, Long Grove Road and old Rte. 53, Seeley said. Work on the main highway will probably start about

IN ORDER to accommodate an increased demand for skating lessons, the Rolling Meadows Park District is considering construction of an instructional ice rink, to be operated as an adjunct to the sports complex. Money has been allocated for a feasibility study of the project.

Meyer May Seek Seat In House

BY KEN KOZAK

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer is not admitting that he will be an independent candidate for a 3rd District seat in the Illinois House of Representatives come November.

But he is not denying the possibility either.

Meyer recently revealed that backers have started circulating nominating petitions on his behalf, but, he said, not at his request.

There is, he admits, the chance that he will file those petitions with the proper authorities before Aug. 7 deadline.

Two weeks ago Meyer said some allies asked him if they could circulate nominating petitions for him. He said he did not commit himself to a candidacy then, but told them to circulate the petitions if they wanted to.

To get on the ballot in November, Meyer will need at least 3,000 signatures of registered voters in the 3rd district, according to a supervisor of the Cook County Elections Board.

2 Tennis Courts Will Be Resurfaced

The crumbling tennis courts at Campbell Street Park will be resurfaced this summer.

The Rolling Meadows park district board of commissioners has authorized an expenditure of approximately $10,000 to resurface and seal the two courts.

Steve Person, district superintendent of parks and recreation, said the work will be done this summer, but added that no timetable has been set yet.

JACK WALSH, who resigned as Arlington Heights village president to become assistant director of the state's department of local government affairs, said his experience with local governments throughout the six-county metropolitan area has underscored his belief in the importance of inter-governmental cooperation. Walsh works out of a 20th-floor office in the State of Illinois Building in Chicago.

Jack Walsh: Still 'Suburban Man'

by KURT BAER

Jack Walsh has a rule of thumb for working with local governments.

"You start with a problem, in a specific way, and then see where it leads you," said Walsh, who has been assistant director of the state's department of local government affairs since April, when he resigned as Arlington Heights village president.

"The job, by its very nature, is general. The most important aspect of my particular role is to help local governments that have a problem, whether it be a previous unsuccessful dealing with the state or just being unsure of where to go for help," he said.

Through an agreement with Gov. Richard Ogilvie, who appointed him to the state post, Walsh said he has limited his activity to the six-county metropolitan Chicago area.

"The area has characteristics unique from other parts of the state. Issues associated with the Chicago area are thought of differently in Springfield, and somehow they are different. I don't know exactly how but they are," he said.

Walsh, reflecting on his more than two months in this new post, said he is especially interested in representing the interest of the 3.7 million people who live in Chicago's suburbs.

"In segmentation they create their weakness," he said of Chicago's suburbs. "Traditionally, no one has been able to speak for them because no one knows what their position is."

Walsh is a strong advocate of inter-governmental cooperation while serving as Arlington Heights village president and says he continues to see the "merging of community interests" as a means of attacking large-scale problems.

"As I view the problem, it is absolutely essential that local governments find ways to work together," he said, adding that often county government can be encouraged to take a more active problem-solving role.

"Counties are a last line of defense against metro-government or other supergovernments," he said, emphasizing that cooperation does not have to mean loss of local control.

As a practical matter, local governments increasingly are being forced to cooperate in order to qualify for coveted federal and state project grants.

Grant guidelines often require that a project benefit more than just one community, such as the Wilke-Kirchoff detention basin which will serve southwest Arlington Heights and eastern Rolling Meadows as well as neighboring unincorporated land.

Another area of personal interest to Walsh is mass transportation.

"A special state policy committee is studying the various mass transit bills which are currently pending in the legislature with a view to coming up with a recommendation and presumably a legislative program," he said.

To date the Ogilvie administration has not made a formal mass transit policy recommendation, Walsh said. But a recommendation based on the policy committee's work should be forthcoming by the end of the year, he said.

Working with problems of local government in six counties has given Walsh a unique opportunity to make a comparative evaluation of Arlington Heights village government which formerly he saw only from the inside.

"Frankly, I am more pleased and proud of the community now than when I left. My experience has confirmed what I previously hoped was the case," he said.

He cited Arlington Heights' creation of a municipal planning department as "really quite advanced" among Chicago suburbs.

Planning is one of four specific areas of concentration for the Department of Local Government Affairs.

Walsh says he is committed to state government and part of that commitment is based on a belief in what he calls the integrity of incumbent Gov. Ogilvie.

As a result, he said he would be doing a "limited amount" of political campaigning for the governor this fall.

Park District Playground Program Starts Monday

The Salt Creek Rural Park District will offer a free playground program for residents, beginning Monday.

The program will also be offered free to residents at Arlington Park Race Track, according to Jim DeVos, park director.

The district will offer a supervised activity playground, featuring sports, crafts and games, from July 10 to Aug. 25, at Winston, Rose and South parks.

The program schedule will include:

arts and crafts, 10:30 a.m. to noon; archery, 1 to 1:45 p.m. for fourth and fifth graders; archery, 2 to 2:45 p.m. for sixth through eighth graders; special events for third through eighth grades, 3 to 5 p.m.

The above schedule, for district residents, will be held at Rose Park on Mondays, South Park on Wednesdays and Winston Park on Fridays.

A soccer program for boys in fifth through eighth grades will begin at Rose Park on July 17, from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

The programs for residents at Arlington Park Race Track will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays, beginning July 11.

Tuesdays, from 3 to 3:45 p.m., will feature an arts and crafts program and baseball for fourth through eighth grade boys from 3:45 to 5 p.m.

Girls' baseball is scheduled for Thursdays, from 3 to 3:45 p.m. A special events hour will also be held on Thursdays, from 3:45 to 5 p.m.

DeVos said the expansion of the program to include children of race track residents is an attempt to involve the transient residents at the track in park district activities. He said the district plans to "go quite extensively into programs for these people."

More information on the programs can be obtained by calling the park district at 259-6890.

Fender Lawyers Ask Board Hearing

Attorneys for John D. Fender, fired last Thursday by the School Dist. 25 board of education, have requested a full board of education hearing in the case.

Fender, a language arts teacher at Miner Junior High School, was fired for alleged "continuing inability to exercise mature judgment and restraint in dealing with classroom problems," according to the board.

The board also alleged that "he has on four occasions in the current school year struck students notwithstanding administrative admonitions that he refrain from doing so."

According to school district officials, a date for the hearing will probably be set at the July 13 school board meeting. The hearing must be held before Nov. 2, in accordance with the School Code of Illinois.

FENDER, who has been a teacher in the district for 10 years, has served as president of the Arlington Teachers Association this year. He was also chief negotiator at recently completed teachers' contract talks.

On July 14, Fender will be tried on battery charges in the Arlington Heights branch of the circuit court in the Municipal Building. The charges stem from the alleged beating of one of his students.

'Life's Short,' So He'll Stay With Horses

by BOB ANDERSEN

It is Bill Cunningham's opinion that "life is too short" and one should spend it doing something he enjoys.

Because of the philosophy, Bill quit selling equipment for IBM some years ago and returned to his first and only love... training horses.

"I enjoyed working for IBM," he explained Thursday at Arlington Park race track. "But my real passion is working with and training horses."

The racing season resident of Hermitage Trace apartments in Hoffman Estates trains 15 horses presently running at Arlington. His permanent home is New Orleans. He also gracefully performed Thursday as a tour director for 13 women residents of Hermitage Trace who made their first visit to the race track.

MARTY CARROLL, manager of Hermitage Trace, said the women, having discovered Bill was a horse trainer, expressed a desire to visit the track and, perhaps, get a privileged insight into what makes the horse racing business tick.

So Bill accommodated the women and the tour was made Thursday. The women were shown the stables where Bill's horses are kept as the trainer explained some of the finer points of training a horse and keeping the animal fit. The girls then watched the afternoon's slate of racing and placed some small bets.

None of the gals emerged as a big winner, Carroll said. But then, none lost much either.

Bill is commissioned by owners to train their horses. He gets a percentage of whatever the horses win. Though he now works out of a "public stable" in New Orleans, the horseman said he will be opening his own stable there in November.

BILL'S DAY starts at 5 a.m., when he exercises his horses. He returns to Hermitage Trace at about 11 a.m. and takes a breather before returning to the track at about 1 p.m. to saddle his horses and watch how they fare in the races.

Bill never bets. He prefers to do as good a job as possible training his horses and then "gamble" on a percentage of the purse when his horses finish in the money.

He estimates it takes $7,000 annually to train a horse and keep the animal racing.

Horse racing is "like drilling for oil," he said. "If you hit one good colt, it can win you $100,000."

And that, the trainer declared, can make up for an awful lot of losing colts.

Jim Kuhn Third In Soapbox Derby

Jim Kuhn of Rolling Meadows raced to a third place finish Sunday in the Highland Park Soapbox Derby.

As third place winner in a field of 38, Jim received a trophy and a $50 gift certificate to a Highland Park sporting goods store. The winner of Sunday's contest will go on to compete in the National Soapbox Derby Contest in Akron, Ohio.

Sunday was Jim's first experience at derby racing. He spent approximately 2½ months building his racer. He was the only entry from the Northwest suburbs.

Mikva, Percy Show Edge In Campaign Dollar Battles

by ROBERT LAHEY

Winnetka attorney Samuel H. Young was badly outgunned financially by his Democratic opponent for the U.S. Congress in the early stages of the campaign, according to statements of campaign finances filed with the Illinois Secretary of State John W. Lewis.

Republican Young is seeking to unseat U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, now the congressman from the 2nd Congressional District, in the new 10th District.

Reports by the candidates for the first period, required under the new federal campaign disclosure law, showed Young's campaign chest in the red by $5,482, while Mikva showed a balance of $17,134. During that period — from April 7 to May 31 — Mikva spent $12,636, compared to $11,167 by Young.

Financial reports of Sen. Charles H. Percy and U.S. Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, his Democratic challenger, also showed Percy with a financial advantage over Pucinski, although the challenger spent 50 per cent more during the period than Percy.

PERCY SHOWED a May 31 balance of $117,499 after expenditures of $43,152 during the eight-week period. During the same time, Pucinski reported expenditures of $65,256 leaving a balance of $57,248.

The statement filed by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, seeking reelection in the 12th Congressional District, showed expenditures of $3,056 and a May 31 balance of $7,158.

Crane's Democratic opponent, Edwin L. Frank of Hoffman Estates, filed certification of his candidacy with the secretary of state on the day the records were examined and no financial statement was yet available.

The largest single contribution reported by any of the candidates was $7,400, as fair market value for four automobiles supplied to Percy by the United Auto Workers Committee for Good Government.

Candidates are required to itemize only contributions over $100.

Percy reported $8,753 in unitemized

contributions. His largest personal contribution was $2,600 from Robert C. Ziebarth, an executive of Bell and Howell, of which Percy is former board chairman.

FIVE PERSONS contributed $1,000 each to the Percy fund during the eight-week filing period. They were Hope McCormick, Republican national committeewoman; Elizabeth Blair of Lake Bluff; Levering Cartwright of Wilmette; Chicago attorney Albert E. Jenner, and James P. Giles of San Marino, Calif.

Percy also received $2,000 from the National Republican Senatorial Committee, and raised $16,402 from "An Evening with Diahann Carroll," staged in April.

A personal report filed by Percy showed that he received an additional $1,478 from the senatorial committee for travel and newspaper advertising.

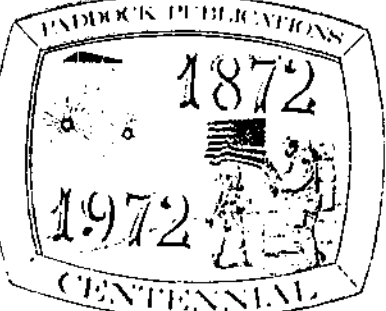

Pucinski's largest donations came from three contributors who gave $1,000 each to his campaign. They were Julius Mayer of Chicago; Harold L. Perlman of Chicago; and Ann and Walter Koziof of Antioch. Pucinski also reported receipts of $11,650 from a campaign event at Mill Run Theater.

Mikva reported five contributions of $1,000 or more. R. J. Levy Harris, Inc., of Chicago, contributed $2,384 during the filing period, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benton of Evanston gave Mikva $1,025.

CONTRIBUTORS of $1,000 each were Milton Shadur of Glencoe; the Illinois United Steelworkers of America; and the Chicago law firm of Devove, Shadur, Krupp, Miller, Adelman and Hamilton. David Mirabelli of Northlake contributed $500.

Mikva also reported receipts of $15,900 from a campaign dinner, and $1,270 from a May Cocktail party.

The only itemized contribution to the various Young committees was $900 from attorney David Vogel and his wife, Jodi. Total receipts of $5,635 reported by Young included loans of $3,500 from his personal corporation to the campaign funds.

Demel Elected President Of School Board

Lloyd Demel was elected president last night of the River Trails Dist. 26 School Board.

Demel, sole board member from Prospect Heights replaced Clarke Robinson who resigned from the board last week. Robertson, a partner in the law firm of Kirkland & Ellis, resigned to avoid certain income disclosures required by the "Illinois Ethics Law."

A caucus-backed candidate, Demel, 41, was elected to the board in April. He is a marketing development manager for Universal Oil Products in Des Plaines. He has a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Illinois and a master's degree in business from the University of Chicago.

Demel, a resident of the district for nearly 12 years, has four children. He served last year on a citizen's committee that was instrumental in getting a building plus a tax hike referendum passed last spring. He lives at 13 Leon Ln. East.

The board also elected Ted Wattenberg as secretary. He has served on the board

Bike Thefts—The Problem Is Serious Across Country

by TOM VON MALDER

After three bicycles were stolen from his children within a 12-month period, Edward A. DuPlessis, 307 Wa-Pella Ave., Mount Prospect, went to the village's bike auction to save some money. He bought several of the unclaimed bikes, only to find out later that one of them had been stolen from his neighbor.

"He paid me the auction price, $3.50, and got it back," DuPlessis said.

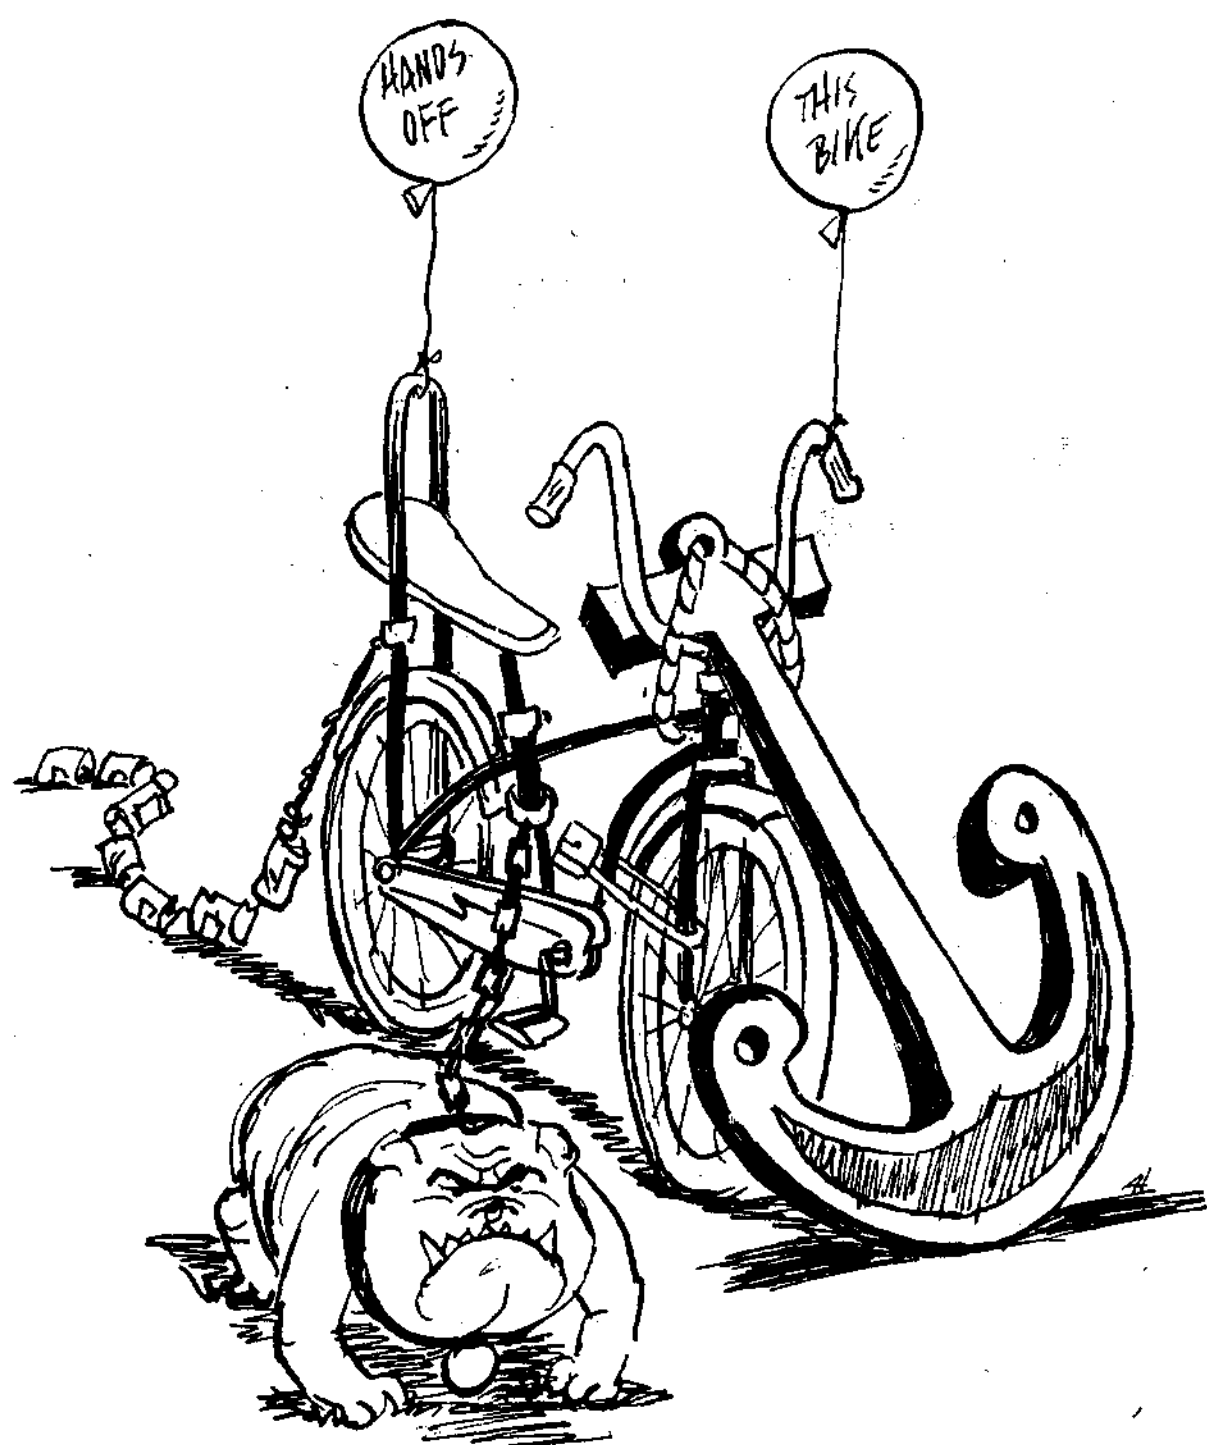

Although DuPlessis' story is unusual, bike thefts are a serious problem everywhere in this country. The Northwest suburbs and Mount Prospect are no exception. Pick any neighborhood and knock on any door; if they haven't lost a bike, they know someone who has.

THROUGH JUNE 28 in Mount Prospect some 170 bikes have been reported as lost or stolen to the police this year. Of these, only 23 have been recovered. The rate of thefts is expected to go up during the summer months, when the pools are open and the children are out of school.

One would think their home would be the best place to keep a bike safe from thieves. However, statistics show that the largest number of bikes, 55, have been stolen from around the home. And

by JOHN MAES

Concerned citizens and civic organizations in Prospect Heights have been rallying together recently behind a common cause: to save the Hillcrest Slough from early ruin.

Sewage deposits, soil erosion and dumping have been contributed to pollution of the north half and have put it in danger of extinction.

The group has been working to preserve the slough, one of the few remaining wetlands in Illinois, as a recreation area and wildlife preserve.

The south half of the slough is owned by H. C. Hauvner and the north half is owned by the Hillcrest Homeowners Association.

The Prospect Heights Park District, however, recently filed a letter of intent to acquire the land for use as a park with the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

DOLORES HAUGH, head of the "Save the Slough" committee, said the fact that the groups are organized and working together will make their efforts much more effective.

Other groups involved in the push include the Prospect Heights Improvement Association, the Prospect Heights Park District, the Old Town Sanitary District and the Hillcrest Homeowners' Association.

"We want to keep man-made conditions away from the area," Mrs. Haugh added. "That's what polluted the north half in the first place and we're working to return it to its natural state."

The most recent controversy over the 27-acre area arose from a dispute over the barricading of the section of Willow Road that cuts across the slough.

The barricades were installed by the county after angry citizens and Prospect Heights park officials contended that soil erosion from the 10-year-old road was further polluting the slough. The barricades were removed two days later at the request of residents who frequently use the road, and the Prospect Heights Fire Department.

Ironically, this issue, Mrs. Haugh said, did more to unite people to try and save the slough than anything else.

A three-year study on the condition of the area done by Gabriele Ronnett of

This Morning In Brief

The State

A federal appeals court barred Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley from moving in Illinois courts to reinstate 59 delegates ousted by the Democratic Party's credentials committee from the party's national convention . . . Daley forces temporarily abandoned efforts to obtain a state court injunction forbidding the seating of a rival delegate group, but their attorneys vowed to fight on.

The trial of Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 codefendants in the Black Panther case was postponed for five days so a defense attorney could take a vacation . . . Hanrahan's lawyers had asked a three-week delay, contending they had not received all information due them from the prosecution. Circuit Court Judge Philip Romiti denied that motion.

The World

A flash fire swept a newly renovated ward in a Sherborne, England, mental hospital, killing 30 of 36 male patients who were too severely retarded to flee through an unlocked door.

American chess challenger Bobby Fischer apologized for delaying the start of the world championship chess match with Russian Boris Spassky, but a demand from the Soviet chess federation threatened to cancel the 24-game series . . . The Soviets demanded that Fischer forfeit the first game.

Newly elected Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka said his government's foreign policy would be based on maintaining strong relations with the United States.

The Nation

The administration called in two dozen grocery-chain executives for some tough talk on the rising cost of food, the first of three sessions ordered last week by President Nixon. Similar meetings are set for today with farmers, food processors and wholesalers.

A 23-year-old Buffalo, N. Y., college student surrendered nearly three hours after stabbing his estranged wife and her boyfriend, then holding his infant daughter hostage at knife-point and boarding an empty 707 jetliner, demanding to be "flown out of the country."

The government gave the Boeing Co. permission to sell $150 million worth of 707 commercial jets and spare parts to Communist China. Negotiations have been going on since April and may take many more months before a contract is signed.

The War

South Vietnamese paratroopers and tank crews recaptured most of the provincial capital of Quang Tri City from the North Vietnamese . . . In the air war, the U.S. command said American fighter-bombers made 320 raids over North Vietnam Tuesday, the most strikes in a single day since June 27.

For 3rd District House Seat

Meyer May Be Candidate

BY KEN KOZAK

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer is not admitting that he will be an independent candidate for a 3rd District seat in the Illinois House of Representatives come November.

But he is not denying the possibility either.

Meyer recently revealed that backers have started circulating nominating petitions on his behalf, but, he said, not at his request.

There is, he admits, the chance that he will file those petitions with the proper authorities before Aug. 7 deadline.

Meyer suggested that his decision might not come until the last moment.

MEYER NEVER ruled out the possibility of running as an independent in the November election, and discussed that prospect immediately after his loss in the 3rd District Republican primary in March.

At that time he said some of his backers were interested in seeing him launch an independent candidacy, although he was beat handsly by the two Republican Party-endorsed candidates in that race.

Meyer, who ran without party support, polled 25 per cent of the vote compared to the combined 75 per cent scored by the winners, Virginia Macdonald of Arlington Heights and Donald L. Totten of Hoffman Estates.

If he runs in November, Meyer will face not only Mrs. Macdonald and Totten, but also Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights and fellow Democrat John P. Kelley of Schaumburg. Only three seats are available.

Two weeks ago Meyer said some allies asked him if they could circulate nominating petitions for him. He said he did not commit himself to a candidacy then, but told them to circulate the petitions if they wanted to.

To get on the ballot in November, Meyer will need at least 3,000 signatures of registered voters in the 3rd district, according to a supervisor of the Cook County Elections Board.

Bike Thefts: Serious Problem In Country

13 of these were taken from inside garages.

The stolen bikes range in value from nothing to $170. Most of these, according to a local insurance man, are covered under homeowner or renter insurance policies; however, the $50 deductible provision usually applies.

Other areas with heavy losses reported are schools (40), parks (19), churches (11), Randhurst (13) and other stores (11). But only two have been reported as stolen from the railroad station.

Police Chief Bert Giddens said he can explain these statistics easily — "People are getting pretty careless with bikes. They should lock them up and secure them."

Of the garage thefts, he said it is easy for a bike thief in a car to cruise streets looking for unattended bikes in open garages.

WITH THE train station, the story is different, Giddens said. The area is patrolled better and is more exposed. The chief thinks more aggressive patrolling throughout the village could help reduce the problem.

Many bikes, even if found, do not get "reunited" with their rightful owners. The bikes go unclaimed and end up at the public works building, 11 S. Pine St., where they sit until the annual police auction.

The main reason for this is that the bikes are not registered. Without registration, the police have no way to accurately trace or prove ownership.

Of an estimated 14,000 bikes in Mount Prospect, Sgt. Ralph Doney said only some 7,000 are registered. The stickers are free and can be picked up at the police station, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

Wallskog, who both resigned in June and Robinson.

Robinson resigned because he said the Ethics Law would require him to list certain sources of income for his entire firm. "I do not want to put our firm in that kind of a position," he said.

Based on an interpretation of the law from the secretary of state's office, Robinson said he would have to name the governmental units served by his firm in 1971. He said he would also have to list the type of clients and the types of services rendered them by the firm.

Airplanes are the perfect background for Ester Noffke

Esther Noffke: The WASP Still Flies

by RICH HONACK

From the time she was in grade school Esther Noffke has spent most of her time dedicated to one field — aviation.

Miss Noffke first started thinking about airplanes in the sixth grade, in the 1930s.

"I always dreamed of flying a military aircraft. It kind of appealed to me," said the pilot of more than 30 years. "So when I was old enough I started taking flying lessons from Dilbert Koerner in Kankakee."

Miss Noffke took her lessons, passed, and when World War II broke out her dream was fulfilled.

In 1943 she joined the WASPs (Women Air Force Service Pilots) and began flying military planes. She said she flew many of the aircraft at the time, but her highlight was flying B-26 bombers.

"WE FLEW THE B-26 while pulling training targets for the fighters to fire at," said Miss Noffke. "Our WASP pilots never left the United States during the war and the organization was dissolved shortly after it."

It was at that time that Miss Noffke first came to Wheeling and Pal-Waukee airport.

"I joined George Priester, owner of Pal-Waukee, in 1945, and have been here ever since," said Miss Noffke. "The name Pal-Waukee appealed to me the first time I heard it so I thought I'd come up and give it a try."

Miss Noffke started out as an instructor at Pal-Waukee and also did some business flying. When she joined the staff there were seven workers — today there are more than 130 employees.

In the past 25 years Miss Noffke has also seen many other changes in aviation. She feels there have been tremendous changes in aircraft speed, design, uses and numbers.

"Things are going to continue changing," she said. "We are going into a completely new era of air travel. The space program is offering so much in technology, it's almost hard to believe."

Miss Noffke said the biggest change to come about is the use of radios. "Twenty years ago it was a big deal to purchase a radio set for a plane, at a cost $495. Today we don't think twice to spend $30,000 if it is necessary to communicate, since communication is one of the most important things to a pilot," she said.

She also finds the new era is presenting more challenges on the ground, as well as in the air.

"I FIND THINGS are happening in the legislature that just can't be passed by without getting involved," she explained. "The FAA (Federal Aviation Administration) is constantly seeking to better the business."

Miss Noffke explained that industry's relationship with airports and the FAA is a growing field that also has most of its work on the ground. She pointed out that it is important to properly train the new aviation people on the ground before they fly.

"Quite frankly, I only fly to get in the necessary hours to keep qualified," she said. "With people so hungry for aviation, I feel I'm doing more for the business where I am — on the ground."

And Miss Noffke is "where the action is" at Pal-Waukee. She is in the same office with Priester and his son, Charles. According to many people she knows as much about the airport as anyone.

"I act more as an adviser than anything else," she said. "When someone has a problem or doesn't know a certain aspect of the business, they ask for my help."

Staying on the ground has also given Miss Noffke a chance to practice her favorite hobby — politics.

"Most of my politicking is making speeches to women's organizations and working with the legislature."

"I try to explain to the women that they should get involved in politics and voice their opinions. I try to tell them that they should not sit idle while things are happening."

MISS NOFFKE, a Wheeling resident, said she tries to get legislation passed or stopped by studying and trying to get legislators to listen to her arguments.

"Sometimes you win, sometimes you lose, but it is relaxing and interesting to be involved in politics, anyway."

Miss Noffke does not see an end to her involvement in aviation, whether it be in the business itself or in politics.

"There is no age limit or ceiling on things people can do in aviation. It will never stop changing and growing. As long as it's there and I'm around, I'll try to be in it," said Miss Noffke.

Rte. 53 Extension Work Set Late In Year

Construction on the extension of Rte. 53 north to Rte. 22 will probably begin late this year, according to an official of the Illinois Division of Highways.

Fred Seeley, project engineer, told the Herald Wednesday the six-lane divided highway will be extended from just north of Dundee Road, where the road presently ends, to just north of Rte. 22. There will be a diamond-type interchange at Rte. 22.

Seeley said the highway division hopes to begin construction on the new section of Rte. 53 in 1972 or early 1973. Once under way, the work will take about two years to complete.

Construction will probably begin on the interchange at Rte. 22 and the overpasses at Cuba Road, Long Grove Road and old Rte. 53, Seeley said. Work on the main highway will probably start about six months later.

No detours are planned while the extension is under construction, Seeley said. Rte. 53 and Rte. 22 will both be constructed under traffic. Long Grove Road and Cuba Road will be closed except to local traffic, he said. No cost figures are available yet, and no dates have been announced for letting of bids.

The stretch of Rte. 53 from Rte. 12 to Rte. 68 was opened in December, 1970. Long range plans call for the highway to serve as a route from the Wisconsin state line to Interstate 80 east of Joliet.

Rte. 53 will also connect to Interstate 90 (the Eisenhower Expressway) to the south near Addison and Wood Dale. This part of the construction is scheduled to be completed in September of this year.

When the section of Rte. 53 linking that road to Interstate 90 is finished, it will be possible to get on Rte. 53 at Rte. 68 and travel into Chicago as an alternative to taking the Northwest Tollway.

Vandals Cut Cables

Several cables were cut by vandals Monday morning at the carnival at Lions Park, Lincoln and William Streets, Mount Prospect.

Recycling Levels Off At 62,000 Lbs.

The recycling of glass bottles and tin cans in Arlington Heights is leveling off at about 50,000 pounds of glass and 12,000 pounds of cans per month.

Village Health Dir. Frank Charlton reports a total of 524,100 pounds of glass and 104,630 pounds of cans have been recycled since Arlington Heights started its recycling program in April 1971.

Collection of bins are located at the north side fire station, 709 N. Arlington Heights Rd. and the south side station, 2000 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Charlton said residents are asked to crush empty cans and remove any metal retaining rings from bottles before depositing them in the recycling bins.

Mikva, Percy Show Campaign Dollar Fight Edge

by ROBERT LAHEY

Winnetka attorney Samuel H. Young was badly outgunned financially by his Democratic opponent for the U.S. Congress in the early stages of the campaign, according to statements of campaign finances filed with the Illinois Secretary of State John W. Lewis.

Republican Young is seeking to unseat U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, now the congressman from the 2nd Congressional District, in the new 10th District.

Reports by the candidates for the first period, required under the new federal campaign disclosure law, showed Young's campaign chest in the red by $5,482, while Mikva showed a balance of $17,134. During that period — from April 7 to May 31 — Mikva spent $12,636, compared to $11,167 by Young.

Financial reports of Sen. Charles H. Percy and U.S. Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, his Democratic challenger, also showed Percy with a financial advantage over Pucinski, although the challenger spent 50 per cent more during the period than Percy.

PERCY SHOWED a May 31 balance of $117,499 after expenditures of $43,152 during the eight-week period. During the same time, Pucinski reported expenditures of $65,256 leaving a balance of $57,248.

The statement filed by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, seeking reelection in the 12th Congressional District, showed expenditures of $3,056 and a May 31 balance of $7,158.

Crane's Democratic opponent, Edwin L. Frank of Hoffman Estates, filed certification of his candidacy with the secretary of state on the day the records were examined and no financial statement was yet available.

The largest single contribution reported by any of the candidates was $7,400, as fair market value for four automobiles supplied to Percy by the United Auto Workers Committee for Good Government.

Candidates are required to itemize only contributions over $100.

Percy reported $8,753 in unitemized contributions. His largest personal contribution was $2,600 from Robert C. Ziebart, an executive of Bell and Howell, of which Percy is former board chairman.

FIVE PERSONS contributed $1,000 each to the Percy fund during the eight-week filing period. They were Hope McCormick, Republican national committeewoman; Elizabeth Blair of Lake Bluff; Levering Cartwright of Wilmette; Chicago attorney Albert E. Jenner, and James P. Giles of San Marino, Calif.

Percy also received $2,000 from the National Republican Senatorial Committee, and raised $16,402 from "An Evening with Diahann Carroll," staged in April.

A personal report filed by Percy showed that he received an additional $1,478 from the senatorial committee for travel and newspaper advertising.

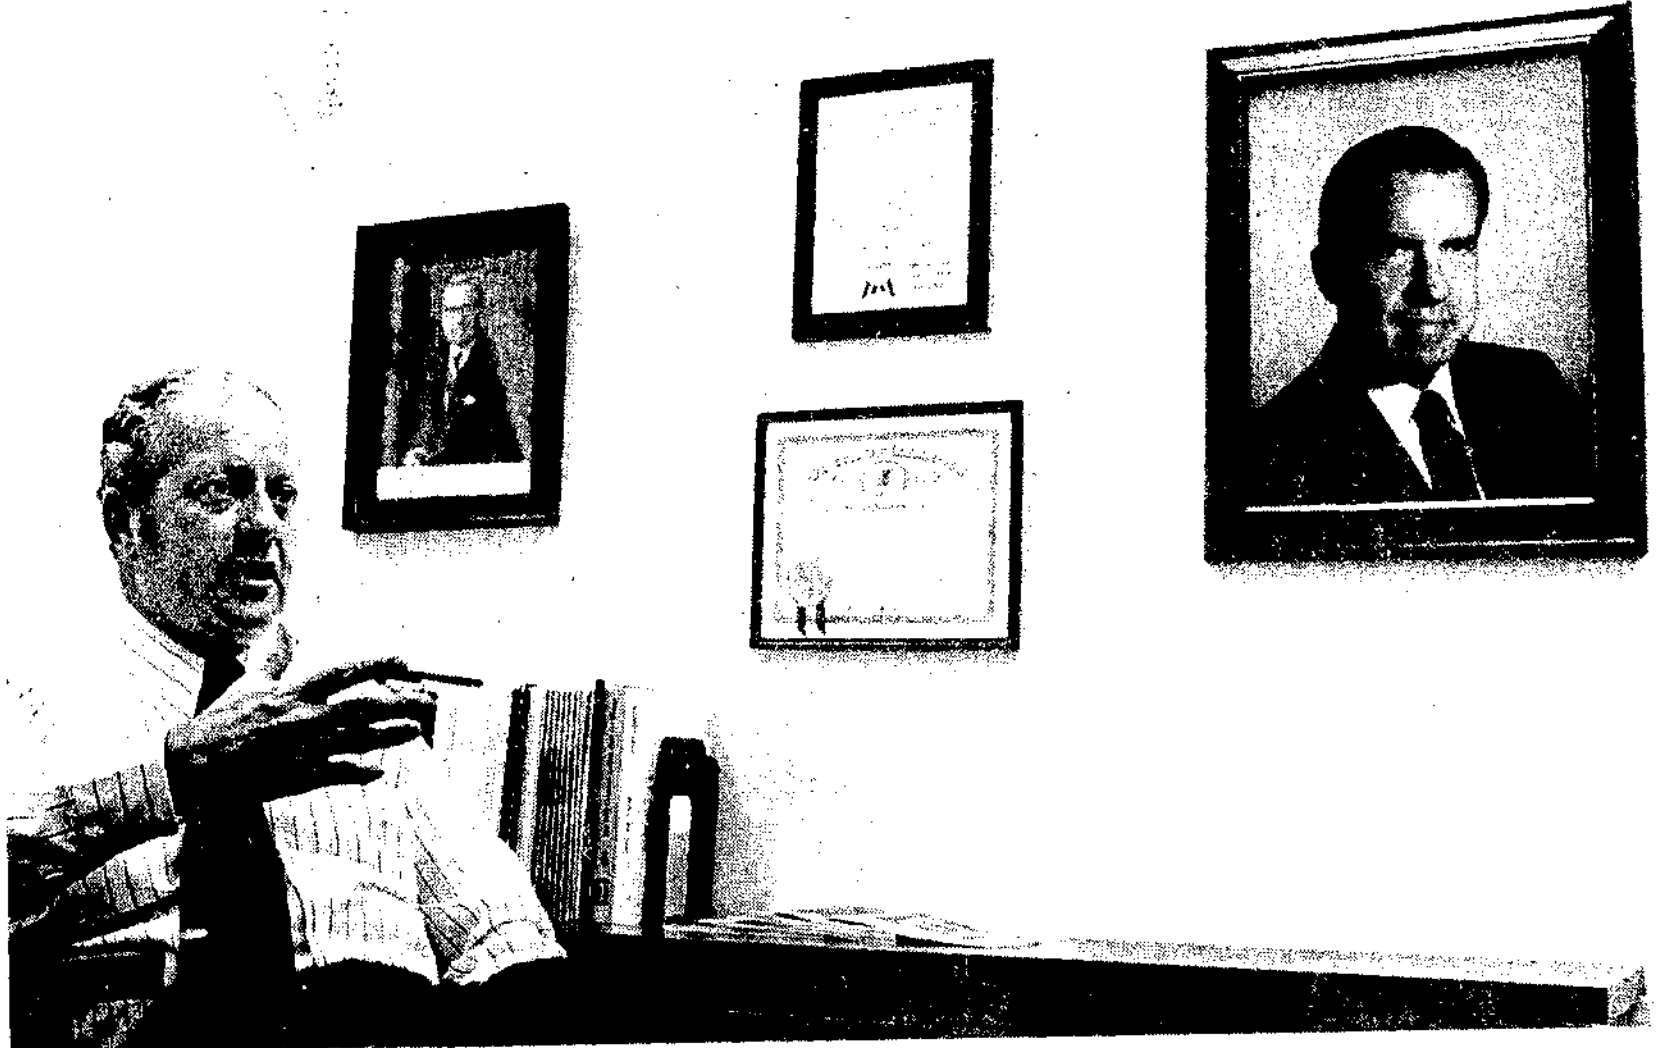

Pucinski's largest donations came from three contributors who gave $1,000 each to his campaign. They were Julius Mayer of Chicago; Harold L. Perlman of Chicago; and Ann and Walter Koziol of Antioch. Pucinski also reported receipts of $11,650 from a campaign event at Mill Run Theater.

Mikva reported five contributions of $1,000 or more. R. J. Levy Harris, Inc., of Chicago, contributed $2,364 during the filing period, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benton of Evanston gave Mikva $1,025.

CONTRIBUTORS of $1,000 each were Milton Shadur of Glencoe; the Illinois United Steelworkers of America; and the Chicago law firm of Devoe, Shadur, Krupp, Miller, Adelman and Hamilton. David Mirabelli of Northlake contributed $500.

Mikva also reported receipts of $15,900 from a campaign dinner, and $1,270 from a May Cocktail party.

The only itemized contribution to the various Young committees was $900 from attorney David Vogel and his wife, Jodi. Total receipts of $5,635 reported by Young included loans of $3,500 from his personal corporation to the campaign funds.

JACK WALSH, who resigned as Arlington Heights village president to become assistant director of the state's department of local government affairs said his experience with local governments throughout the six-county metropolitan area has underscored his belief in the importance of intergovernmental cooperation. Walsh works out of a 20th-floor office in the State of Illinois Building in Chicago.

Jack Walsh: Still 'Suburban Man'

by KURT BAER

Jack Walsh has a rule of thumb for working with local governments.

"You start with a problem, in a specific way, and then see where it leads you," said Walsh, who has been assistant director of the state's department of local government affairs since April, when he resigned as Arlington Heights village president.

"The job, by its very nature, is general. The most important aspect of my particular role is to help local governments that have a problem, whether it be a previous unsuccessful dealing with the state or just being unsure of where to go for help," he said.

Through an agreement with Gov. Richard Ogilvie, who appointed him to the state post, Walsh said he has limited his activity to the six-county metropolitan Chicago area.

"The area has characteristics unique from other parts of the state. Issues associated with the Chicago area are thought of differently in Springfield, and somehow they are different. I don't know exactly how but they are," he said.

Walsh, reflecting on his more than two months in this new post, said he is especially interested in representing the interest of the 3.7 million people who live in Chicago's suburbs.

"In segmentation they create their weakness," he said of Chicago's suburbs. "Traditionally, no one has been able to speak for them because no one knows what their position is."

Walsh was a strong advocate of inter-governmental cooperation while serving as Arlington Heights village president and says he continues to see the "merging of community interests" as a means of attacking large-scale problems.

"As I view the problem, it is absolutely essential that local governments find ways to work together," he said, adding that often county government can be encouraged to take a more active problem-solving role.

"Counties are a last line of defense against metro-government or other supergovernments," he said, emphasizing that cooperation does not have to mean loss of local control.

As a practical matter, local governments increasingly are being forced to cooperate in order to qualify for coveted federal and state project grants.

Grant guidelines often require that a project benefit more than just one community, such as the Wilke-Kirchoff detention basin which will serve southwest Arlington Heights and eastern Rolling Meadows as well as neighboring unincorporated land.

Another area of personal interest to Walsh is mass transportation.

"A special state policy committee is studying the various mass transit bills which are currently pending in the legislature with a view to coming up with a recommendation and presumably a legislative program," he said.

To date the Ogilvie administration has not made a formal mass transit policy recommendation, Walsh said. But a recommendation based on the policy committee's work should be forthcoming by the end of the year, he said.

Working with problems of local government in six counties has given Walsh a unique opportunity to make a comparative evaluation of Arlington Heights village government which formerly he saw only from the inside.

"Frankly, I am more pleased and proud of the community now than when I left. My experience has confirmed what I previously hoped was the case," he said.

He cited Arlington Heights' creation of a municipal planning department as "really quite advanced" among Chicago suburbs.

Planning is one of four specific areas of concentration for the Department of Local Government Affairs.

Walsh says he is committed to state government and part of that commitment is based on a belief in what he calls the integrity of incumbent Gov. Ogilvie.

As a result, he said he would be doing a "limited amount" of political campaigning for the governor this fall.

Fender Lawyers Ask Board Hearing

Attorneys for John D. Fender, fired last Thursday by the School Dist. 25 board of education, have requested a full board of education hearing in the case.

Fender, a language arts teacher at Miner Junior High School, was fired for alleged "continuing inability to exercise mature judgment and restraint in dealing with classroom problems," according to the board.

The board also alleged that "he has on four occasions in the current school year struck students notwithstanding administrative admonitions that he refrain from doing so."

According to school district officials, a date for the hearing will probably be set at the July 13 school board meeting. The hearing must be held before Nov. 2, in accordance with the School Code of Illinois.

FENDER, WHO has been a teacher in the district for 10 years, has served as president of the Arlington Teachers Association this year. He was also chief negotiator at recently completed teachers' contract talks.

On July 14, Fender will be tried on battery charges in the Arlington Heights branch of the circuit court in the Municipal Building. The charges stem from the alleged beating of one of his students.

Will Meyer Seek House Post?

BY KEN KOZAK

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer is not admitting that he will be an independent candidate for a 3rd District seat in the Illinois House of Representatives come November.

But he is not denying the possibility either.

Meyer recently revealed that backers have started circulating nominating petitions on his behalf, but, he said, not at his request.

There is, he admits, the chance that he will file those petitions with the proper authorities before Aug. 7 deadline.

Meyer suggested that his decision might not come until the last moment.

MEYER NEVER ruled out the possibility of running as an independent in the November election, and discussed that prospect immediately after his loss in the 3rd District Republican primary in March.

At that time he said some of his backers were interested in seeing him launch an independent candidacy, although he was beat handily by the two Republican Party-endorsed candidates in that race.

Meyer, who ran without party support, pulled 25 per cent of the vote compared to the combined 75 per cent scored by the winners, Virginia Macdonald of Arlington Heights and Donald L. Totten of Hoffman Estates.

If he runs in November, Meyer will face not only Mrs. Macdonald and Totten, but also Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights and fellow Democrat John P. Kelley of Schaumburg. Only three seats are available.

Two weeks ago Meyer said some allies asked him if they could circulate nominating petitions for him. He said he did not commit himself to a candidacy then, but told them to circulate the petitions if they wanted to.

'Nothing Unique' In Village

What Do Area Youths Want?

What are the young people of Arlington Heights all about? What are their likes, their dislikes? What do they think of Arlington Heights and surrounding suburbs? Herald staff writer Cindy Tew talked to young people, their parents, local businessmen, school personnel and village officials to find the answers.

by CINDY TEW

Arlington Heights can be a good place for high school-age people to live — but it also can be the worst place in the world.

Most kids confess they can find something to do, either at school, at parks, at churches or at friends' houses. If they try hard enough. They also will say that there are lots of things Arlington Heights just does not provide.

"There's nothing really unique to Arlington Heights — like skating in Northbrook — that high school-age people can relate to," said 17-year-old Scott Stains. Scott has been the treasurer of the Arlington High School student council as well as secretary of his junior class.

The prevailing attitude is that the village does not want to see teens congregated in any great numbers, and the attitude is reflected in their conversations about what this village needs.

OLDER TEENS suggest everything from dragstrips to miniature golf courses. Just a place "where we can congregate and won't get arrested." The administrators of the village, however, won't let anything that would be restricted to high school students exist in the village, according to some youths.

"They don't want too many kids in one place," said Stains. He remembers the time several years ago that slot cars were proposed for a building near the center of the village. It was rejected by the plan commission, he said, because there would be "too many youths in one place in the village."

The park district also takes a lot of abuse from older teens.

"We were saturated with programs when we were little. Now there's nothing," is one response.

"There are too many junior high and even grade school kids participating in OUR activities," is another typical response.

"The park board won't let us do anything on our own," is a comment from youth organizers who tried on their own to manage the teen center below Olympic Park Pool, now called the Green Barrel. The center now is run by adults.

Thomas Thornton, director of parks and recreation, said there is a lot of park use by teens on an informal basis, but he admits there are few organized youth activities.

"There doesn't seem to be much they want to do, as far as organized activities go," said Thornton. "Many high school-age kids use our tennis courts and ball diamonds heavily, however."

RICHARD SEDOWSKI, director of the teen center, agrees with Thornton's interpretation of today's Arlington Heights youth.

"They say they want dances — our bi-monthly dances have been a bomb," said Sedowski. "Bad groups don't draw, and when we get a good group, kids won't pay the extra 50 cents or so to get in."

The Green Barrel must support itself through the concessions and admission to dances, according to the Arlington Heights Park Board. Therefore, the center is open to everyone on Saturday, which is a big day for concession sales.

"The older kids don't realize that the little kids they keep complaining about help support their teen center," said Sedowski. "If they want a place, they have to give a little."

Stains says the problem lies with the park board.

"We came up with some ideas last year and the park board said no," said Stains. He also said dances that were planned by him were money-makers.

TIE FACT remains that the teens who once were enthused with the teen center now have dropped out of it completely, and teens who remain are there because they don't want to be in the school building next door, not because they love the center.

The picking between the lesser of two evils seems to be common among village youth.

"There are only so many places you can go, and so much to do, then you get bored," said 16-year-old Jim Nystrom. "There's not enough open space within a reasonable distance."

Bike riding, an increasingly favorite activity of older teens, also is somewhat hampered by the increasing volume of village traffic.

"I love bike riding, and sometimes I get up at 3 a.m. and ride around the village because it's the only time I can do so without taking my life into my hands," said Stains.

Deer Grove Forest Preserve in Palatine is a favorite spot for older youth because of the open air and the "group" atmosphere. With Deer Grove becoming more and more associated with drugs and "wildness," however, area police and parents have teamed up to try to keep "good" kids out.

OLDER TEEN-AGERS also come up against authority when it comes to dating. They also come up against each other.

Though honesty pervades the high school generation in most subjects, the boy-girl relationship still is in the category of game-playing.

"When you really like a girl, there are a lot of preliminary steps you have to go through. You have to make sure she at least wants to go out with you, or it's really a blow to the ego."

Women's liberation or not, the girls still are having the time-worn problem of how to get a boy's attention.

"You just can't go up to a guy and ask him out," said an Arlington Heights junior. "And you have to be very careful to get him to notice you without being obnoxious."

Once a determination is made that this boy likes that girl — usually with the help of many friends — parents become the major problem, according to some couples.

"PARENTS REALLY worry," said 16-year-old Rachael Anderson. "They try to think of everything possible that could happen to you when you're out of the house."

Rachael added that she's glad, deep down inside, that her parents care about what she's doing.

According to a survey several parents feel there is enough for high schoolers to do in Arlington Heights — too much perhaps.

"They get so involved that there's sometimes very little time for the family," said Tom Short, a village resident. "We're scheduled out for eight weeks."

Many parents also admit that it's hard to break the home ties and let their kids grow up.

Said Mrs. Charmaine Pliska: "We think of them as children, and they think of themselves as adults."

RAP SESSIONS and guitars are the prime ingredients of the Lost and Found Coffee House in Arlington Heights. Don Foster, founder and manager of the coffee house, talks to Rich Rucinski and Susie Gustafson about the philosophy of the house. "It's a Christian House — but that doesn't mean we hit you over the head with a bible when you walk in," according to Foster.

Youths Find Little Entertainment In Village

by CINDY TEW

For teenagers who can only travel as far as their feet or bicycles can carry them, and within parent limitations, there are real boundaries to the Village of Arlington Heights.

Unlike working parents who see the city, and perhaps many suburbs daily, high schoolers must live in the village. Jobs, social life and school center on a rather small radius, smaller than some people think.

Arlington Heights' youth only account for a handful of the young people who frequent teen hangouts like Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg and Randhurst in Mount Prospect, because of the distance.

Though there are no official counts of how many high school students work, school counselors as well as the Chamber of Commerce estimate the number is steadily increasing.

The Arlington Heights Park District alone provides over 50 summer jobs for high school youth, paying from $1.50 to $2.50 per hour.

"WORK PROVIDES an activity program in this village, there's no doubt about it," said Jack W. Martin, assistant principal at Forest View High School in Arlington Heights and chairman of the Arlington Heights Youth Council.

"I just wonder if high-school age kids work at the expense of doing other things," he said. "If there were no jobs, maybe there would be a greater need to provide more meaningful activities and more places designed for youth activities."

Outside of work, teens have innumerable hangouts which include almost every local eating establishment; the Green Barrel, which is the park district teen center; the Lost and Found, a Christian coffee house on south Arlington Heights Road; school clubs and activities; church groups and local commercial entertainment like bowling and movies. There are also unstructured activities in the home and in local parks.

Though hanging around eating establishments just talking to friends can be an enjoyable event for teens, local businessmen admit they'd rather see adult clientele. Even drive-in managers consider it a dubious distinction to be "a local hangout."

"Sure the kids buy food here," said the manager of a local drive-in. "But they take forever to eat, and cruise around. I'd rather see adult clientele who just buy the food and leave."

TEENS SAY they sometimes feel like second-class citizens when they are asked to leave an eating establishment after a certain time period, unlike their adult counterparts. They continually search for a restaurant "where we can just rap without any hassles."

The Green Barrel, which started out as a teen center for all teens, now has a particular clientele.

"This (The Green Barrel) is purgatory, here in our basement," said Richard Sedowski, recreation supervisor. "Heaven is outside and hell is school (Arlington High School) across the street."

The center now caters mostly to students who simply don't want to be in school. And, more often than not, the kids could care less what the place is — or what it looks like.

"The kids don't treat this place with any respect," said Sedowski. Cigarette butts and other litter on the floor attest to that opinion.

ACCORDING to Doris Weiss, manager of the Green Barrel concession stand, kids need more classes and more activities to use up their energy. From what she's observed, Doris also sees a need for more teen-adult mutual respect.

"In the first place, kids need to learn more," she said. "They come to help me behind the snack bar and can't even make change for a dollar."

She also sympathizes with the need for youth activities that "aren't so darn expensive."

"Kids have to go to Des Plaines to be able to see a movie for under $2.50 a head," she said. "There should be student rates at the local movie theater."

One of the avid Green Barrel customers said mutual adult/teen respect could start with the park board considering a list of about 20 proposed changes in the park district ordinance.

The proposed changes were submitted to the park board in early March. So far no action has been taken to consider the list.

ANOTHER SEGMENT of village youth attends weekend open houses at The Lost and Found Coffeehouse, a Christian house at 2113 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The coffeehouse idea was founded in 1969 by Don Foster, a recent Wheaton College graduate, who is presently manager of the building. In February of 1970, the group began meeting in the basement of the Northwest Covenant Church in Mt. Prospect, but left when the church needed the room. After meeting in private homes for nearly a year they moved to their present quarters.

The house was purchased by one of the members of the Lost and Found board of directors, which is responsible for policy and financing of the group. Foster's father is treasurer of a 9-man board.

Besides renting out five rooms on the second floor of the house, bills are paid through donations from local churches and a 75 cent cover charge for the Fri-

Teens Testing Impending Adulthood

Many high school age youth admit they are in their own period of discontent.

"They don't really know what they want or where they want to go in life, now that they are fast becoming adults."

Older teens, with somewhat more freedom and sophistication than their younger brothers and sisters, have the opportunity to try out their parents' lifestyles. Alcohol, drugs and unusual clothing and hair styles are usually associated with the modern rituals of adulthood.

Teens today, however, seem to be testing more than their own impending adulthood. They seem to be testing the current adult values.

HONESTY SEEMS to be one of the prime concerns of youth, and they seem to deplore the hypocrisy they sometimes see around them. Hypocrisy in religion strikes a particularly sour note.

"It's obscene to pray for Super Bowl teams," said Stephen Perfor, a 16-year-old who considers himself a Christian.

The consensus of a large group of high schoolers is that the church is too materialistic and too organized.

"Religion is going to have to become a more personal thing, without all its pomp and money," said Steve. "God never said we had to go to marble church buildings, you know."

Jim Nystrom, a 16-year-old, who teaches 5th grade church school at a local Baptist church, can't understand why church should be so solemn.

"Christianity can be a very happy thing," he said. "Why should everyone file into church on Sunday so stiffly. God would probably appreciate a smile."

Steve believes communion is a very private part of religion, also. The ritual of bread and wine, or whatever foodstuff is used, is a waste, and he "should send all that food to China."

While most youth understand a church must be financially stable, they think "pledging is disgusting, especially when a large part of it goes toward building marble monuments."

Mikva, Percy Show Edge In Campaign Dollar Battles

by ROBERT LAHEY

Winnetka attorney Samuel H. Young was badly outgunned financially by his Democratic opponent for the U.S. Congress in the early stages of the campaign, according to statements of campaign finances filed with the Illinois Secretary of State John W. Lewis.

Republican Young is seeking to unseat U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, now the congressman from the 2nd Congressional District, in the new 10th District.

Reports by the candidates for the first period, required under the new federal campaign disclosure law, showed Young's campaign chest in the red by $5,482, while Mikva showed a balance of $17,134. During that period — from April 7 to May 31 — Mikva spent $12,636, compared to $11,167 by Young.

Financial reports of Sen. Charles H. Percy and U.S. Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, his Democratic challenger, also showed Percy with a financial advantage over Pucinski, although the challenger spent 50 per cent more during the period than Percy.

PERCY SHOWED a May 31 balance of $117,499 after expenditures of $43,152 during the eight-week period. During the same time, Pucinski reported expenditures of $65,256 leaving a balance of $57,248.

The statement filed by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, seeking reelection in the 12th Congressional District, showed expenditures of $3,066 and a May 31 balance of $7,158.

Crane's Democratic opponent, Edwin L. Frank of Hoffman Estates, filed certification of his candidacy with the secretary of state on the day the records were examined and no financial statement was yet available.

The largest single contribution reported by any of the candidates was $7,400, as fair market value for four automobiles supplied to Percy by the United Auto Workers Committee for Good Government.

Candidates are required to itemize only contributions over $100.

Percy reported $8,753 in unitemized

contributions. His largest personal contribution was $2,600 from Robert C. Ziebarth, an executive of Bell and Howell, of which Percy is former board chairman.

FIVE PERSONS contributed $1,000 each to the Percy fund during the eight-week filing period. They were Hope McCormick, Republican national committeewoman; Elizabeth Blair of Lake Bluff; Levering Cartwright of Wilmette; Chicago attorney Albert E. Jenner, and James P. Giles of San Marino, Calif.

Percy also received $2,000 from the National Republican Senatorial Committee, and raised $16,402 from "An Evening with Diahann Carroll," staged in April.

A personal report filed by Percy showed that he received an additional $1,478 from the senatorial committee for travel and newspaper advertising.

Pucinski's largest donations came from three contributors who gave $1,000 each to his campaign. They were Julius Mayer of Chicago; Harold L. Perlman of Chicago; and Ann and Walter Koziol of Antioch. Pucinski also reported receipts of $11,650 from a campaign event at Mill Run Theater.

Mikva reported five contributions of $1,000 or more. R. J. Levy Harris, Inc., of Chicago, contributed $2,384 during the filing period, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benton of Evanston gave Mikva $1,023.

CONTRIBUTORS of $1,000 each were Milton Shadur of Glencoe; the Illinois United Steelworkers of America; and the Chicago law firm of Devoe, Shadur, Krupp, Miller, Adelman and Hamilton. David Mirabelli of Northlake contributed $500.

Mikva also reported receipts of $15,900 from a campaign dinner, and $1,270 from a May cocktail party.

The only itemized contribution to the various Young committees was $900 from attorney David Vogel and his wife, Jodi. Total receipts of $5,635 reported by Young included loans of $3,500 from his personal corporation to the campaign funds.

Council To View Plan For Hiring Youth Director

A Des Plaines City Council committee will meet next week to consider proposals for hiring a full-time city youth director to help fight increasing youth problems here.

The council's youth activity committee will meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday in City Hall, 1412 Miner St., to study creation of a new city job for a youth worker, who could aid community groups and Des Plaines police in combating rising youth crime rates, drug abuse and family conflicts.

The committee has invited several community youth leaders to speak at the meeting, including the Rev. David Russell, Place for People Youth Center director; Dr. Edward Baranowski, director of the Maine Township Mental Health Clinic; Sgt. Kenneth Fredricks, who heads the police youth division; Glen Helms, president of the Des Plaines Coordinating Council on Youth Problems; and the Rev. Donald Hughes, Youth Commission chairman.

PROPOSALS for hiring a youth director were made in June by Ald. Robert Sherwood (2nd).

Sherwood, a former chairman of the youth committee and now one of its three members, said he has studied the need for a youth director for more than three years. He is convinced, he said, that a director is needed to provide professional guidance and to coordinate programs offered by city and private youth aid agencies.

Committees he chaired considered hiring a city counselor to work with young people who have become involved with police. He had also heard complaints, as youth committee chairman, that members of the Des Plaines Youth Commission lack the time and the professional knowledge to plan and create programs to help young people.

A youth director could coordinate efforts by the city police, the mental health clinic, the Salvation Army Family Service, Forest Hospital, the youth commission, the Des Plaines Coordinating Council — an organization of school and church leaders — the Des Plaines Park District, and the Place for People, an informed youth center, according to Sherwood.

OFTEN THESE agencies duplicate services, Sherwood said. If they would work together "toward the same goal, they would get there quicker," he said.

A youth director might be able to develop programs to reduce the growing number of juvenile criminal offenses, he said. In 1971 juvenile offense arrests rose 35 per cent from 1,118 in 1970 to 1,505.

Arrests for narcotics-use violations rose almost 50 per cent from 42 to 62. Burglary arrests jumped 117 per cent from 35 in 1970 to 76 in 1971.

During the first quarter of 1972 juvenile arrests were up 11 per cent, compared to the first quarter of 1971. Drug-use arrests more than doubled, from 11 during last year's first quarter to 26 during the first three months of this year.

Another advocate of hiring a city youth director, Rev. Russell, said the city could provide a youth service similar to one provided by Palatine Township.

A YOUTH SERVICES bureau could be created to refer young people to other agencies for counseling, jobs, legal assistance and medical aid, he said.

The youth bureau could also provide informal activities similar to the Place for People center, so the young people would be attracted and come in contact with adults who could help them. Rev. Russell also said a city counselor could seek out young people at neighborhood hang-outs to explain services the city is offering.

A youth director could also be a resource for information, and he could be a consultant for community groups, like the PTA's, he said.

A director could coordinate programs of various local agencies and create new programs where a need exists, he said.

Funds for creation of this type of service are now available from the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission, Rev. Russell said. The commission would provide up to $30,000 a year for a city youth service program, he said.

PARKING YOUR CAR at Oakton Community College may be a problem. The college, located at Oakton St. and Nagle Ave. in Morton Grove, has been unable to find enough parking spaces for its students, faculty, administrators and campus visitors and the problem will become worse when enrollment increases in the fall, as expected. The school now operates a shuttle bus from Niles West High School where Oakton students are allowed to park their cars. The college board of trustees hopes to extend the bus service to connect with city public transportation lines in the near future and hopes to find additional parking spaces in areas near the campus.

Knotty Problem For Oakton: Parking

Oakton Community College is looking for a parking lot.

With enrollment expected to increase sharply this fall, the college has been looking for additional parking space. "We're boxed in," said Robert Gihle, campus security chief. "There is nothing else available."

The college is located in a former industrial complex at Nagle Avenue and Oakton Street in Morton Grove. Oakton is leasing six buildings there to house classrooms, offices, laboratories and a student center.

The campus site contains only about 500 parking spaces, which were used during the latest academic year by about 2,400 full and part-time students. The 1972-73 school year enrollment will be more than 4,000 students, Gihle said.

The college had problems with overcrowded parking lots last year, said Gihle. About 400 spaces were used at Niles West High School and students were bused more than a mile to the Oakton campus. The cost of the shuttle bus is

The State

A federal appeals court barred Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley from moving in Illinois courts to reinstate 59 delegates ousted by the Democratic Party's credentials committee from the party's national convention . . . Daley forces temporarily abandoned efforts to obtain a state court injunction forbidding the seating of a rival delegate group, but their attorneys vowed to fight on.

The trial of Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 codefendants in the Black Panther case was postponed for five days so a defense attorney could take a vacation . . . Hanrahan's lawyers had asked a three-week delay, contending they had not received all information due them from the prosecution. Circuit Court Judge Philip Romiti denied that motion.

The World

A flash fire swept a newly renovated ward in a Sherborne, England, mental hospital, killing 30 of 36 male patients who were too severely retarded to flee through an unlocked door.

American chess challenger Bobby Fischer apologized for delaying the start of the world championship chess match with Russian-Boris Spassky, but a demand from the Soviet chess federation threatened to cancel the 24-game series . . . The Soviets demanded that Fischer forfeit the first game.

The Nation

The administration called in two dozen grocery-chain executives for some tough talk on the rising cost of food, the first of three sessions ordered last week by President Nixon. Similar meetings are set for today with farmers, food processors and wholesalers.

A 23-year-old Buffalo, N. Y., college student surrendered nearly three hours after stabbing his estranged wife and her boyfriend, then holding his infant daughter hostage at knifepoint and boarding an empty 707 jetliner, demanding to be "flown out of the country."

The government gave the Boeing Co. permission to sell $150 million worth of 707 commercial jets and spare parts to Communist China. Negotiations have been going on since April and may take many more months before a contract is signed.

The War

South Vietnamese paratroopers and tank crews recaptured most of the provincial capital of Quang Tri City from the North Vietnamese . . . In the air war, the U.S. command said American fighter-bombers made 320 raids over North Vietnam Tuesday, the most strikes in a single day since June 27.

Council Postpones Library Tax Hike

A proposed library tax increase has been postponed until the Des Plaines Library Board can complete plans for an $800,000 library addition.

The tax hike was postponed by the city council after several aldermen said they would not vote to give the library board more funds to build an addition until specific building plans were submitted.

Ald. Spencer Chase (3rd), chairman of the council's library committee, withdrew his motion Monday night to raise the library tax rate maximum from 12 cents per $100 assessed valuation to 20 cents.

Ald. Chase had acted on behalf of the library board at the June 19 city council meeting in seeking a tax maximum hike. Board members wanted a promise from the council that more money would be budgeted for the library system in 1973, before spending additional funds for building plans, he had said. After several aldermen asked for more information, a vote on Chase's proposal was deferred until last Monday's meeting.

IN EXPLAINING why he withdrew his motion Monday, Chase said the library board had reconsidered and would prepare a "detailed architectural plan." Chase indicated his committee also would work with the board in developing plans before another tax hike proposal is submitted for council consideration.

Besides wanting more information and detailed plans, Ald. Robert Sherwood (2nd) had been critical of the library board for seeking to use tax funds to build a library addition, even though voters twice had rejected bond issues to pay for an addition. The latest unsuccessful bond issue was in 1969.

Knotty Problem For Oakton: Parking

about $20,000 a year, said Gihle.

DURING THE winter and fall term, the college uses 44 parking spaces located in the Miami Park Forest Preserve, just north of the campus. During the evening, students are allowed to park in empty factory lots bordering the campus.

Additional parking spaces may not be available for several years, when the college moves to a new permanent campus. College trustees have been planning for a new campus since Oakton opened for classes two years ago. A decision on the college's new permanent campus site is expected late this summer or early fall.

The college board has been seeking more parking spaces for their temporary site, said Gihle, but it has been unable to gain permission for use of more nearby factory parking areas. The college also tried to find space in downtown Morton Grove without success.

Oakton trustee Paul Gilson said land adjacent to Oakton's temporary campus is too expensive to purchase for parking facilities. The committee hopes to extend shuttle bus service to join a public transportation route in the near future.

THE PARKING problem is severe at most community colleges because many of the students live long distances from the campus and must commute by car, said Gihle. He estimates that at least 1,000 parking spaces are needed throughout the school day. The number of cars on campus fluctuates, said Gihle, because many of the students are enrolled part-time.

Students are required to buy a parking sticker from the school for $10 a semester and $5 during the summer. Stickers serve a dual purpose, said Gihle. They provide revenue to defray the cost of the shuttle bus and they are a means of identifying cars parked in campus lots.

The board of trustees at Oakton has considered installing parking meters on school lots to provide revenue for the shuttle bus and keep down the number of cars parked on campus.

"I don't really feel meters are feasible," said Gihle. Because the college is only leasing campus property, installing meters and cement curbing could be costly and cause damage to the lots, according to spokesmen for Perkins and Will, campus developers. If parking spaces had to be set at an angle to provide for meters, about 18 per cent of the parking space on campus would be lost, said Gihle.

The most common parking violation is double parking, said Gihle. Security officers write a lot of tickets at the beginning of the school year when the lots are most crowded, he said, but only about 30 tickets are issued per week during the semester. "We're not here to wield a big stick," said Gihle. "We're here to help the kids."

Dorothy Oliver

It's a difficult thing to admit, but cockroaches reside in my house. I'm far from being alone in the problem and luckier than some of my neighbors.

Say the word "cockroach" and visions of filth and squalor come to mind. I was quickly reassured by a staff member of the University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service that lack of cleanliness has nothing to do with this species of roach overtaking one's home.

And overtake they do. I've noticed a few of the bugs around for more than a year but never thought much about it. After all a number of varieties of insects make basements their home and when someone told me they were "just water bugs" I gave it little notice (except when I had to step on one).

THIS WEEKEND I was part of the party of slaves who helped friends of mine move into a duplex on White Street. We departed to my house for dinner after most of the work was done and returned to their home a couple of hours later to find a half dozen of the water bugs (polite name) crawling around the house.

We smashed them and swept them out but that night two more were spotted in their dining room, one in the stairwell and several in the basement. The next morning seven of the things were scurrying around in the kitchen cabinets.

We ran out and got roach killer, smoke bombs and other insecticides, drenched the house and moved out for a night. The next morning the death toll was high in the insect world.

Unfortunately, even though the bugs seem to be gone from their home they will return — judging from the experiences others have had. Nearly two years ago we ran several stories about the water bug invasion on the south side of Des Plaines. Even exterminators hadn't permanently conquered the problem.

THE CITY OF Des Plaines, according to Public Works Commissioner Joseph Schwab, is trying to help residents solve the bug problem. Smoke is sent through the main sewer lines nearest the homeowner who has complained about the roaches. The smoke winds its way through the sewers and clears out the sewer system under the resident's home as well.

This is just part of the battle. These bugs — commonly known as American cockroaches, Oriental cockroaches, water bugs, or black beetles — are fast-moving, live inside and outside of homes and very often pack up and move next door when exterminating procedures are under way.

An area-wide attack is probably the only way the south side of Des Plaines is going to rid themselves of the roach. I for one am ready to enter bug warfare.

ACCORDING TO THE U. of I. Extension Service, chlordane and diazinon are effective against the cockroaches. Apply chlordane as a 2 per cent oil or water base spray or as a 5 per cent dust. Apply diazinon as a .5 per cent oil base spray from a pressurized spray can.

You may need to repeat the treatment in 3 to 4 weeks (when the eggs hatch). Apply the chemicals to the areas where roaches hide and any known pathways (baseboards, areas in the basement where pipes pass through the floor, under carpets, by furnaces, etc.). Keep animals, children, etc. out of the house until the mixture dries.

Chlordane can be applied as a water-base spray on the outside wall during the warmer months to prevent the roaches from entering.

YOUR CRAWLY THINGS are Oriental cockroaches if they are large and entirely black, measuring about 1 1/2 inches when full grown. The adult males have wings but the adult females have only wing pads. The antennae are shorter than the body. The American variety is similar in length but is reddish brown in color and has antennae which are longer than the body.

They prefer damp, dark places and happily make their homes in basements. They hide during the day and come out in search of food during the night. They enter the house through sewer-pipe openings and along water and gas pipes.

You know for sure you have them when you flip on the basement light and the floor scurries away.

The bugs are harmless — they won't bite your leg off and seldom venture from the basement quarters — but they are absolutely disgusting. By ignoring their existence you're asking for a population explosion. (Each mom produces up to 100 eggs a year and an adult lives as long as three years.)

My problem is still small but my neighbor and I are prepared to debug our building this weekend. Hopefully it will put an end to our acquaintance with things that go "crunch" in the night.

Meyer May Seek Seat In House

BY KEN KOZAK

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer is not admitting that he will be an independent candidate for a 3rd District seat in the Illinois House of Representatives come November.

But he is not denying the possibility either.

Meyer recently revealed that backers have started circulating nominating petitions on his behalf, but, he said, not at his request.

There is, he admits, the chance that he will file those petitions with the proper authorities before Aug. 7 deadline.

Meyer suggested that his decision might not come until the last moment.

MEYER NEVER ruled out the possibility of running as an independent in the November election, and discussed that prospect immediately after his loss in the 3rd District Republican primary in March.

At that time he said some of his backers were interested in seeing him launch an independent candidacy, although he was beat handily by the two Republican Party-endorsed candidates in that race.

Meyer, who ran without party support, polled 25 per cent of the vote compared to the combined 75 per cent scored by the winners, Virginia Macdonald of Arlington Heights and Donald L. Totten of Hoffman Estates.

If he runs in November, Meyer will face not only Mrs. Macdonald and Totten, but also Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights and fellow Democrat John P. Kelley of Schaumburg. Only three seats are available.

Two weeks ago Meyer said some allies asked him if they could circulate nominating petitions for him. He said he did not commit himself to a candidacy then, but told them to circulate the petitions if they wanted to.

To get on the ballot in November, Meyer will need at least 3,000 signatures of registered voters in the 3rd district, according to a supervisor of the Cook County Elections Board.

Lake Opeka Sunrise Service Sunday; 'Love Is...' Theme

"Love Is..." will be the theme of this year's sunrise church service at Lake Opeka, Howard and Lee streets, Des Plaines, sponsored by the Interfaith Council of Des Plaines.

The service this Sunday at 8 a.m. will be led by non-clergymen and will feature musical groups from the 15 Des Plaines churches. Coordinator of the program is Mrs. Paul Rivard of the First Congregational Church, 766 Graceland Ave.

Neil Fisher, chairman of the council, said "we are aware of the growing interest displayed annually by our neighbors in the sunrise service. This indicates a desire on the part of area residents to promote the ideals of the council and emphasize the love theme throughout the year."

The inter-denominational council was formed several years ago under the sponsorship of the Des Plaines Ministerial Association. It represents Des Plaines churches and the Maine Township Jewish Congregation, 8800 Ballard Rd.

The council has conducted several community projects. In 1970 the group raised funds for an American Indian center and last year the council sought volunteers for the Big Brother-Big Sister program created by the Des Plaines Youth Commission.

This year's collection taken at the sunrise service will be given to the Northwest Suburban Day Care center at the First Presbyterian Church, Howard and Maple streets, Des Plaines. According to council member Ed Bryl, the group may organize a Des Plaines chapter of FISH, an inter-denominational organization assisting persons in need of guidance or counseling, this year.

Art Fair Slated At Jewish Center

The Mayer Kaplan Jewish Community Center, 5050 W. Church St., Skokie, will present a "summer art show" including the works of five local artists, from July 20 throughout the month of August.

The works of graphic artists Alice Lauffer, Evanston; Mary Schulman, Skokie; John Asquith, Highland Park, and the paintings of Lenore Schulman, Wilmette, will be featured. The center will hold a reception for the artists on July 23 from 7 to 9 p.m. The public is invited at no charge.

Demel Elected Board President

Lloyd Demel was elected president last night of the River Trails Dist. 26 School Board.

Demel, sole board member from Prospect Heights replaced Clarke Robinson who resigned from the board last week. Robinson, a partner in the law firm of Kirkland & Ellis, resigned to avoid certain income disclosures required by the "Illinois Ethics Law."

A caucus-backed candidate, Demel, 41, was elected to the board in April. He is a marketing development manager for Universal Oil Products in Des Plaines. He has a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Illinois and a master's degree in business from the University of Chicago.

Demel, a resident of the district for nearly 12 years, has four children. He served last year on a citizen's committee that was instrumental in getting a building plus a tax hike referendum passed last spring. He lives at 13 Leon Ln. East.

The board also elected Ted Wattenberg as secretary. He has served on the board for nearly a year.

Three new board members took seats last night. They are Sylvia Lurie, 122

Bonnie Brae Ave.; William Haase, 1815 Camp McDonald Rd.; and Michael Sheyker, 1306 Ironwood Dr. All are Mount Prospect residents.

The new board members filled seats vacated by Neil Le Sebvre and Allan Wallskog, who both resigned in June and Robinson.

Robinson resigned because he said the Ethics Law would require him to list certain sources of income for his entire firm. "I do not want to put our firm in that kind of a position," he said.

Based on an interpretation of the law from the secretary of state's office, Robinson said he would have to name the governmental units served by his firm in 1971. He said he would also have to list the type of clients and the types of services rendered them by the firm.

Model Planes: A High Flying Hobby

by RICH HONACK

Living near O'Hare International Airport brings suburban residents in contact with airplanes almost every day.

To some residents, planes are a nuisance. To others they are a way of life. To still others they are a hobby.

A hobby that can cost anywhere from 98 cents to $1,000 per aircraft. A hobby that keeps the pilot on the ground: A hobby that has no age limitations.

The hobby is building and flying model airplanes.

Model airplanes have been around for a long time, but just recently have expanded into a major market enterprise.

In the past, hobby store owners would devote a section of their shops to the model airplanes. Today they build entire stores for the sport.

The popularity of this hobby has also caused many clubs to spring up in the past several years. These clubs are sanctioned by the Academy of Model Aeronautics (AMA) and governed by strict safety rules and regulations.

CLUB MEMBERS may also participate in AMA contests throughout the year and also take part in the National Model Airplane Championships. These championships will be at Glenview Naval Air Station this year, from July 24-30.

There are five model airplane clubs in the Chicagoland area, with the "Red Barons" representing a major portion of the Northwest suburbs. The Barons operate out of the Aero Sports and Crafts shop in Mount Prospect.

Its membership includes residents from Buffalo Grove, Palatine, Arlington Heights, Elk Grove, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Wheeling. Some members even come from Elgin, Deerfield, Libertyville and Chicago.

There are more than 60 members in the "Red Barons," grouped into three categories. There is an open class for members 19 years old and over; senior class for those between 15 and 18 years of age, and the junior class for anyone 14 or younger.

The open and junior classes make up a majority of the members.

HORACE CAIN, secretary of the Barons and one of its founders three years ago, said the club membership has doubled since its start. He said when the club first started it was made up mostly of fathers and sons.

"Today we have a mixture of members. Many fathers have sons who don't like the hobby and vice versa," said Cain.

A commercial airline pilot, Cain said the Barons is the youngest club in Chicagoland. However, he said the membership is growing every year because more and more people are taking up the hobby.

"When they find out about the club, model hobbyists usually join, because they know there are experienced people around who can teach newcomers things that will save them money," said Cain.

He added that where a non-club novice pilot would take a plane out and "crack it up," a club member will get helpful tips and be able to fly with a little more experience.

"We can teach a new flyer how to take off and land properly, as well as go through different flying formations. It will make their flying experience more fun as well as less expensive," said Cain, Buffalo Grove resident.

CAIN ALSO pointed out that the flying club has a contract with the Skill Corp. in Wheeling to use its property for flying every weekend. "We are also covered by insurance in case of accidents," he added.

"We are the only model airplane people in the area allowed to use that location because we meet all safety standards set down by the AMA," he explained.

The AMA also offers college scholarships to younger flyers for performances in the national meet. Cain also said the Boeing Co. management gives college scholarships to participants in its annual meet in Washington, D. C.

The "Red Barons" meet at 7:45 p.m. on the first and third Mondays of each month at the Aero Sport and Craft Shop, 970 E. Northwest Highway. The first meeting of the month is a business meeting, while the second is called a "fun meeting."

"It's at the 'fun meeting' where we have all our workshops. If anyone needs advice on building or flying his model airplane he should stop by on this night," said Cain.

CAIN SAID persons should not be afraid to bring their planes to the meeting. "We can't help a problem unless the plane is there."

The "Red Barons" are also sponsoring their second annual Model Airplane Control Line Contest Sunday, July 16, at the Skill Corp., Wolf and Palatine roads.

Registration for the contest will be from 9 a.m. until noon and actual flying will take place between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. For more contest information call 537-8333.

Work Together To Aid Elderly: Sen. Percy

Individual people can do what government can't do in easing the problems of the elderly. Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., told the Palatine Fourth of July crowd Tuesday.

"The longer I'm in government, the more I realize that we can't depend on legislation to solve all problems," Percy said. "We must work together to solve the problem of the elderly, one-fourth of whom live in abject poverty. Ninety per cent of all single women over 65 have no income but social security," he said.

Last week, the government was able to help the elderly by increasing social security benefits, to "make sure the cost of living raises for the elderly are the same as the ones at the GM plant. What's good for GM is good for the elderly," Percy said.

EQUALIZING PAY for women and revamping certain welfare programs were other problem areas that government could influence, he added.

"What we (the government) can't do is visit the elderly, the abandoned, the lonely, in rest homes," Percy said. He told the young people to "just make arrangements to go visit a nursing home" before copping out on society.

"Just drop in, read them a book, help write a letter. They'll never stop thinking and talking about your visit."

Government can't do that, Percy said. "It can supplement income, but sometimes you just can't do anything from the heart" at the government level, he said.

Percy made frequent reference to a prize-winning essay written by Lance Ankcorn, a Carl Sandburg Junior High School student, on "What I Can Do To Make America a Better Country."

Both formal education and a practical "awareness of problems" is important. Lance wrote, and Percy re-emphasized the point.

"We should relate the education of what our job is to our free society. Education should be put to work to solve problems and identify them," Percy said.

ON THE PROBLEMS of drugs and patriotism, Percy said, "We cannot just say 'our country, right or wrong.'"

"Today is a day of soul-searching. None of us would want to be complacent," Percy said. He told the audience he was pleased by President Nixon's announcement of Project Horizon, celebrating the upcoming 200th anniversary of the United States.

"We're not going to just look back, but ahead at what kind of a nation and a people we want to become," he said. The people who founded this country were not complacent, not "raised on pabulum," he said.

Gas Spills Into MSD Sewer Here

An undetermined amount of gasoline spilled onto the ground and into a Metropolitan Sanitary District sewer Monday afternoon while underground storage tanks were being filled at a controversial Des Plaines gas station.

Firemen spent several hours washing down the gasoline and flushing out the sewers after a driver for Cities Service Oil Co. apparently failed to turn off the pump from the gasoline truck while filling the Ross Automotive Cito Station's underground storage tanks at 697 River Rd.

Jerry O'Leary of the Des Plaines Fire Prevention Bureau said there was a danger of explosion when he first arrived on the scene but that the danger was removed by firemen who washed and scrubbed down the ground and flushed out the sewer.

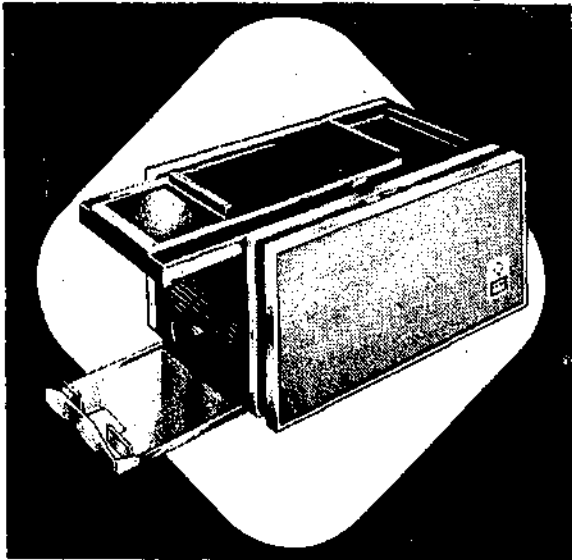

Yesterday gravel surrounding the underground tanks was flushed with water when it was determined that some of the gasoline had saturated the ground.

The gas station has been the center of controversy since last March when Burton Kosmen, 709 River Rd., complained gasoline was seeping into his basement from the Cito station next door.

The charges prompted the station to be closed and the two 6,000-gallon underground storage tanks replaced.

The old tanks, in violation of the city code, had been patched in 1970 and an undetermined amount of gasoline was discovered in the ground beneath the tanks when they were removed in March.

Weeds are supposed to be funny. But to regard them as comic relief is to under-rate them, and to regard them bitterly as pests is to malign them.

If a prize were to be given justly to the best garden stimulator it would not go to commercial fertilizer or barnyard manure. It would go to weeds. It takes a lot of weeds in a garden to keep a gardener interested. Bertha Damon the New England gardener says:

"THEY WHO THINK he is obliged to scratch around and hoe because there are weeds, and he must get rid of them if no weeds no need for such work, but if the truth was known he ought to scratch just as much as he does now — weeds or no weeds. A stirred and loosened soil lets roots penetrate and lets rain and dew sink into it."

The job of weeding can be as beneficial to the gardener as to the garden. It gives scope to the aggressive instinct. What a satisfaction to pull up an enemy by the roots and throw him into a heap! And yet weeding is the most peaceful of outdoor tasks. Like knitting, soothingly monotonous but pleasingly varied, it goes on and on, shutting out anxious thinking and furnishing an excuse for not doing some other less pleasant task.

WEEDING HAS none of the doubts and fears of transplanting. The appearance of a newly-transplanted area is always disturbing with its demoralized camps of strawferry-basket huts and newspaper tents and all the unsheltered population fainting and flopping, but an area that is being weeded looks good at once.

Weeds, get blamed for taking a little richness from the soil but they give back to the earth greater treasure than every they took — that fertility may not end. They have a place of service — on the compost pile.

You'll get higher quality garden vegetables if you don't let weeds compete for moisture, nutrients, water and light. Severe competition from weeds may result in low quality vegetables. "Growth stress" causes fiber to develop in such vegetables as lettuce, beans, chard and spinach — all grown for their immature plant parts.

A FEW GOODIES on vegetable culture. To avoid leaf wilt and mosaic diseases, plant pole beans instead of bush (string) beans. Don't over cultivate beans when wet. Handpick Mexican bean beetles and crush eggs on under side of leaves.

An application of wood ashes is very beneficial to beets as well as turnips. Goldfinches love baby beets so plant a few extra for the birds. The cauliflower heads as they begin to form so direct sunlight cannot penetrate to the head. This will insure nice white blossoms. Keep lettuce well watered if you want it to be sweet.

And keep those weeds picked! If you have questions on gardening indoors or outdoors, write to Mrs. Good at Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Please enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy, I always worry about food spoilage in the summer. While trying to be careful I keep wondering if there are any rules to follow that can help? — Mrs. Miles Wolf

Yes, there are several guidelines. But start by remembering that bacteria thrive best in foods like meat, fish, poultry, eggs, milk, creamed puddings, stuffings, salads or sandwich fillings made with meat, eggs or fish. One good rule is to try to keep hot foods above 140 degrees and cold foods below 40 degrees.

If you are not going to serve a freshly cooked dish, refrigerate it as soon as possible. If you should make up a large batch of hot food, divide it into small lots so that it will cool fast and thus prevent bacteria from forming in the center. For another, always cook meat and poultry completely at one time — never cook partially to be finished later. And, finally, try to thaw frozen meats in the refrigerator rather than at room temperature.

Dear Dorothy, Even though I try to clean my oven fairly often, the glass on the oven door gets pretty grimy and I can't see the food as it's cooking. Is there a simple way to do this job? — Marian K.

The simplest way is to rub first with a plastic scrubber, then with a soap-filled steel wool pad. A clean damp cloth followed by a dry polish ought to do it.

Dear Dorothy, Do you know whether there is such a thing as a Gouda cheese which has no added salt? Would like to know because of the restrictions of a low sodium diet. — Mrs. W. F. Smith

One of the Goudas imported from Holland has no added salt. A well-stocked cheese market should have it — or be able to order it.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope. Write to Dorothy Ritz in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Two Oakton Players On Skyway All-Stars

The Skyway Community College Conference recently announced the selection of the 1972 all-conference baseball team.

Two local players from Oakton Community College were chosen as members of the team for their outstanding performance this past season. Larry Gawaluch, former Maine South Varsity player, was selected to the first all-conference team for his pitching record, and Pat Pullen, also a former Maine South Hawk, was chosen to the second all-conference team for his contributions as an outfielder.

Gawaluch parted a 1972 record of four wins and four losses and had a very respectable earned run average of 3.05. He also bested Triton who finished in second place in the Skyway Conference. His other victories were a single win against Prairie State and two victories against Waubesa College. Gawaluch just a freshman will be returning in 1973 to pitch for Coach Bob Hale's Raiders.

Pullen had an outstanding year at bat and also in the field this past season. He was Oakton's leading hitter with a 3.40 batting average with six runs batted in. He also was Oakton's leading base stealer with 10 bases pilfered.

Three additional Oakton players were honored by being given honorable mention for the all-conference team. Jim Buchholz, OCC's third baseman who hit .333, Bob Egebrecht, the Raider left fielder who hit .312 and Rick Miller who owned OCC's leading pitching record, three wins with one defeat were all given all-conference 'Honorable Mention' standing.

Bob Hale, Oakton's coach reports that recruiting is going along very well at this point. Thus far Ken Schroeder, Bill Heyse, and Jeff Heist all 1972 Maine West varsity infielders, Mike McDonnell, Maine East catcher, and Ken Sommers, Notre Dame hurler have applied for admission to Oakton for the fall-1972.

Coach Hale feels that with these additional ballplayers and last year's returning lettermen the 1973 season should show an improved Raider team. Hale has already arranged for a spring trip to Florida, scheduled trips with Illinois State University Junior varsity, Lewis College Junior Varsity, Parkland College of Champaign, Milwaukee Tech of Milwaukee, and Lincoln College of Lincoln, Illinois. This is a greatly improved schedule over the 1972 season.

Krainik's 49 Flat 440 Highlights First Meet

The first summer track meet held by the Des Plaines Park District Runners and Joggers was highlighted by Jerry Krainik's 49.0 quarter mile run.

Jerry holds the Maine West track record at 49.0 and now runs for Northern Illinois University where he also holds their quarter mile record. Jerry also took first in the open broad jump, hurdles, and 100 yard dash.

Jerry's younger brother, Tony, emulated Jerry by also taking four firsts in the same events in the junior high division. Renee Gromke and Mary Fisher each took two firsts in the girls division and Scott Arendt won two in the boys division.

The next track meet will be held Thursday, July 27, on the Maine West track starting at 6 p.m. There will be a cross country meet starting at 6 p.m., Thursday, July 13. It will start just west of the Maine West track. There is a 25 cent entry fee for either meet.

The Des Plaines Park District Runners and Joggers have the Maine West track open from 7:30 to 9:00 each week night for runners and joggers of all ages. There is no charge for this program.

Double Steal Clicks; Arlington Nips Des Plaines In 2-1 Drama

by PAUL LOGAN

"It was a tough one to lose... but it was a good one to win."

So said Arlington legion coach Lloyd Meyer to Jerry Fink, a former player under Meyer and now an opposing coach in the Ninth District with Des Plaines.

The game was tough to lose because the winning run scored without being driven in by a hit. Instead, Meyer used one of his old tricks — the double steal — and it worked like a charm in the 2-1 decision.

Heading into the "stolen" bottom of the sixth Tuesday at Recreation Park, it appeared that the game might go into extra innings because of the pitching duel taking place. Young Larry Monroe, getting older experience-wise every game, was cruising along with a one-hitter. Mark Leonhard had scattered four hits and was keeping Arlington in the ball game.

After one out, catcher Pat Broderick reached Monroe for a hit. He moved to second on a passed ball and over to third on Leonhard's single. This former Hershey High School twosome then worked the steal play. While Des Plaines was concerned with Leonhard, Broderick came home.

Leonhard, finally enjoying his first lead, sent Post 36 down in order in the top of the seventh for Arlington's 15th win in 18 tries.

The game was good to win, as Meyer had said, because his team had finally lost the day before against Palatine. His Post 208 team had taken a 12-game winning streak into the Palatine contest and, by his own admission, was feeling a little cocky. Bouncing back on the Fourth of July showed Meyer something about his athletes — they're winners.

They took on a fast improving Des Plaines team with first place in the league on the line and won a tough one. Arlington is now 5-1 while Des Plaines is 7-4.

The two teams had met once previously with Arlington blasting Monroe for eight hits and seven runs in the first two innings and winning 8-1. However, those last five innings against this lean righty, Heights could only manage a single hit. Monroe picked up where he left off in his latest outing.

The only hit he served up over the first five innings came in the second. After Jim Locascio had walked, Tony Fricano lashed a double with Locascio scoring on the play. Monroe looked just two more after that and struck out six.

Leonhard was tagged for a triple in the first inning by Scott Pruitt. He scored on a wild pitch. Then the husky righthander didn't allow another runner past second. He didn't walk a batter while striking out six.

McGovern's First-Ballot Hope Fades

by BRUCE BLOSSAT

WASHINGTON — Hurt by a decision cutting his delegate total in California, Sen. George McGovern has lost strength for the first time since his rise toward the Democratic presidential nomination began.

The fifth and final NEA-National Observer delegate count places his newly estimated potential at 1,374½ votes, or four votes fewer than the 1,378½ given him in the fourth count early in June.

Since 1,509 votes are needed for nomination, the senator stands 134½ votes below the winning mark.

What checked McGovern's upward spiral and sent him downward was the ruling of the convention credentials committee, meeting in Washington, which took away 151 of the 271 delegates he had captured June 6 in California's winner-take-all primary.

He was left with just 120 from that state, while Sen. Hubert Humphrey and other McGovern rivals were given delegates in proportion to their share of the primary day voting.

THE EFFECTS of this blow go well beyond California. The momentum McGovern got from that victory, and a later triumph in New York was moving additional strength his way every day. Some of that is solid and stays with him. But some is not.

In the revised estimates that followed the California decision, McGovern is judged in this fifth NEA-Observer survey to have lost another 58½ votes that clearly were flowing his way from the ranks of uncommitted delegates and from a weakening Sen. Edmund Muskie.

Had nothing reversed this tide, the indications are McGovern was headed for a first-ballot nomination at Miami Beach with perhaps 75 votes more than the needed 1,509.

Unless the ruling is reversed by court action or by the convention itself, McGovern hereafter may find himself in severe difficulties. If the impact of the California case is widespread it might translate into still further delegate losses.

But there also is a chance of the opposite happening. If he can portray the ruling as unfair and improper, and mount a counterattack on moral grounds, he might win sympathy among the delegates and get back on a winning track again.

THE NET consequences of the changes is to boost the delegate count for second-place Humphrey to 566, the highest level he has ever reached in these surveys. Gov. George Wallace, paralyzed but still planning to attend the convention, moves up a bit to hold a strong third place with an even 400 delegates. Muskie rebounds slightly to 210.

Arizona University Cites Miss Sider

Deborah A. Sider of Des Plaines was one of 11 Northern Arizona University coeds honored recently as "outstanding senior women," by the Associated Women's Students organization at the university.

These and others join in the action which hurt McGovern. At the delegate level in the field, they and many party regulars who have challenged or disliked this candidacy failed to muster the votes to stop him. They obviously saw the California challenge in the credentials committee as their big opportunity.

This final survey turned up some very stubborn resistance to the South Dakotan. Some of it is based on wide convictions that he would lose to President Nixon and drag many other Democrats down with him. Some exist because he is judged "too radical" in his proposals for tax and welfare reform and defense cuts.

But many regulars simply are bitter at what they consider arrogant strong-arm tactics which they say McGovern's forces often used to get delegates. Such hostility has to be heard to be believed.

Yet few of these resisters seem to think Humphrey or Muskie can make it. They appear to have no ready substitute for McGovern.

Mayor Daley Backing Fiery Old Prosecutor

by PAMELA REEVES

Mayor Richard J. Daley's chief political worry is not the embarrassment he suffered last week in the Democratic credentials fight.

It is the fact that his one time protege, Edward V. Hanrahan, the state's attorney of Cook County, goes on trial today on charges of conspiring to obstruct justice after the 1969 police raid in which two young Black Panthers were killed.

Though under indictment, Hanrahan is running for re-election; and though the mayor put up another candidate to run against Hanrahan in the party primary election, Daley is now backing the fiery 50-year-old prosecutor with everything he has.

The reason is simple. With its wide investigative power, the state's attorney's office is vital to the Daley organization for reasons of both self-protection and prosecution. A Republican state's attorney would be able to look into the city's election machinery, its troubled police department, the assessor's office and the patronage system — all vital parts of the Daley organization.

SINCE HANRAHAN, a loyal Democrat, won the March 21 primary with a 42 per cent plurality in a three-way race against Daley candidate Raymond Berg and Donald P. Moore, the liberal independent, the mayor has no choice but to support him.

Hanrahan, in fact, originally had Daley's backing for re-election, and was on the party slate of candidates until the mayor began worrying that Hanrahan's indictment might stand in the way — a chance Democrats do not take with the state's attorney's office.

That worry now has come home to roost. Hanrahan showed the doubters he could still pile up votes even with criminal charges hanging over his head, but he also was sure he could get the charges dropped.

A year-long effort to have the indictment thrown out failed last month, and that means that barring the unexpected, Hanrahan's name will be in newspapers and on television for weeks and perhaps months while the evidence against him unfolds.

Ordinarily, such negative exposure — casting doubt on the integrity of a public official — would insure defeat. This is not necessarily so in Hanrahan's case.

A SKILLFULLY persuasive individual, especially on television, Hanrahan has convinced many of his backers that the indictment is invalid.

He is charged with conspiring with an assistant and 12 policemen to obstruct justice by planting false evidence and covering up real evidence in efforts to block prosecution of the policemen who staged the 1969 raid.

The crux of the charge against Hanrahan is that he used false evidence to obtain indictments on charges of attempted murder against the seven Black Panthers who survived the raid.

Though the charges later were dropped for lack of evidence, and a federal grand jury report found that the police had fired some 100 shots and the Panthers only one, many continue to believe that the Panthers are guilty in the complex case.

Such feeling against black militants among many of Cook County's population has worked to Hanrahan's advantage. He is the definitive image of law and order, and those who fear black crime see the Panther case as a choice between Hanrahan and the Panthers.

As one of the grand jurors who tried to help Hanrahan overturn the indictment put it, "Who would you rather see running things? Hanrahan or the Panthers?"

HANRAHAN'S opponent in the November election, however, is a former FBI agent and also has a strong law and order background.

Though the name Bernard Carey is far from a household word in the Chicago area, the Republican candidate is sure to take advantage of the Hanrahan trial, and may be able to transfer Hanrahan's law and order supporters to himself.

Chicago's liberals and some moderates already are behind Carey, many of them intensely anti-Hanrahan, and a recent and respected poll showed Hanrahan running just a few percentage points ahead.

That plus the fact that Daley's support in the black community, usually good for a solid 300,000 votes, is apparently wavering, does not auger well for Hanrahan.

Those are not factors to allow Daley to rest easy. Many politicians and past political experts believe he would rather have a Republican president and Republican governor than to see the opposition in the state's attorney's office.

On Dean's List

Gary Lord, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lord of 10009 Meadow Lane, Des Plaines, has been named to the dean's list at Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa in recognition of his academic achievement in the course of work for the fall term.

State Scholarship Deadline Extended

Oakton Community College has received an announcement from the office of the governor that the deadline for applications for state scholarships has been extended until August 1.

Students planning to attend Oakton Community College who need financial assistance should apply immediately to the Illinois State Scholarship Commission at Box 607, Deerfield, Ill., 60015, according to John Gagin, director of admissions and records.

Gov. Ogilvie announced that there are ample funds this year to provide help for all students who can demonstrate need. "We have been assured of passage of the essential appropriation for the commission, which sets aside more than $54 million to assist full-time students who attend any Illinois college or university, public or private," he said.

The Illinois scholarship program not only helps the bright young people of the state, he pointed out, but also helps every student who needs financial help to further his education and his chances for improved earnings throughout his working years.

It is estimated that there will be funds to assist some 70,000 students throughout the state. This figure does not count the veterans who may be eligible to have their tuition costs paid in junior and community colleges.

The good life

Turnberry is for people, young and old, who have a real zest for living.

There are 1100 acres of woods, hills and valleys to be hiked, biked, explored and enjoyed. Three beautiful lakes of nearly eighty acres to be fished and sailed. And the private Turnberry Country Club includes a championship golf course, an imposing French Normandy Clubhouse high on a hilltop with breathtaking views of lakes, fairways and surrounding countryside. An Olympic-size pool set dramatically into the hillside, and tournament-quality tennis courts adjoin. That's the good life at Turnberry. Every day is a vacation from busy city life — the first year-round community of its kind in the Chicago suburbs.

Turnberry, in the village of Lakewood, is a 10-minute drive from the Crystal Lake North Western Station. The Loop is within easy reach by air-conditioned trains. O'Hare Airport and all of Chicagoland are readily accessible by expressways.

Patterned after Arthur T. McIntosh & Company's Inverness — unquestionably one of the most distinctive and beautiful villages in the Midwest, Turnberry has similar protective covenants assuring that the basic way of living — the good life at Turnberry — will never change.

There are no ordinary homesites at Turnberry. Here, the crest of a hill, a lush green fairway, a beautiful lake or century-old trees adjoin your living room.

Homesites average ¾ of an acre, and more important, have a minimum of 150 feet of frontage. Prices range from $16,000 to $34,000. All sites are fully improved with winding paved roads, water, sewer and underground utilities.

Take Northwest Tollway (90) to Barrington Rd. North to Algonquin Rd. (62), then northwest on 62 into Town of Algonquin. Cross Rt. 31 and go straight ahead (west) 5 miles on Huntley-Algonquin Rd. Turn north on Huntley-Crystal Lake Rd. to property. Watch for signs.

Banned In Area - But Explain It To Kid . . .

Mom, Where's The Good Humor Man?

by MARY HUTCHINGS

Ever try to explain to a child why the ice cream man cometh not?

The traditional summer music of Jolly Rogers and Good Humor men will not be heard in Hoffman Estates this summer because they have been banned by the village board.

The playground set is outspokenly indignant.

From the baseball diamond and the monkey bars come sad-eyed questions of "why?"

It's hard to explain the board action to 8-year-old Gina Hruby, who asks, "Who makes the rules? Where will the ice cream man be?" she wonders "Will he be back next summer?"

No, the rule is "for keeps."

GINA, OF 174 Illinois Blvd., is going to miss "the jumbo things," she says. Then an idea lights up her face, "I'm going to write a poem about the ice cream man. I read a story in this book once about, 'The Horse That Ate Ice Cream'."

Bank Will Conduct 1913-Style Fun Fair

The First National Bank of Des Plaines will conduct a 1913-style Free Fun Fair to commemorate the bank's 60th year of business, Saturday at the corner of Graceland and Prairie in Des Plaines.

The fair, which will run from 12:30 to 5 p.m., will provide a variety of free entertainment and refreshments. Children will be entertained by clowns creating and distributing animal-shaped balloons by TV Star Indian Chief White Eagle, Bill Sweeney the clown-magician ventriloquist with his dummy, Cornelius, and Lester Marshall's famous Punch & Judy puppet show.

Other entertainment includes "Sam The Tuntyp Man" — taking and developing photos of fair visitors — and Jimmy Goss and his 4-piece Dixieland Band. An old-fashioned hand-pump fire wagon will also be on display.

On USS Pratt

Navy Seaman Gene R. Stone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Stone of 501 N. Fourth Ave., Des Plaines, has sailed for the Mediterranean aboard the guided missile frigate USS Pratt, home ported at Mayport, Fla.

He is a 1968 graduate of Maine West High School.

What will she write about?

Her 7-year-old friend, Shari Dahl, 1100 Sharon Ln., remembers "hearing on the news about a girl who was kidnapped by the ice cream man." For a while, she was afraid she, too, might be kidnapped.

What a way to go!

A baseball game needs the ice cream trucks, says Pat Hawkins, 384 Bode Rd. A teammate, 10-year-old Bill Cohen, says he'd "rather have ice cream than shurpees," and when John Kerr declares he lives "so far from the store," he's shouted down. The store is indeed close, but ice cream bought there is not the same for John, who lives at 140 W. Berkeley Ln.

"It's cheaper from the ice cream man," says practical Bob Buchholz, 141 Flagstaff. "He saves a trip to the store."

"Where are you supposed to get ice cream?" his brother Mike adds, pretending to be bewildered. Mike suggests that ice cream stands be built around the village instead.

A FRECKLED Mike Cummings thinks that ice cream trucks should be banned only from those streets where children chase after them. Certain to be included on the "okayed" route would be Mike's home at 161 Des Plaines Ln.

It probably wouldn't be good business, however, if the kids didn't flock to the sound of the trucks' bells.

Mike's face twists into a puzzled disappointment at the cruel realities of life.

The baseball crowd seems to know the arguments for banning the trucks, but Gene Peters, 187 Grissom says "That's their mom's fault" if children get hurt by the trucks.

With sheer indifference his neighbor Gary Brooks says, "If they fall off, it's their own fault."

IF THE ICE CREAM man is an important part of what summer means to the kids they are ready with suggestions of how he could improve his trade.

"Play rock music," says Steve Dwyer, 125 Kungman, whose ecological conscience also tells him the trucks "should have garbage cans on them."

"And the Good Humor man wasn't always in such good humor," Steve adds. "He was always yelling at ya if ya didn't have change."

"It's unfair — they wouldn't let him come around the schools," says 14-year-old John Rodzina. "And he never came around our house. We rode our bikes after him but never caught up."

Hi Ho Humor Away!

AND DID YOU KNOW the ice cream man once "gipped a guy out of 10 cents" (his last dime, no less) and that ice cream men, too, are pushy salesmen. "If he didn't have what you wanted, he kept your money and made you buy something else," one sun-bleached blond said.

"Now there's nothing to spend ice cream money on," says Wayne Reed of Berkeley Lane. And when you're the proverbial growing boy of 13, ice cream is probably a large chunk of your budget.

In general, the village board has been unfair and even undemocratic according to the kids. They should have been consulted about what to do.

Mike Buchholz could have given his oldsters the most original solution to the safety problems created by ice cream trucks. "They ought to make ice cream trucks clear so you can see through them."

FORBIDDEN FRUIT? Frozen delights never grew on trees, but no longer will they come to eager children from the ice cream man following the recent ban of ice trucks in Hoffman Estates. Palatine is considering an ordinance banning ice cream vendors within 500 feet of a Palatine school in session.

Fender Lawyers Ask Board Hearing

Attorneys for John D. Fender filed last Thursday by the School District 25 board of education have requested a full board of education hearing in the case.

Fender, a language arts teacher at Miner Junior High School, was fired for alleged "continuing inability to exercise mature judgment and restraint in dealing with classroom problems," according to the board.

The board also alleged that "he has on four occasions in the current school year struck students notwithstanding administrative admonitions that he refrain from doing so."

According to school district officials, a date for the hearing will probably be set at the July 13 school board meeting. The hearing must be held before Nov. 2 in accordance with the School Code of Illinois.

FENDER, WHO has been a teacher in the district for 10 years, has served as president of the Arlington Heights branch of the United Teachers Association this year. He was also chief negotiator at recently completed teachers' contract talks.

On July 14 Fender will be tried on battery charges in the Arlington Heights branch of the circuit court in the Municipal Building. The charges stem from the alleged beating of one of his students.

Oakton Professor Publishes Articles

An article "Public Interest in the Indian," written by Thomas G. Conway, assistant professor of history at Oakton Community College, was published in the spring issue of "The Indian Historian."

"The Indian Historian" is a publication of the American Indian Historical Society, a national organization founded in 1964 by North American Indians.

Conway, scholar of Indian history, researched historical materials on the Indian and public policy from 1800 through 1840. He also published a second article this spring on "Women's Work in Ireland" in the magazine "Ireland."

Joining the history staff of OCC in August, 1971, Conway has specialized in Irish history and American Indian history of the eastern United States. He is a graduate of Loyola University, where he received his Ph.D. He has worked as a librarian, organizing and cataloging a college library for Loyola University in Rome, Italy.

He has also lectured and written extensively on the American Indian, gardening and woodworking.
